Shanghai, January 8.—That the capture of the British concession at Hankow by the nationalist forces means the early passing of all foreign concessions in China was indicated in authoritative quarters tonight when American officials told The Constitution Press Service correspondent instructions had been received from Washington that the powers would not make further resistance against the Chinese nationalists' drive.

According to an unnamed American official, the powers have decided that continued resistance is futile, making the situation worse and endangering the lives of thousands of helpless foreign residents in the interior of China, hence a decision has finally been reached to submit to the nationalists' demands, making the best deal possible to protect the lives of foreigners, especially women and children.

Apprehension Felt.

Although serious apprehension is felt for the missionaries in interior places, especially the community of 300 Americans located at Changtu, Szechwan province, more than 300 miles from the head of navigation on the Yangtze, no reports were received today of serious trouble endangering their lives.

Although Cantonese revolutionary troops are patrolling the Hankow British concession, the situation is still tense, making it impossible for the foreigners to venture from their houses. All able-bodied men in the British concession are refugeed in the Hong Kong and Shanghai bank building and British Petroleum company building on the waterfront, while Consul H. Goffe is a prisoner in the consulate with Cantonese troops picketing the building, preventing the flying of the British flag. Eugene Chen, foreign minister of the nationalist government, notified the British that the settlement was taken over owing to the failure of the British to render

Going Home

Adieu, sweet friends,—I have waited long
To hear the message that calls me home,
And now it comes like a low, sweet song
Of welcome over the river's foam:
And my heart shall ache and my feet shall roam
No more—no more: I am going home!

Home! where no storm—where no tempest raves,
In the light of the calm, eternal day;
Where no willows weep over lonely graves
And the tears from our eyelids are kissed away.
And my soul shall sigh, and my feet shall roam
No more—no more: I am going home!

Stanton's Death Brings Sympathy From All Classes

Grief Over Passing of Poet-Laureate Expressed in Telegrams From All Sections.

Deep grief throughout the country over the death Friday of Frank L. Stanton, famous Georgia poet, is expressed in numerous messages of condolence and sympathy received in Atlanta Saturday from some of America's foremost editors, publishers, men and women of letters and leaders in many fields of endeavor. These messages came to members of Mr. Stanton's family and to The Constitution, which was served by the poet for nearly 40 years and where his daily column "Just From Georgia," was one of the outstanding features.

In all the messages the grief of the people over the loss of the poet who sang songs which appealed to people of all races and all creeds is expressed in tender and sympathetic words.

Among those who sent messages were Richard H. Edmonds, Baltimore, editor of The Manufacturers Record; William T. DeWart, president of The New York Sun; Dr. Len G. Broughton, noted minister; Robert Cade Wilson, New York; Dean Charles M. Snelling, University of Georgia; Dr. Sam W. Small, Washington correspondent of The Constitution; H. C. White, Athens; L. G. Walker, Chattanooga, Tenn.; J. D. Gortatowsky, New York, former managing editor of The Constitution; Roselle Mercier Montgomery, New York; William Jerome, writer of "Mister Dooley and Bedelia."

Many organizations adopted resolutions of sympathy for the family of Mr. Stanton and expressed appreciation and praise of his work as a poet. Among organizations taking such action was the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers which instructed William E. Arnaud, its Atlanta representative, to send a floral offering.

Will D. Muse, Dr. Wightman F. Melton, Virginia Milmow and Robert Bryan Harrison, Atlanta poets, composed special poems of tribute to the

LOCAL PUBLISHER, JOHN W. YOPP, DIES

Owner of Southern Periodical Publishing Company Succumbs Saturday After Brief Illness.

John W. Yopp, prominent Atlantan, died at a local hospital Saturday night at 8 o'clock after a short illness. Mr. Yopp had been in excellent health until a few days after Christmas when he became ill at his home and was removed to the hospital, where his condition became steadily worse.

Mr. Yopp was owner of the Southern Periodical Publishing company, which firm publishes a number of trade journals, among them being "Refrigeration," "The Southern Coal Journal," "Southern Dairy Products Journal" and "Southern Funeral Director." The refrigeration industry of the southeast held his chief interest and most of his efforts were devoted to the ice and refrigerating industry, where he had many friends.

Mr. Yopp was deeply interested in the politics of Georgia and Atlanta, and he considered it a great privilege to espouse the cause of his political friends. For many years he was secretary of the Georgia Manufacturers association and through his efforts many progressive industries were induced to locate in the south. He frequently appeared before the committees of the Georgia legislature in his effort to secure favorable laws for the industries of the state.

Educated Here.

Mr. Yopp was born in Laurens county, Georgia, and came to Atlanta when he was 14 years of age. After attending the public schools here he entered the employ of the Southern Banker and was associated with Haynes McFadden in the publication of this journal, the outstanding periodical among bankers of the southern states. His rise was rapid and he purchased a controlling interest in "Refrigeration," and later acquired sole ownership of the Southern Periodical Publishing company and since that time had bought other trade journals.

In 1914 Mr. Yopp married Miss Beatrice Lambdin, daughter of the late Judge William Wallace Lambdin, United States judge of the southern district of Georgia.

He was a member of Malta lodge, F. & A. M., Atlanta Lodge of Elks, Capital City club and Atlanta safety council, and was deeply interested in the traffic laws of the city. He was a member of St. Mark's Methodist church, where for many years he was a member of the board of stewards.

He is survived by his wife, two children, Betty and John Yopp, Jr.; his mother, Mrs. Leila B. Yopp, of Atlanta; one brother, Hansley Yopp, of Alamo, and four sisters, Mrs. L. P. Fordham, of Pavo; Mrs. T. Lawson Wolfe, of Orlando, Fla.; Mrs. W. R. Hendricks, Jr., of Birmingham, and Mrs. Herbert W. Atkinson, of East Point.

Funeral Monday.

Funeral services will be held from the residence at 11 o'clock on Monday. The following will act as pallbearers: Gordon Burnett, Wilshire Riley, S. S. Dudley, Fred Sorrow, Frank Ellis, of Augusta; Albert M. Dixon, of Savannah; Ralph Hancock, of Marietta.

Dr. W. R. Hendricks, former pastor of St. Mark's Methodist church, but now a resident of Birmingham, will officiate at the funeral and interment will be at West View.

HAGUE MAY PASS ON MEXICAN OIL AND LAND LAWS

Calles Says He Is Willing To Abide by Judgment If Necessary To Avert "Still Greater Menace."

Mexico City, January 8.—(AP)—Mexico would be willing to submit its new petroleum and alien land law differences with the United States to The Hague tribunal, although that would endanger Mexican sovereignty if such admission to The Hague were the only way of avoiding a still greater menace to Mexico.

President Calles made this declaration today to a group of visitors from the United States headed by Hubert C. Herring, who are studying the relations between Mexico and the United States. The Americans who came here to get first-hand information on Mexican-American relations comprise writers, ministers of various religions, professional and business men and social workers.

The president asserted that withdrawal by the United States of recognition of his government would certainly cause an immediate revolution in Mexico and would be interpreted by the enemies of the Mexican government as an encouragement of such revolution.

Fictitious Issue Charged.

He contended that the issue between the United States and Mexico regarding the petroleum question was a false and fictitious issue, because the oil interests were not deprived of any right, but on the contrary, their subsoil rights acquired before 1917 could be extended for 50 years by reason of the new concessions and the law provides that at the end of 50 years they might be extended for another 30 years. Thus all the rights of which oil men complained they were deprived were, in fact, preserved for 80 years, he said. "Is not the period of 80 years enough time in which to get out all the oil," the president asked.

"Has anybody ever heard of an oil well lasting 80 years?"

Senor Calles argued that there were no real differences between the people of Mexico and the people of the United States, the only differences between the people of Mexico and a small group of American capitalists, who were "attempting to influence the state department to use force against Mexico in their favor."

Denies Bolshevism.

Declaring that Mexico was not bolshevik and that the Mexican government was not bolshevik, he expressed doubt that the members of the government could even define bolshevism, although they were accused of being bolshevist. The Mexican government's program could not be described as that of any political or scientific school or theory. It was simply Mexican. It was itself; it was born of Mexico's own peculiar problems and was not a program borrowed from anywhere outside.

President Calles received his visitors at the national palace. He sat in the reception chamber answering questions offhand as his visitors asked them.

Mr. Herring, who is head of the social relations department of the Congregational churches of the United States, addressing the president, explained that the group which had called on him had sought to understand Mexico in human terms, to understand its rebirth of national pride, to appreciate the spiritual appeal of Mexican culture. He referred to the advantage which would accrue to the

DOZEN HOLDUPS STAGED BY PAIR

Robberies Reported in Rapid Succession Saturday Night—Two Armed Negroes Sought.

Driving alongside their victims at advantageous points on darkened streets, two armed negroes, using a light cut-down roadster, Saturday night staged 12 holdups within the space of several hours in various parts of the city, and, after obtaining an aggregate haul of approximately $129 in cash, a small amount of jewelry and other valuables, thwarted attempts of a squad of police officers to apprehend them.

Shortly after 10 o'clock telephone calls were received at police headquarters at almost regular intervals and from districts which designated that the raiders were following a premeditated route in their systematic holdup of late pedestrians.

W. W. Nunnally, of 1119 Sells avenue, was one of the first victims. He reported that the negroes leaped from the machine and after relieving him of $3 and a watch, drove off rapidly. He gave the license number of the car to police.

Husband Won By Heiress Of Flagler

Bridegroom Refuses to Heed Opposition of His Mother.

New York, January 8.—The event shrouded in secrecy, Mrs. Lawrence Lewis, the former Louise Wise, niece of Henry M. Flagler's second wife and heiress to the huge Flagler fortune, was married today in her suite at the Vanderbilt hotel to Hugh R. Lewis, of Bear Creek, Pa. A few hours later, locked in their suite and refusing to see reporters, the couple sailed for Europe on the Italian-American Shipping corporation liner Duilio.

Only a few friends of the couple attended the ceremony, and so complete were precautions against publicity that not even the hotel management was taken into the confidence of the principals.

A private detective was stationed at the door of the suite to keep out unwelcome visiors. Friends of the couple said that the mother of the bridegroom, Mrs. Albert Lewis, of Bear Creek, Pa., had vainly tried to prevent it.

The bride was Miss Louise Wise, niece of Mrs. Mary Lily Flagler Bingham. It was from Mrs. Bingham that the bride inherited about $60,000,000, or the bulk of the Flagler estate.

Her first husband was Lawrence Lewis. She was divorced from him at St. Augustine, Fla., early last year and received the custody of her two children, Lawrence Lewis, Jr., and Mary Lily Flagler Lewis.

Lewis came here from his home in Bear Creek several weeks ago, stopping at the Vanderbilt. Yesterday his mother came here to prevent his marriage to Mrs. Lewis, but she was unsuccessful. The marriage license was issued at the municipal building here December 6. Mrs. Lewis gave her age as 34, and Lewis his as 29.

ORMISTON PLANS TO MAKE PLEA OF "FRAME-UP"

Los Angeles, January 8.—Kenneth Ormiston is ready to prove that he has been the victim of "frame-up" in connection with the Aimee Semple McPherson kidnaping case.

The radio man who expects to be arraigned Monday on a conspiracy charge announced tonight that he would offer a mass of evidence, consisting of technicalities and witnesses, to prove his "frame-up" charges.

"If the state doesn't dismiss the case," he said, "I expected to prove that the conspiracy charges against both me and Mrs. McPherson are foundationless and that we are both victims of 'plants.'"

Ormiston would not disclose the nature of what he would show. "I'm not showing my cards yet, but I will Monday," he said. "I believe I'm holding aces."

The radio man is accused of being the evangelist's companion on a love tryst at Carmel-By-the-Sea.

IMMEDIATE STRIKE IS NOT IMMINENT,

Even If Trainmen Vote To Strike, Walkout Will Not Be Called at Once, Spokesman States.

Savannah, Ga., January 8.—(AP)—Should the trainmen, baggagemasters, yardmen and switchmen of 22 southeastern railroads now casting a strike ballot decide on a strike unless adjustments are made in their wages, it will not mean that a walkout will be called immediately, L. E. Sheppard, national president Order of Railway Conductors, said here today.

As soon as the vote is received and compiled another conference will be called with the railroads and further negotiations entered into for the purpose of arriving at some amicable settlement, he stated.

The railroad employees are asking for a general increase in wages of 7 1-2 per cent, similar to that recently granted by the railroads in the eastern division, the national conductors' president stated. The eastern division comprises that section of the country north of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi rivers. The territory west of the Mississippi river is known as the western division.

Negotiations Undertaken.

Sheppard went into some details as to the negotiations that have been undertaken during the past year for a gradual increase in the wages of the employees mentioned. Early last year he stated the matter of an increase in wages amounting to approximately $1 a day was taken up with railroad officials of the southeastern division. No agreement could be reached. The same proposition was put before the roads in the other two divisions, with the same results.

Finally, the eastern division roads agreed to arbitrate the matter and although the roads officials did not like to arbitrate as those called in from the outside do not generally understand the situation, the question finally went to arbitration, with the result that a compromise was effected which gave the men an average increase of from 40 cents to 50 cents per day, Mr. Sheppard said.

As soon as a satisfactory adjustment had been made in the east the officials of the employees' organizations asked that the same scale be put into effect in the southeastern territory. This was flatly refused, Sheppard declared, and on the other hand the railroads submitted a counter proposition which demanded that the organizations give up some of their basic rules, which would have the effect of decreasing the pay of the employees in many instances, Sheppard concluded.

Sheppard stated that he will move his offices to Savannah about the middle of February and will spend a month or six weeks here in the interest of the home for aged conductors to be built on Oatland island.

COOLIDGE POLICY IN LATIN AMERICA HIT IN SPEECHES

"We Are Acting Bully Towards Smaller Countries," General Wheeler Tells Colleagues.

NICARAGUAN WAR SEEN BY HEFLIN

"United States Is Deliberately Driving Toward Conflict With Mexico," Huddleston Charges.

BY ALFRED P. RECK,
United News Staff Correspondent.

Washington, January 8.—War clouds hung low over the capitol dome today and the ominous rumble reechoed through the halls of congress.

Two senators, Heflin, Alabama, democrat, and Wheeler, Montana, democrat, and Representative Huddleston, Alabama, democrat, attacked the administration's Latin-American policy as tending towards conflict with friendly nations.

America is engaging in war-like action at the suggestion of "big interests," the members charged.

"We are acting the bully towards smaller countries," Wheeler said.

Threats of War.

"The United States is driving deliberately towards war with Mexico," Huddleston declared.

"The people of the United States may wake up some morning and find themselves in a war with Nicaragua," Senator Heflin told the senate.

Meanwhile, as war warnings were being sounded in the capitol, American marines a few thousand miles away were making themselves comfortable at Managua, the seat of the Nicaraguan government, ostensibly for the "protection of American lives and property."

And further north Arthur Schoenfield, counselor for the United States embassy in Mexico City, was speeding to Washington, apparently for the innocent task of serving on the state department's board of review, and more than a dozen business-like American war vessels were standing by or en route to the Caribbean sea with the entire Atlantic scouting fleet steaming to their winter maneuver base at Guantanamo, Cuba, within easy sailing distance of the trouble zone.

While Mars stood thundering at America's back door, Secretary of State Kellogg was forced to keep a close eye on the Chinese situation, which is moving rapidly towards a crisis. Admiral Williams, commander of the Asiatic fleet at Manila, the cruiser Pittsburgh and all available destroyers were ordered to rush to Shanghai. At Hankow, Consul General Lockhart described the situation as critical with all American women

Wars and Rumors of Wars

When the great world war came to an end they told us there never would be any more war; but there is a good-sized scrap going on in China, one in Nicaragua, and Uncle Sam has a finger in both. On top of that it looks like somebody was trying to get us mixed up in Mexico.

Well, as we can't help it in any way, we'll just read about it and go on with our own fight—that of making receipts cover expenditures.

The merchants of Atlanta are doing a lot to help us in this fight, and we would be derelict in our duty if we failed to call to your attention the assistance that is offered by their advertisements in this issue of The Constitution.

Read every advertisement carefully. You will find something you want or need offered at a price that is a real money-saving, and if you start out early in this year to let Constitution advertisements save you money, you will be ahead of the game at the end of the year.

Society Girl Badly Hurt

:: MISS MARY INMAN PEARCE ACCIDENT VICTIM ::

When Thrown by Horse

Miss Mary Inman Pearce, popular young society girl, was seriously injured in a fall from her horse Saturday morning while she and friends were horseback riding on Powers Ferry road.

Miss Pearce was taken to Davis-Fischer sanitarium, where her condition was pronounced as serious, but not critical. She has a fractured skull and possible internal injuries. Although her pulse and general condition were announced as "good" Saturday night, she was not wholly conscious at a late hour.

According to information given members of the family Saturday afternoon concerning the accident Miss Natalie De Golian, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. De Golian, of Howell Mill road, also was thrown from her horse but received only minor bruises.

The two girls were riding about 8 miles from the city just before noon. As they approached the pavement from the dirt road both horses stumbled and fell, throwing their riders violently to the ground.

Miss Pearce's head struck the edge of the pavement, causing the fracture. Her companion did not fall on the pavement and was only slightly bruised, it was learned.

Horses ridden by Miss Pearce and Miss De Golian slipped and fell as they drew up on the pavement. Both young women were thrown, Miss Pearce's head striking the pavement.

Although Miss De Golian received only minor injuries, she was confined to her bed Saturday after the accident, suffering from shock.

Richard De Golian also was with his sister and Miss Pearce at the time but the horse he was riding did not fall. He hastily summoned help and Miss Pearce was carried to a nearby farmhouse where a physician was called and she was given first aid, later being taken to the sanitarium.

Miss Pearce is the daughter of Colonel and Mrs. E. D. Pearce, of Andrews drive, and is a popular member of Atlanta's younger society contingent. She is a member of the Black Cats, an exclusive society club. She is a graduate of Washington seminary and Gunston hall, Washington, D. C.

History's Greatest Tax Suit Against Couzens To Tell Tale of Fabulous Riches

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Detroit, January 8.—When James Couzens, United States senator from Michigan and the wealthiest man in the senate started probing deeply into the affairs of the internal revenue department, he stirred up some trouble for himself. Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, instituted a probe of Couzens' own income tax returns. As a result, the nation is likely to be treated to the greatest tax suit in history, which opens in Detroit Tuesday.

Incidentally, the people of the country will learn many of the details of the Ford Motor company, and the phenomenal development that made Henry Ford the wealthiest man in the world. If the attorneys who are to appear in the case are reliable, then Wall street, for many years puzzled as to "how Henry did it" also will learn how this manufacturer, alone in the history of the country, was able to amass a fortune without any aid from the street.

The gentlemen who lend money, and those who gamble in futures on the stock exchange, will be given great lessons in financing. They will know when the trial is ended how Henry Ford was able to run $28,000, the original and only money ever invested in the Ford Motor company, to more than $1,000,000,000 in assets, and how he has built up an organization that sells its products to every known part of the world.

Uncle Sam's Interest.

Uncle Sam expects to reap $34,000,000 plus as a result of the suit. Because of the enormity of the sum involved the attorneys for Senator Couzens and the other litigants, all original stock holders in the Ford company, have been careful not to have the case go before a jury. The average juror would be too much inclined to believe his taxes might be reduced if the money remained in the treasury of the United States to even vote to take it away from that treasury.

For that reason, the attorneys, and they include Charles Evans Hughes, former justice of the supreme court of the United States, and John W. Davis, former candidate for president, have chosen to try the case before the United States court of tax appeals.

If Senator Couzens and his associates should lose in the initial legal skirmish, they will carry the case to the court of appeals at Cincinnati, and from there to the United States supreme court, if necessary.

"But we will never go to a jury," chorus the attorneys.

Collections in 1919.

The federal government has already collected millions of dollars from the nine persons now being sued. This tax was collected when the original stockholders of the Ford Motor company sold their shares to Henry Ford in 1919. The government at that time appraised the stock of the Ford company at $9,489.34 a share. These shares originally sold at $100 each, and Henry Ford found it a difficult task to find purchasers. Incidentally they paid back in dividends 100 per cent in one year.

Senator Couzens is the defendant who will receive the geratest share of publicity. This is due to his controversy with Secretary Mellon. Eight others are involved, and each of them is worth a feature story from the viewpoint of the manner in which they made their fortune.

Here are the figures which tell the story of how much additional tax the government expects to get from the suit:

Senator James Couzens	$10,909,588.08
John W. Anderson	1,438,826.35
David Gray	2,277,079.88
Estate of Phil W. Gray	2,277,079.88
Estate of John F. Dodge	5,004,398.20
Horace H. Rackham	5,004,398.20
Paul R. Gray	2,277,079.88
Mrs. Rosetta V. Hauss	84,404.83
Total	$34,277,253.48

When you glance over these figures you must remember they are merely a part of the taxes alleged to be due to the government from the sale of the stock of the Ford Motor company. It will also be interesting to remember that in not a single instance did any of the above litigants invest more than $10,000 in the Ford Motor company. John Gray, father of the three Grays now being sued, invested $10,000, but didn't think the stock would amount to anything, and wouldn't advise anybody to invest in it.

Horace Rackham and the two Dodges invested, $5,000 each, while the others invested lesser sums.

How Couzens Won.

Albert Strelow, one of the latter managed to get together $5,000, which he invested in "the works." When Couzens offered him $25,000 for his stock he thought the bargain a good one, and accepted. This money he soon lost in a British Columbia gold mine, and a few months later was in the line at the Ford company with other men seeking employment. Had he held his stock, Henry Ford would have paid him $5,000,000 for it in 1912, in addition to several fortunes in dividends before that time.

Senator Couzens, whose rise to fame and fortune is probably unequalled by any other man in the country's history, invested $1,500 in the Ford Motor company. He also put up for shares a $1,000 note, which was retired with dividends during the first few months of the operation of the company.

But Couzens stuck with the Ford company longer than any of the other original stockholders, and as a result he received a larger sum than any of his colleagues. He is generally conceded to be one of the men that piloted the firm through its early stages. He finally sold his 2,180 shares in 1919 to Henry Ford, and received for it $28,340,000. He had also collected in dividends in excess of $10,000,000 on his original $1,500.

The Dodge brothers also remained until 1919, along with the other stockholders, and the millions that these brothers obtained from their investment of $5,000 would be difficult to tabulate. Both of them are now dead, and Mrs. John F. Dodge (Mrs. Alfred G. Wilson) is said to be the richest woman in the world today.

The story of Mrs. Rosetta Hauss' fortune, which resulted from a $100 investment, has no parallel in history. She is the sister of Senator Couzens. Couzens borrowed $100 from Mrs. Hauss back in 1903, which he invested along with his own money in what was then regarded as "Hank Ford's wild dream." Mrs. Hauss clung to her share of stock, accepting the stock dividends as they came along, and watching her fortune grow. She sold out when her brother relinquished his holdings in the Ford Motor company, and as a result of the sale she is now a party to Mr. Mellon's suit. Uncle sam wants $84,404.83 of her money—part earnings of the original $100.

Home of the Friendless To Erect New Quarters

Gradual enlargement of the scope of its work for the past 40 years has brought the Home of the Friendless and Industrial school to rank as one of the foremost charitable organizations in the city and plans are being perfected to erect a new home on Linwood avenue for unfortunate children.

Sketches for the new grounds and three buildings, which will be fireproof, have been drawn and presented to Mrs. W. L. Champion. The campaign soon will be launched to build three modest structures in a beautiful wooded tract which was purchased by the organization some time ago.

At present the building on Highland avenue, which has been in use for years, is not sufficient to care for the large number of cases and is wholly inadequate for the needs of the organization, officials say.

The first building will care for about 300 children, which is three times the number now being cared for. The new buildings will be placed on a street little used and give more grounds for the children.

The institution was founded in 1888. Since that time it has greatly outgrown its humble beginning. It was the first charitable organization in Atlanta.

The home for the friendless is not an orphanage, but offers temporary help to any child in trouble. Girls of any age and boys under 12 years of age are admitted. Cases may be admitted by the president, juvenile court, Family Welfare society and the city warden. The object of the work is to restore the child to its own people or to find relatives who will come to the aid of the child.

Plans for the new buildings include a cottage for the boys, a cottage for the girls and an administration building. It will be situated on an eight-acre tract that will give full facilities for open air exercise for the children.

Definite plans for the campaign for funds for the new building have not been completed but members of the organization, with the Kiwanis club, which sponsors the work, will outline the program, which is to open soon.

Indian Princess Of Chicago Dies At Home on River

Chicago, January 8.—(AP)—Mrs. Mary Robinson Rager, Indian princess, known as "The Heiress of Chicago," died today at her home on the bank of the Des Plaines river, aged somewhere between 90 and 100 years.

She was the daughter of the Indian chief, Alexander Robinson, of Chee-Chu-Pin-Quay, who was chief of three tribes, Pottowatamies, Chippewas and Ottawas, and who saved Chicago's pioneer white family, that of John Kinzie, after the Fort Dearborn massacre. The chief died at the age of 110.

In a little home on the edge of the county forest preserve, given her for her lifetime by the county board, Mrs. Rager died. She also still retained 10 acres of land remaining to her under the treaty of Prairie Du Chien of 1829.

Alongside her home is the graveyard where her father, the chief, and his wife was buried. There she, too, will rest.

ROOSTER IS ROWDY

Sends Atlantan to Hospital for Repairs.

When W. C. Williams, 42, or 520 Decatur street, walked into Grady hospital Saturday afternoon he presented every appearance of having been engaged in a rooster fight. In fact, he admitted as much to the doctor who dressed the wounds on each hand. "How were you hurt?" he was asked.

"A rooster spurred me," Williams replied. The wounds were cleansed and bandaged and Williams dismissed.

Mrs. Fred Thompson, 20, of 270 Capitol avenue, was treated at Grady hospital Saturday afternoon for iodine poisoning, according to hospital reports.

Mrs. Thompson did not tell doctors how the poisoning occurred.

PLANS TO HANDLE PEACH CROP MADE

Macon, Ga., January 8.—(AP)—As a means of controlling the 1927 peach crop an organization known as the Georgia Peach Growers' and marketing agencies is being organized to fix the basis for handling the 1927 crop to the mutual advantage of growers and shippers and to penalize those who violate its rulings.

Growers who receive the sanction of the organization will have preferential attention from marketing agencies and those who violate its rulings will be fined $1,000, it was announced here today in the tentative proposal of the committee representing peach growers and state marketing agencies which has been working on the question of how to handle the coming peach crop.

The full plans of the committee call for the destruction of hopelessly diseased trees, heavy pruning and thinning, control of the size of peaches shipped and conspicuous marking of grade and quality of shipment made.

Agreement has already been obtained from the United States government for cooperation through the laboratory at Fort Valley in finding and marking diseased trees so that growers may remove them, the committee undertook to secure an appropriation of $15,000 for the expense of this work.

A state standardization and marketing law is being drafted and will be introduced at the forthcoming session of the legislature. "Judging by the attitude of the peach growers throughout the state," W. G. Bewley, chairman of the committee said, "the bill will be favorably acted upon as it appears that fully 75 per cent of the peach growers are in favor of such a law.

"The general committee has received 100 per cent cooperation so far from the distributors and with the backing of the exchange the committee should be able to line up practically all of the peach growers in carrying out plans for curtailment of the 1927 crop, improving the standard of quality and generally improving marketing conditions.

"Production of peach by-products will be the subject of a meeting in February at which a representative of the bureau of plant industry of the government will show the results of research with Georgia peaches during the past three years. The meeting will be called of all interested in production and marketing by-products."

Cross, Feverish Child is Bilious or Constipated

Look, Mother! See if tongue is coated or stomach sour

"California Fig Syrup" can't harm tender stomach, bowels

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Fig Syrup," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish, or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless, "fruity laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When the little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, sold by "California Fig Syrup Company."—(adv.)

INTEREST IN PAINE LIBRARY INCREASES

Augusta, Ga., January 8.—(Special.) Reports from the library campaign of Paine college, a Methodist institution for the education of negroes, will mark Founder's day celebration here February 11. President Ray S. Tomlin said the project to erect a suitable library building with fireproof provision for the personal library of the late Dr. George Williams Walker, founder and president of the college for 26 years, is gaining favor throughout the bounds of the Southern Methodist and colored Methodist denominations.

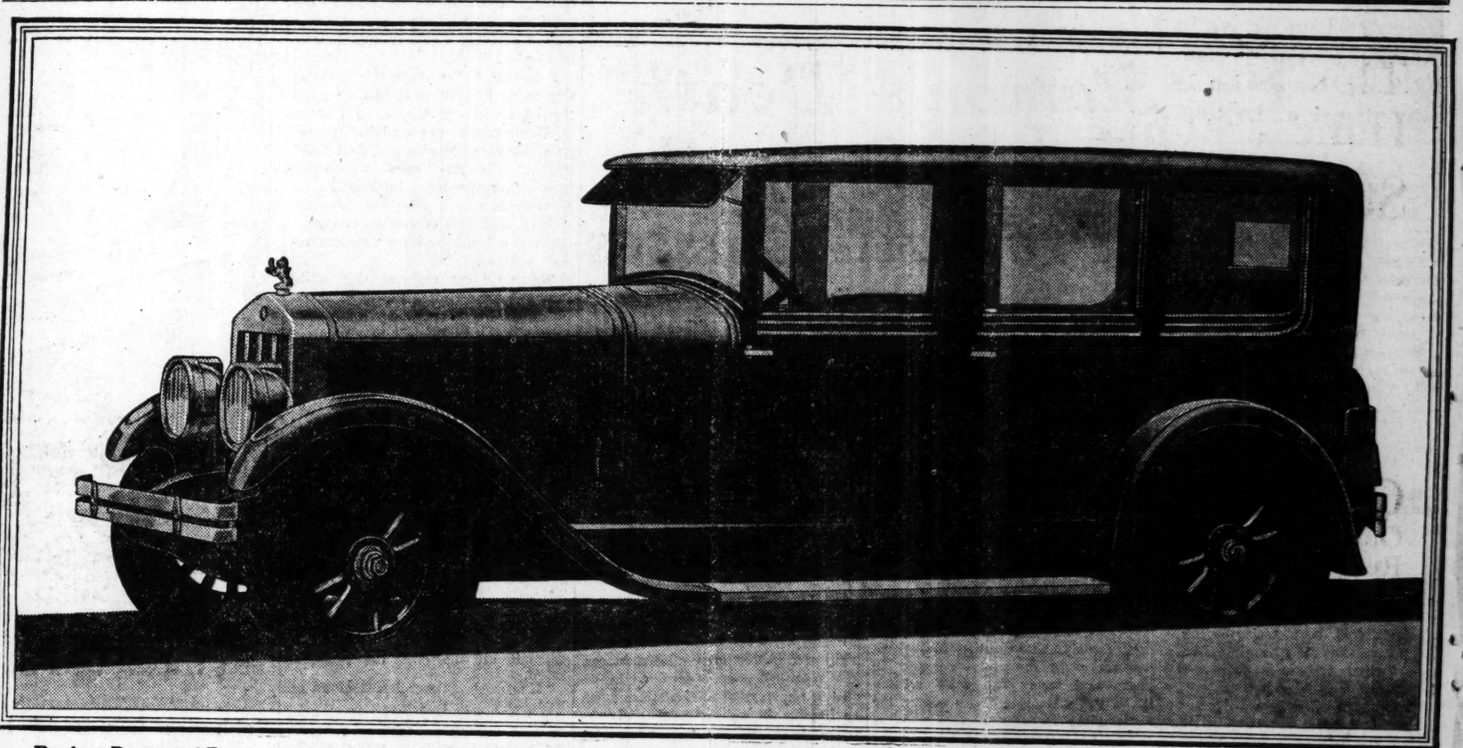

Paine college, through Dr. J. M. Perry, home mission secretary, M. E. church, south, has been the beneficiary of special efforts of the Southern Methodist church for the advancement of the institution. Recently additional land has been purchased by the Southern Methodist mission board and two large brick buildings have been erected, together with other improvements. Bennett Hall, a dormitory for girls erected by the woman's department of the board of missions, honors the life and work of the late Miss Belle H. Bennett, noted leader of Southern Methodist women.

The campaign for the library building fund is in progress among interested white friends and alumni of the school all over the country. Results of the campaign will be made known February 11, the birthday anniversary of the late President Walker, which is observed annually by the college as Founder's day. It is expected that a large number of laymen of the Southern Methodist church will be present for the occasion.

Upon the completion of the library building Mrs. Walker has promised to turn over to the college the fine personal library of the late Dr. Walker, it was stated.

A. J. ELLIOTT ASSUMES OFFICE TUESDAY NIGHT

A. J. Elliott, of Buckalew and Elliott, will be installed as president of the Atlanta Retail Food Dealers association which claims to be one of the oldest commercial and civic organizations in the state, at the annual meeting to be held Tuesday night at 8 o'clock in the chamber of commerce assembly hall.

Other officers to be installed are R. I. Barge, Eugene Diamond, of the Forrest Avenue grocery, and S. D. Mullinaux, of the Atwood grocery, all elected as vice presidents last week; J. H. Merritt, past president, and the reelected officers, M. Weinberg, treasurer; Rev. F. L. Church, chaplain and R. V. Bergen, secretary.

Reports to be made at the meeting by the chairmen of the various committees will show 1926 to have been one of the banner years in the history of the organization, it is declared. A board of directors of 30 members will be elected at the meeting.

Plans for the new year include the adoption of more drastic regulations to protect the retailers against promiscuous contributions and illegitimate advertising; the adoption of an extensive program to develop merchandising ability and to correct methods and practices that are unfair, unethical or harmful to good merchandising.

Schools for grocers and their employees are planned to start within the next 30 days and will be conducted according to the plans in all sections of the city. A large gathering of members is expected at the meeting Tuesday night and all dealers in food are invited to attend.

Habeas corpus proceedings brought by Kong Ting, former inmate of the Atlanta federal penitentiary, to prevent his deportation by immigration inspectors, will be heard Monday morning in United States district court.

Ting was released Saturday from the penitentiary after serving a sentence on conspiracy charges, and was taken into the custody of immigration officials for deportation to China.

GEORGE W. ROBINS TO BE LAID TO REST

Funeral services for George W. Robins, 69, pioneer citizen of Fulton county, who died suddenly Saturday morning at his home, 715 South Church street, East Point, will be held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from East Point Methodist church. The Rev. E. W. Jones, the Rev. J. S. Strickland, the Rev. F. A. S. Wagner and the Rev. H. M. Quillian will officiate. Interment will be in Mount Gilead cemetery.

Mr. Robins had been in failing health for the past 18 months. He had been walking about the house only a few minutes before his body was found on the bathroom floor, members of his family said.

He was a member of one of the oldest families in Fulton county, having been born and reared on a farm near Ben Hill. He was for a number of years connected with the Georgia Railway and Power company, but had been unable to work for more than a year.

He is survived by his wife; five daughters, Mrs. W. D. Fuller, Mrs. W. F. Hobbs, Mrs. R. W. Mason, Mrs. J. T. Yarbrough and Mrs. Louise Greer, of Birmingham, Ala., and a son, Roy Robbins, of Birmingham. A. C. Hemperly & Son in charge.

TITLED BRITISH ADVERTISING MAN TO SPEAK HERE

One of the most notable figures in the world of modern business administration and the science of advertising will be an Atlanta visitor early in April, in the person of Sir Charles Higham, former member of the British parliament, internationally famous advertising expert, and authoritative writer on subjects of business.

Sir Charles is the author of a number of books regarded as standard treatises on the science of business, including "Looking Forward," "Scientific Distribution" and "Advertising, Its Use and Abuse." A member of the British parliament from 1918 to 1922, he was knighted by King George in 1921 in reward for his services in parliament and as the writer of the British government's appeal for men and money during the world war.

Atlanta's prospective visitor is widely known among the leaders off the American advertising profession by reason of his appearance before the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World in Milwaukee in 1922, when, as representative of the late Lord Northcliffe, he induced the organization to select London for its convention of 1924.

The mission of Sir Charles to the United States upon this occasion is in the interests of tea growers of India, and contemplates the expenditure of an advertising fund of millions in America. In Atlanta, the only southern city to be visited, Sir Charles will be the guest of F. A. Wilson-Lawrenson, publisher of The Atlanta Georgian and Sunday American, his personal friend for years.

20 CAR PASSENGERS HURT IN COLLISION OF TWO TROLLEYS

O. F. Trotter, motorman on the River street car line, was slightly injured and 20 persons on the car were shaken up in a collision between two cars about three miles from the city early Saturday morning.

The accident occurred on a stretch of single track on the line and evidently was caused by a mistake in signals by one of the motorman, power company officials stated. Both cars were badly damaged.

Trotter received cuts and bruises about the legs. An investigation was bgun immediately to determine the cause of the accident.

Major Heidner will talk on organization of the ground as applied to the smaller infantry units, and the support of other arms. The meeting will be conducted in the chamber of commerce building at 7:30.

This school was inaugurated last November, with an attendance of approximately 150 officers and has been increasing in popularity with every season. The meetings are open to army men and civilians.

ATLANTA WOMAN SEEKS TO COLLECT ALIMONY

Charging that her former husband, Alex C. Werber owed her $450 in accrued alimony, Mrs. Mary Lee Rice has again appealed to the courts for aid.

During the Yuletide season Mrs. Rice recognized Mr. Werber on the streets of the city and immediately secured the services of a Fulton superior court deputy, who placed the former husband under arrest. Taken before Judge John D. Humphries, Mr. Werber was released on the promise to appear at a hearing before Judge Edgar E. Pomeroy. No definite date was set for the hearing.

Harry M. Root Affiliated With Sophie Mae Company

Harry M. Root, formerly of Buffalo, N. Y., has been elected treasurer of the Sophie Mae Candy corporation and will take up his new duties at once, according to announcement made Saturday by President J. B. Coppedge.

"We are delighted to have such a man as Mr. Root associated with us," stated Mr. Coppedge. "He brings to Atlanta a broad experience in national business matters and we consider it a compliment to our business that he saw fit to acquire stock in our company and become one of our officers."

Well-Known Here.

Mr. Root came to Atlanta in April, 1925, as comptroller of the Southern Baking company. Stating that he planned to spend the balance of his days in Atlanta, he purchased a home on West Andrews drive and forthwith plunged into the midst of the city's activities. He served the Civitan club as president during 1926, having just retired from that office. In addition he is a member of the Atlanta Athletic club, the Capital City club, the Atlanta consistory of the Masonic organization, Yaarab temple and Yaarab chanters, is on the board of directors of the Atlanta Boy Scouts and a member of the Court of Honor, as well as a member of the board of directors of the Columbia Building and Loan association, and an officer in the Peachtree Road Presbyterian church. Mr. Root is a graduate of Colgate university where he was elected to the Phi Beta Kappa. He holds an individual membership in the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

The inclusion of Mr. Root in the company is the first step in a great expansion program of the Sophie Mae Candy corporation, according to President Coppedge.

"We began business in Atlanta just nine years ago with one retail outlet," he said. "Today we have spread our business over 36 states, and Sophie Mae candies are handled by over 6,000 dealers. We are now in position to broaden the scope of our activities, and the addition to our organization of Mr. Root, with his former experience in large affairs, who has joined us after a close study of our past record and a conservative estimate of the great possibilities that are before us, is concrete evidence that Sophie Mae candies are becoming a national institution.

Launching Campaign.

"We are now conducting an extensive forward program, including the introduction of our chocolate to Atlanta. Dealers are being added here and a comprehensive newspaper advertising campaign will be conducted to bring our chocolates to the attention of the public," added Mr. Coppedge.

The Sophie Mae Candy corporation was started by Mr. Coppedge in a small way and has grown to large proportions during the last nine years. It operates in a modern plant, known as the Sunshine factory, which the firm owns outright. When the business was organized, Mr. Coppedge stated that he would manufacture only the most delicious candies; that he would use only fresh fruit flavors, and that he would always sell these high-grade candies at as low a price as would be consistent with sound business judgment. "The result is," asserts Mr. Coppedge, "that we are today supplying the public with the highest grade chocolates for about one-third less than they have been accustomer to pay." And this policy is doubtless responsible for the remarkable success which has been achieved.

Roy Chapman Andrews, Well-Known Explorer, To Lecture at Emory

Emory University, Ga., January 8. (Special.)—The Student Lecture association of Emory University has arranged for a lecture by Roy Chapman Andrews, noted hunter, explorer and collector of natural history, for January 14 at 4:30 p. m. Mr. Andrews has just returned from his third expedition into the Gobi desert in the heart of Mongolia, bringing with him 40 dinosaur eggs said to have been laid 10,000,000 years ago, as well as skulls of six new types of mammals which lived contemporaneously with the dinosaurs, and working tools of ancient stone age people that once lived in the desert.

Mr. Andrews' finding of the dinosaur eggs is one of the important scientific achievements of the age, and it is considered fortunate that Atlanta and Emory students will be permitted to hear him in the short lecture tour that he will make.

His subjects for this lecture will be "Lifting the Veil from Mysterious Mongolia."

BRIDGE COMMITTEE HAS BEGUN STUDY OF VIADUCT STATUS

William B. Hartsfield, chairman of the 1927 bridge committee of the city council, announced Saturday that the members of the committee have begun a comprehensive study of the viaduct situation in Atlanta preparatory to the launching of construction on the two projects at Central avenue and Pryor street as soon as funds are available from the $8,000,000 bond issue.

Mr. Hartsfield declared that members of the committee had expressed themselves as of the opinion that no actual conference between city and railroad officials should be held until adjudication of the case involving the viaducts, now pending, is heard in the circuit court of appeals at New Orleans beginning January 26.

He further stated that inasmuch as the whole program hinges upon this case, the committee feels that the decision should be handed down before definite action is taken.

AMERICA NEAR WAR, SAY CONGRESSMEN

Denounces Coolidge Policy.

In his speech from the floor of the house, Representative Huddleston was bitter in his denunciation of the administration policy, and demanded that President Coolidge and Secretary Kellogg join "the first batch of troops sent to Mexico" in case of war.

"I am not willing that a single American boy shall be sent to Mexico to risk his life so that the oil companies may continue to pay dividends," he declared.

"If we do not want war the time to speak is now," Huddleston continued. "If we won't get up here and voice our objections against it we had better make way for someone else to take our places in this great congress.

"I am not going to sit here and allow my country to be jockeyed into a position which cannot be received with honor and dignity and which may lead us into war. I protest against the policy of the administration. Only 1 per cent of our people favor war with Mexico and I wonder if the 99 per cent are going to be hippodromed into war at the shoutings of the oil interests."

Aid for Mexico.

Huddleston declared that America should give all of its attention to aid in establishing Mexico as a solidified nation instead of attempting to provoke a war with her.

"We should extend her our help; we should use our influence to put her on her feet and stop being a big bully," he emphasized.

If we go to war with Mexico it would place that country in a much stronger position with Central American republics, Huddleston added.

Sending of troops to Nicaragua was branded by the Alabama congressman as a move to protect the "tool of American bankers, President Diaz."

In just as bitter a vein, Senator Heflin opened his attack in the senate, saying that the state department's policy is aimed at protection of financial concessions held by Americans in Nicaragua and Mexico.

"I don't intend to fight any wars for those speculative interests," he declared.

Form Protectorate.

"Are we going to use marines to protect oil companies of Doheny and Sinclair and the Standard Oil?" Heflin asked. "Are we going to form protectorates for them in foreign lands?"

It is not right to thrust the United States into war, the Alabama senator declared.

"Let the president go slow. We owe more to our country than to any oil interest.

"It is not right that we slip up on the American people with a war.

"If we have to have a war, take the people into confidence and take congress, which declares war, into confidence," Heflin pleaded.

"The American people ought not to be played with. It is a serious, solemn thing to send a young man to the battlefield to sacrifice his life."

Wheeler Joins Colleague.

Senator Wheeler joined his colleague in denouncing the Latin-American policy.

"If there was a bad government in Great Britain, should we land American marines in Liverpool, Belfast or London?" he asked.

"Did we land marines in Italy when Mussolini overthrew the government there? Did we dare land marines in Russia during the revolution there?

"We are simply bullying the Nicaraguan people because it is a small nation and because the moneyed interests have demanded that we intervene in behalf of a man who holds office there in violation of the constitution," Wheeler declared.

Defends Coolidge Policy.

Senators Edge, New Jersey, republican, and Bingham, Connecticut, republican, both defended the Coolidge policy and contended this government was acting in accord with the Monroe doctrine and protecting American lives and property.

"Doesn't the senator admit that there is a war in Nicaragua?" Edge asked.

"Yes," Wheeler replied, "and there was war here when the south rebelled but would we have permitted Great Britain to send marines over here to esablish neutral zones?"

Just before the house closed its session today Huddleston offered a resolution, seeking to place the house on record as opposing the administration's Nicaraguan-Mexican policies and asking withdrawal of troops from Nicaragua. According to the resolution the policies "hazard the peace between our country and our sister republics."

DIAZ SAYS LIBERALS MUST ACT IN HURRY.

BY GERALD MARTIN.

(Copyright, 1927, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Managua, Nicaragua, January 8.—Unless Dr. Sacasa, the Liberal chiefs, acts quickly, all the offers of cooperation made by the Diaz administration are withdrawn was the statement by Adolfo Diaz this afternoon.

The conservative president intimated that previous offers to the former vice president and opposition leader, offering minority representation in the cabinet, and other suggestions for bringing about national peace, held good no longer. President Diaz feels that with the arrival of United States naval forces, the rising of the embargo on arms sent to the Diaz forces and closing down of shipments to Dr. Sacasa's rebels, and with the special service squadron strengthened by six war ships, together with 600 marines, means play ball or get off the field.

A big shipment of arms from New York is coming to the Diaz forces and the Diaz administration is stiffening. However, Minister Charles C. Eberhardt told the Tribune, the "American legation is most anxious to get together a responsible Liberal leader, with the government elements and arrange a peace parley, probably at the legation."

Meanwhile, the Conservatives and several Liberal leaders here are securing signatures for a message to United States Secretary of State Kellogg thanking him for the intervention, "which we know is without ulterior motives, for restoring Nicaragua's business, and to assure the picking of the coffee crop, which is valued at $5,000,000."

The U. S. S. Galveston is patrolling the west coast, looking for gun runners near the Gulf of Fonseca, while the Quail is in the south.

INTERVENTION CALLED "WALL STREET" MOVE.

Chicago, January 8.—(AP)—Intervention by the United States government in Nicaragua was called "a move in the interests of safeguarding the investments of Wall street bankers," in a letter made public here today by C. E. Ruthenberg, general secretary of the workers' (communist) party, written by the central committee of that organization and addressed to the executive council of the American Federation of Labor and several labor and farm bodies.

United action to fight against American intervention in Nicaragua, Mexico and China was demanded in the letter, which said that "the actions of the United States government with regards to Nicaragua are leading toward a new imperialist war."

Secretary William M. Jardine To Speak at Farm Conference

WILLIAM M. JARDINE.

Athens, Ga., January 8.—(Special.) With Secretary of Agriculture W. M. Jardine as one of the principal speakers, the annual marketing conference of the State College of Agriculture will open here January 24, according to Dr. Andrew M. Soule, president. The program includes addresses and technical lectures for the benefit of producers and at the same time the Georgia farm women's group will hold a conference.

Secretary Jardine will speak on Saturday, January 29, the closing day of the conference, Dr. Soule announces.

A feature of the opening day's session, Monday, January 24, will be an address by Governor-elect L. G. Hardman on "The Need of Research in Marketing."

In announcing the conference program for 1927 Dr. Soule states:

"The year 1926 is now only a memory in so far as Georgia's agricultural industry is concerned. It was a year of bountiful crops and satisfactory production throughout the major portion of the state.

"Georgia's tobacco growers and peanut farmers made smaller total yields than in 1925, but the average returns per acre were greater. The prices received for these two crops were generally satisfactory. A noticeable increase obtained in all other principal crops, as the record which follows amply demonstrates: 11,000,000 more bushels of corn; 700,000 more of wheat; 3,000,000 more of oats; 400,000 more of Irish potatoes; 4,500,000 more of sweet potatoes; 1,000,000 more of apples; 2,000,000 more of peaches—all bear silent testimony to the greater wealth produced by Georgia farmers in 1926 as compared with 1925. In addition to these increases, the cotton crop is decidedly larger, while record shipments of watermelons and peaches also were made.

"Economic production has been and still is one of the main problems affecting farming. In spite of the many difficulties and obstacles, Georgia farmers have continued their outturn of large crops. These increased yields have been brought about through improved practices and scientific methods of farming.

"Efficient marketing is certainly the partner of economic production.

"While it naturally follows that increased net returns are possible through more economic production, the elimination of waste in assembling, the coordination of distribution and aggressive selling—all of which are contingent on research, experience and organization in the field of marketing.

"Come to the 20th annual farmers' conference and the Cooperative School of Marketing to be held at the Georgia State College of Agriculture, January 24-29, inclusive, and help discuss and elaborate the programs needed to coordinate production with marketing.

"Be the representative of your community and the commodity in which you are interested.

"The financial returns due Georgia farmers for their work and management in production can only be obtained through the strengthening and material enlargement of our marketing facilities."

LEW HAHN SPEECH INTERESTS FIRMS

The visit of Lew Hahn, general manager of the National Retail Dry Goods Association of New York, who will be in Atlanta January 20, to attend the annual meeting and to address members and guests of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association at their annual dinner and celebration at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel, is creating unusual interest, not only among the members of this big association, but among the entire retail trade of the city.

The National Retail Dry Goods association is composed of more than 2,000 of the leading retailers of the United States, whose gross annual volume of business is between $3,000,000,000 and $4,000,000,000. It is the greatest and most powerful single national association of retailers in America, and many of the leading retailers have been members of the national association for many years. Mr. Hahn has been with the national association for 10 years, previous to which he was a newspaper man with the national retail organ known as "Women's Wear."

The association takes the leadership in all matters of national character affecting the retail trade of the country, and is particularly active wherever national legislation before congress is involved. One of its outstanding activities has been its scientific investigation of retailing, and enabled retailers of the country to its compilation of statistics that have put their businesses on a sound basis.

Expect 500 People.

Nearly 500 members and guests will attend this year's annual dinner and celebration, one complimentary ticket being sent to each member, and extra tickets being obtainable by those who desire them, through the executive secretary's office, 1308 Citizens and Southern Bank building.

Accompanying the course dinner will be a special musical program and entertainment, upon the completion of which the nominating committee, consisting of the past presidents of the association, of which J. P. Allen is chairman, will submit for the consideration of the meeting their nominations for officers for 1927. A special tribute will be paid to the retiring officers, who are: Frank Neely, president; John C. Sage, first vice president, and Vice Presidents C. M. LeRoux, T. H. Fulton, W. R. Bell, W. H. Harris, R. C. Schneider, Sr., and S. W. Mangham.

One of the special features of the meeting will be the honor accorded Frank Neely, retiring president, on account of his selection as Atlanta's first citizen for 1926. Mr. Neely is the third member of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association to be accorded this honor, the others being F. J. Paxon, of Davison-Paxon-Stokes company, and H. M. Atkinson, of the Georgia Railway and Power company. At the meeting, special reference will be made in the annual report of retiring president, Frank Neely, to a number of splendid accomplishments of the association during 1926. Foremost among these has been the increase of members.

Committees to Report.

Report of the work of the executive committee, of which J. P. Allen is chairman; the legislative committee, under the leadership of Fred Wilson, chairman; committee on parking and traffic, headed by J. P. Allen, and monthly meetings committee, under the leadership of T. G. Woolford, will show that many things of distinct value to the retail trading public have been accomplished. The association has been particularly active in protecting the retail trading public against fake, itinerant merchants and peddlers, and against temporary, fly-by-night business, which, by reason of their transient character, are usually conducted by those who have little regard for the rights of the public.

Realizing that the character of the state, municipal and national governments depends upon the interest taken in elections by those qualified to vote, the association has made a vigorous and determined effort to secure the registration and vote of every one of its members, and of every employee of its members, and will continue this policy without interruption during the coming year.

Finally, through the executive secretarial offices of the association, located at 1308 Citizens and Southern Bank building, the association has engaged in every worth-while movement inaugurated in Atlanta for the good of the community and the upbuilding of the city.

It has been the aim of the officers and board of directors of the association during the past year to make of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association a great clearing house for all retail trade lines in the city of Atlanta. At the present time there are 20 separate trade lines making up the membership of the association. Each of these trade lines, in addition to receiving the benefit of the work of the big association, meets regularly to discuss retail problems peculiar to its own trade line.

W. H. GREEN ARRIVES TO ORGANIZE DISTRICT

Confident of the future development of the south and Atlanta's strategic position as a distribution center for this section, the United States Glass company, one of the largest, if not the largest, manufacturer of merchandise glassware in the country, has established a branch office in the Bolling Jones building on Ivy street.

William H. Green, who motored to Atlanta from the home office at Pittsburgh to organize the new district and take charge of sales for the southeastern states, was the prime mover in the selection of Atlanta for the new branch. Mr. Green has gained a lifetime experience with the leading glass concerns of America and called upon his knowledge in choosing a new location.

"Living advantages in addition to those of business influenced my coming here for the United States Glass company," Mr. Green stated Saturday. "Our suite of offices in the Bolling Jones building will be used for sales and display purposes, while in the near future we expect to open a distribution warehouse, where a large stock will be carried to render the maximum efficiency in order filling for the customers of this section," Mr Green declared.

At present two salesmen will work out from the Atlanta branch covering the southeast, in addition to Mr. Green. A substantial business enjoyed by the company in this section prior to the opening of the district office will now be handled through Atlanta.

8-Year-Old Boy Loses in Battle With Meningitis

The end of a desperate battle by physicians for the life of eight-year-old Steve Talmadge, son of B. F. Talmadge, of Birmingham, came Saturday afternoon when spinal meningitis caused the boy's death at a local hospital.

Heroic measures were taken in an effort to check the onslaught of meningitis, the Atlanta postoffice suspending strict regulations to aid the physicians by searching incoming mail for a parcel of serum needed for the treatment of the case.

Steve failed to rally under the administration of the serum rushed from Johns Hopkins hospital, however, and death came Saturday afternoon. The disease appeared as a complication of a fracture of the base of the skull received when the boy fell from the running board of an automobile recently.

In addition to his father, the boy survived by his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Randall and Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Talmadge, of Forsyth, and an uncle, Eugene Talmadge, of McRae.

Funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon from the chapel of H. M. Patterson & Son. The Rev. L. O. Bricker and the Rev. Charles W. Daniel will officiate. Interment will be in West View cemetery. Pallbearers will be F. B. Patterson, J. C. Buchanan, J. F. Massenburg, Frank Fraser, Jr., Sam Armistead and Clyde Spinks.

Faith With Fundamentals Salvation for America, Says Senator R. W. Means

National Commander United Spanish War Veterans Guest of Honor at Banquet Saturday.

The home, schools, religion and the constitution of the United States are the four fundamental ideas upon which the American government is constructed, declared Senator Rice W. Means, of Colorado, distinguished soldier and national commander-in-chief of the United Spanish War Veterans, at a dinner given in his honor by the local camps of the organization at the Elks' club Saturday night.

The speaker attributed the remarkable success of the nation to its fundamental ideals and declared that as long as they are maintained in the United States the government will continue to be the greatest of all nations.

"Government begins in the home and there is never a time that the citizen's mind does not revert back to the little home and to the mother who taught them at her knee around the family hearthstone," he said. "If children are brought up right they will make good citizens," he asserted.

Should Teach Valor.

"We should see that illiteracy is wiped out of the nation. The modern method of belittling history of the country should be abolished and the teachers should teach their pupils of the valor and courageousness of their predecessors.

"Religion is essential. When we forget the teaching of God we are sure to go to ruin. I believe that the American people were created as a distinctive race by the supreme God and that while the pioneers were coming over to this country, without the knowledge that they were to be the founders of the greatest people on earth, the idea was conceived by God, who made us.

"There are some people who do not like the constitution of the United States, but it was upon this that the great nation has arisen. If there is a man or woman in this country that does not believe in our constitution, this is no place for them. Get out," Senator Means asserted.

Approximately 64 per cent of the field officers in the American forces in the world war were veterans of the Spanish-American war, he said. He attributed the success of the battles won by Americans to superior manhood and said that the world did not recognize the fact that God had created a new race and had placed the leadership of the universe in the hands of this race.

He commented at length on the passage of the pension bill and appealed to members to stand solidly behind the organization. "You have reached the stage of life where you can be of more service to your cuntry than ever before, having reached the age of wisdom. An organization well formed can achieve whatever it sets out to do," he said.

Due to hoarseness, Mayor I. N. Ragsdale asked Miss Helen Douglas, prominent Atlanta lawyer, to deliver an address of welcome to the guest.

Following the invocation by Judge Marcus Beck, state department commander, Colonel William L. Grayson, of Savannah, was introduced and presided at the meeting.

Major General Johnson Hagood, commander of the fourth corps area, delivered an address on the army of 1898 and pointed out the importance of preparedness and national defense.

B. C. "Tut" Broyles, secretary of the Elks' club, spoke briefly on patriotism and was followed by an address of welcome by J. Turner Fitten, exalted ruler of the local lodge of Elks.

Mrs. Ida Scogin, state department president of the auxiliaries, reported that the various auxiliaries throughout the state were making much progress.

An 11 o'clock toast was given by Barney Barnard to the comrades who had died.

The Fort McPherson orchestra rendered musical and vocal selections during the repast and at intervals during the program. Approximately 200 veterans, their wives and friends attended.

DRY LEAGUE HIT BY EDWARDS AGAIN

Atlantic City, January 8.—(AP)—Renewing his attack on the Anti-Saloon league, denouncing "Mr. Mellon's poisoned rum" and pleading for religious tolerance, Senator Edwards, democrat, New Jersey, tonight urged a rededication of his party to the "liberty loving" creed of Andrew Jackson and Woodrow Wilson.

At the annual dinner of the democratic executive committee of Atlantic county, Senator Edwards said that "if the fires of liberty burn more brightly for everyone—white and black, Jew and gentile—there will be no necessity for anti-saloon leagues or any other super-government leagues, because the people then will govern themselves."

"Insufferable minorities have been in the saddle driving a willing beast to destruction," he continued. "It is far more important to take the poison out of some citizens' mouths and unwarranted activities, than it is to take it out of rum.

"Poisoned rum kills the unfortunate, the derelict, the men and women whose lives are already despaired of, but a poisoned democracy with a toxic intolerance, kills a whole nation.

"Again, poisoned rum kills the very ones for whom laws are enacted. Laws are passed to protect ignorance, not to protect intelligence.

Government, which must resort to murder, without trial and without warning, to enforce a law, ultimately will resort to wholesale repudiation of her citizens' inalienable rights.

SIX BURGLARIES IN CITY SATURDAY

Three stores and three homes were looted by burglars sometime before dawn Saturday morning, according to police reports.

S. J. Gold, of 108 Capitol avenue, reported that a quantity of groceries and tobacco was taken from his place. Entrance was gained by breaking a plate glass window with bricks, police were told.

A case of eggs, half a cheese and a quantity of tobacco were taken from G. H. Martin's store at 357 Whitehall street, police records show.

A. Nayer, of 122 West Peachtree street, reported that his store was robbed of a quantity of cigarettes, cigars and $10 early Saturday morning.

Clothing was taken from the home of Mrs. J. H. Storey, 4052 Central avenue, according to police reports. Miss Mary Anderson, of 753 Simpson street, reported that a pocketbook containing $15 was taken from her home.

The third attempt within the past week was made to enter the home of A. L. C. Vogel, at 1041 Maryland avenue, and patrolmen on that beat were given orders to give particular attention to the house in the future.

Southern Artists Feature Fourth Circuit Exhibition Opening Here This Afternoon

Southern artists, by brith or by residence, from a dozen southern states, will be represented in the fourth A circuit exhibition of the Southern States Art league, which will be seen in the High Museum of Art under the auspices of the Atlanta Art association, opening this afternoon and continuing to January 23. There are paintings in oils and in water colors, with some drawings and etchings. Among them are several which were awarded prizes in the sixth annual exhibition in the Museum of Fine Arts of Houston, Texas, last March, from which all these paintings were selected as representative of southern art.

The exhibition will be opened by a private showing this afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock, to members of the association and their friends. After today it will be open daily for the two weeks to the general public from 10 o'clock until 4:30.

The exhibition, which includes the 26 most famous paintings and etchings of the year by southern artists—works which have, most of them, won important prizes and awards—is one of the most important of the year. It follows a showing at the High museum for the past week of the permanent collection with several additional groups and those who attend the Southern States league exhibit will enjoy also, the permanent collection which has been hung in its permanent home, the new museum donated by Mrs. J. M. High. A painting of peculiar interest now hung in the galleries is the portrait of Mrs. High by the famous artist, Sidney Dickinson, which has recently been finished.

Headquarters of the Southern States Art league are in New Orleans, La., at 7321 Panola street. Its president, Ellsworth Woodward—who has been director of the school of art of H. Sophie Newcomb Memorial college, Tulane university, of Louisiana, for nearly 40 years—succeeded J. Carroll Payne, of Atlanta, in 1925, and is serving his second term of two years as head of the league. T. R. Waring, of Charleston, S. C., and William P. Silva, of Carmel, Cal., are vice presidents. Mrs. Samuel M. Inman, of Atlanta, Ga., is one of the directors.

The league, which held its fifth annual exhibition and convention in Atlanta two years ago, will hold its seventh annual meeting, with the accompanying exhibition, in the Gibmes Art gallery in Charleston next April.

Encourages Art.

The object of the organization is to encourage art and its appreciation in the south. Its traveling exhibitions have been shown from Kentucky and North Carolina to Florida, from th Atlantic coast to Texas.

Among the exhibitors in the circuit who have won awards in the annual exhibition of the league and other art organizations are Marie A. Hull, of Jackson, Miss., whose "Golden Fog, Tampa Bay," won the Southern States Art League prize for the best southern landscape in the sixth annual exhibition last spring; Catherine Carter Critcher, whose "Portrait of an Artist," was awarded the prize for the best portrait; Will H. Stevens of New Orleans, Alice Worthington Hall, of Baltimore, and many others.

Ella Sophonisba Hergesheimer, whose "Mother's Day" was a feature of the Southern States Art league circuit last year, has a portrait of a red-haired young woman called "Peggy" in this years circuit, painted in the same masterful fashion with full and glowing color. Miss Hergesheimer is southern only by adoption, but she has painted so many successful portraits of southern men and women of distinction—including the portrait of Commodore Matthew Fontaine Maury presented by the Daughters of the Confederacy to the Naval academy at Annapolis—that she has been adopted by Tennessee as one of her own painters, in spite of her birth in Allentown, Pa. Her education was obtained in the Philadelphia School of Design for Women and in the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, which was founded by her great-great-grandfather, Charles William Peale, painter of George Washington and other celebrities of revolutionary days. She has lived in the south for 19 years, following a showing of some of her work in a loan collection in Nashville, soon after her return from study abroad. Her masters included William M. Chase and Cecilia Beaux in this country, and abroad M. Mucha and M. Prinet, as well as the instructors in the Colorossi academy in Paris, where she spent two winters. Germany, Holland, Belgium, Italy and Spain were included in her travels.

Touch of Texas.

E. G. Eisenlohr is a native of Cincinnati, but has lived in Texas many years. He studied under R. J. Onderdonk and Frank Reaugh in Texas, and acknowledges a deep debt of gratitude to these artists, his instructors and friends; and at the Academy Karlsruhe, Germany, under Gustave Schoenleber and in the art galleries of Belgium, Holland, Italy and Germany. "He is a landscape painter of unusual ability and is noted for his superb handling of cloud effects and atmospheric conditions," a critic in The Dallas Times-Herald writes. "His pictures are typical of Texas and the southwest."

Mr. Eisenlohr is a member of the Salmagundi club and the Southern States Art league. He has paintings in the Dallas Public Art gallery, and in the Elisabet Ney museum, in Austin, Texas. He is the author of "Study and Enjoyment of Pictures," "Tendencies in Art and Their Significance," and "Landscape Painters.' He was born in 1872. His picture in this exhibition is "Evening On the Piluxi."

Gertrude Roberts Smith, of Newcomb College School of Art, New Orleans, was born in Cambridge, Mass., in 1869, but has lived in the south 35 years, and her paintings are vivid with southern sunlight and the green of bananas and orange trees, palms and oaks. She has traveled in the tropics and painted characteristic scenes in Central American and in the Caribbean islands, as well as in the Carolina mountains and in New England fishing villages. She is a designer and craftsman as well as a painter, and the textile department of Newcomb Art school, with its product, the "Newcomb needleworks," just as distinctive and almost as famous as Newcomb pottery, has been her life work. Pupil of the Massachusetts Normal Art school, the Chase School of Art in New York, and the Colorossi academy in Paris, she has been active in the work of the art association of New Orleans, and the Arts and Crafts club of that city, of which she was one of the founders; and the Southern States Art league. She also belongs to the Boston Arts and Crafts club. She is represented in the Isaac Delgado Museum of Art, and was awarded a gold medal ($250) by the Art Association of New Orleans several years ago.

Emma S. Gilchrist is a native of Charleston, S. C., who has always lived in the south, and is president of the Sketch Club of Charleston, as well as a member of the Carolina Art association and the Southern States Art league. She has won prizes for her work in a number of state fairs and for three years in succession took the first prize in Lanneau's Art contest. Her painting of "Carolina Pines" ran second in the popularity contest in the Southern States Art league annual exhibition in Houston last March. "Through the Palms" was the picture selected for the fourth circuit.

Houston Represented.

Margaret Brisbine is a native of Yankton, S. D., but has lived in the south nine years. She is a resident of Houston, Texas, and a member of the Houston Art league as well as the Fellowship of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. She is represented in the Houston Museum of Art.

Mabel H. Ebersole, a Little Rock artist who studied under Miss May Dananher, is among the exhibitors selected for the circuit out of the 181 whose works of art were hung in the sixth annual exhibition. Her painting, "The Ranger," won hearty praise from the critics, though it was the first time her work had been exhibited anywhere. She is now studying art in Chicago.

Stiff House, by Frank Klepper; Dairy Farm in Spring, by Mrs. F. L. Turner; Through the Palms, by Emma S. Gilchrist; Palms Near the Ocean, by Gertrude Smith; Portrait of a Dancer, by Herbert W. Rose; Against the Light, by Margaret Brisbine; My Mother, by Mabel Pugh; Dusk on the Ohio, by Voyle N. Armstrong; The New Wing, by James Chillman, Jr.; The Wading Pool, by Sadie A. E. Irvine; Cypress Trees at Coming Tee, by A. R. H. Smith; The Creek, by Herbert N. Ross; Flying Clouds, by Will H. Stevens; Evening on the Piluxi, by E. G. Eisenlohr; The Evening Star, by Grace Spanlding; The Garden Lot, by H. D. Stitt; Golden Fog, Tampa Bay, by Marie A. Hull; Kentucky Hill Farm, by Paul A. Plaschke; Southern Highlands, by Homer E. Ellertson; South Texas Prairie, by Boyce Gonzales; Jane Skies, by Paul R. Schumann; Spring Flowers, by Carrie L. Hill; Springtime, by H. D. Stitt; At Low Tide, by Alice W. Ball; Peggy, by E. Messages Express Sympathy of All Classes

PEOPLE IN ALL WALKS OF LIFE SAD OVER PASSING OF DIXIE'S SWEETEST SINGER

As News of Stanton's Death Becomes Known

Telegrams and messages from all sections of the country bring expressions of sympathy and grief which is felt over the death Friday of Frank L. Stanton, poet laureate of Georgia.

Writers, authors, churchmen, government and state officials and others in all walks of life sent messages of condolence to his bereaved family, while others sent bits of verse to express their sympathy.

Some of these expressions follow:

CONGRESS HEARS TRIBUTE TO STANTON.

Washington, January 8.—(AP)—Frank L. Stanton, poet laureate of Georgia, who died in Atlanta yesterday, was eulogized in the house today by Representative Upshaw, democrat, Georgia.

"Melodious as were his lyrics," Upshaw said, "Stanton will be remembered as the poet of hope and faith and all that is beautiful in the Christian religion."

COMPOSERS' SOCIETY PAYS ITS TRIBUTE.

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, including in its membership practically every composer and author of note in America, among them Damrosch, Cadman, Rachmaninoff and Sousa, sent one of the most beautiful floral offerings to the Stanton home.

The society, which is affiliated with similar organizations in Great Britain and the continent, wired W. E. Arnaud, its attorney and representative in Atlanta, as follows:

"Kindly purchase floral offering and send in our name to late Frank L. Stanton."

The fact that Mr. Stanton was not a member of the society makes the offering all the more complimentary and is expressive of the high esteem in which Georgia's poet laureate was held by the world's greatest authors and composers.

Mr. Stanton was not a member of the society because he never wrote verse for the special purpose of having it set to music, although it is probable that more of his verse was set to music than that of any present day author or composer.

IN MEMORY OF FRANK L. STANTON
By Livingstone E. Roberts
(Pastor College Park Methodist Church.)

Today, when Frank L. Stanton died,
A shadow round a shining flame,
All Georgia saw him glorified—
The shadow glowing with his fame.

If muses weep, as mortals do,
When poets cease their earthly song,
His muse now weeps in Georgia, with Lyon—
And with the world's unnumbered throng.

Amid his pains and earthly griefs,
And thorns and roses of the sod,
He sang his songs of love and beliefs—
"A-wearyin'" for the love of God.

His children play in fairy light,
Or sleep in lyrics of his love—
As angels "tiptoe," flaming bright,
And spread their guarding wings above.

The old man smiles in melody,
The good old negro, round the farm;
And all the world's a rhapsody—
Its human friendships kind and warm.

The youth goes singing, in delight,
Unhurt by sorrow's sin and shame—
As he rebukes "upbraiding" night,
And lights, in love, their road to fame.

Like his beloved mocking bird,
When singing in the pale moonlight,
Our vanished singer still is heard—
Amid the shadows of the night.

FAREWELL, FRANK L. STANTON.

He reached all hearts—he cheered the soul
And brightened up life's barren places;
No pen can write—no tongue can tell
The sad new year Atlanta faces.

The beauty of his tender words,
The cheer of his sweet singing
Remain with us, but, oh! the blight
The tidings of our loss is bringing.

Farewell, great singer of the south—
Look down from heaven's hills,
And send the state you glorified
Fresh hope and cheer and thrills.
—VIRGINIA MILMOW.

MOTHER REQUESTS PRINTING OF POEM.

A request to republish the poem by Mr. Stanton, "When Love Gives All," was made by Mrs. M. Rose, of 781 Dixie avenue, N. E. It was written by Mr. Stanton on the occasion of the death of her son, Edward Rose, of the U. S. S. Vermont.

Mrs. Rose received the poem and sent it to the captain of the battleship Vermont. It was published and sent to every ship in the navy. Hundreds of mothers also received the poem and wrote Mr. Stanton, thanking him for the comfort given by its beautiful message.

The poem follows:

WHEN LOVE GIVES ALL.
By Frank L. Stanton.

Word from the war: The tale is told
And the star on the service flag's God's gold!
God's and the country's. And there are tears
That come with a dream of the beautiful years;
Tears and shadows, and silence long—
It is but the stillness that follows song.
And it needs but be that tears should fall
When love gives all.

II.

When love gives all, is it much to give?
That wounded—dying—a world may live?
Love costs no more than of old today—
It kissed its cross in the far away,
And its crown of thorns, in a dark dread night
Was earth's and heaven's own crown of lights.
O still love answers the world-wide call,
And love gives all.

III.

Take him, loved country! Love's gift to you
Is the golden star in a heaven of blue!
Stars of the many, with love undenied;
They are only your sons that we send to your side!
And they live for you—die for you—service supreme.
And, dying, their country is still their last dream!
And there's glory in grief—light in tears,
as they fall,
When love gives all.

FRANK L. STANTON.
By Robert Elliott Cureton.

Out of the south a voice was heard,
Heard deep in the hearts of men;
And broken souls, touched by the word,
Found hope in an unseen friend.

Out of the wild and restless age,
Age of the heartless and mad!
Came songs of love: a mellow sage
Was singing to make men glad.

Out of a heart so rich with love,
Love for the friendless and poor;
Fell words of cheer like dew above,
On the stranger at his door.

Out of the mass of distant men,
In the field, at shop, or plow,
Come tears of grief, their unseen friend
Writes songs for the angels now.

Out of the south and out of time,
Come stars but once in awhile
To light the path of all mankind
And leave on their lips a smile.

Out of the grave shall Stanton speak
A song to the common man
In humble homes wherein rains leak
And where highways never ran.

THE SOUL OF STANTON.

Across the windswept hills afar
Into the fields of God,
He marched by faith's eternal star
The road our fathers trod—
His gentle spirit slipped away,
To dream through God's eternal day.

Through crowded streets, amid the roar
Of daily strife and toil,
He wandered when his task was o'er;
This prophet of the soil.
The hurrying crowds, they never knew
His soul had passed to dusk and dew.

Through sun and shade and changing years
His songs he sung—and so
With aching hearts, through burning tears,
His loved one watched him go—
Out through the gate of life, ajar,
His silent way to sunset star.

He only sung those songs which find
A place in every heart,
So brave, so gentle and so kind,
A man of noble art—
He sung the songs that smoothed life's road,
And eased the pressure of life's load.

Across the wind-swept hills of space
His soul has gone its way
To meet his Maker face to face,
Through an eternal day.
And there he'll sing the songs we love,
Tuned to the angel harps above.
—WILL D. MUSE.

TO FRANK L. STANTON.

He had the poet's soul, the poet's matchless pen,
He loved the beautiful, the true—
A friend of flowers, a light to struggling men.

His heart was kind; he helped the world along.
"His Column" scattered cares away,
He gave his beat in melody or sweetest song.

We'll never know his like on earth again,
Our eyes are dim, our hearts too full for words,
And yet, we're glad he's resting, free from pain.

"Old Trouble" cannot find him where
The roses bloom and hills are green and fair;
His night is past, 'tis ever glorious morning there.
—MARY VENABLE WOMBLE.

POEM EXPRESSES WOMAN'S SORROW.

Appreciation of the poetry of Frank L. Stanton and a tribute to the poet is contained in a poem, "The Song of the Singer," written by Miss Myrta Lockett Avary, of Atlanta. Miss Avary wrote the poem more than a year ago after she had conversed with Stanton about poetry and his idea of the purpose of poetry.

The poem follows:

THE SONG OF THE SINGER.
To Frank L. Stanton.

The song of the singer is hushed—
For the singer lies dead.
The deaf world rumbles along
In thunderous roll o'er his head.
But the song of the singer shall live
In the things that it wrought
When the earth and the moon and the sun
Have crumbled to nought.
For the song of the singer was love
And beauty and music and truth.
And the song of the singer is part
Of life's immemorial youth!

He climbed the dread mountains of pain
Where harmony's carillons hung,
Swayed by the tremendous refrain
Of the spheres as in orbit they swung.
He learned that the change we call death
Is a transient slumber—a dream
A-throb with a quickening faith
In godhead with splendors a-gleam.
He gave in the love that he sung
A gift all unnumbered by years;
From his heart's bitter anguish was wrung
Surcease from our sorrows and fears.

He saw in the uttermost void
Creation ere earth had its morn;
He heard in the uttermost void
The pulse-beat of ages unborn;
In the pleaides shining afar,
In the daisy that blooms at our feet,
In the clod, in the radiant star,
Vibration a-thrill to repeat!
Heard, saw, with a spiritual sense;
Past ether and water and sod,
He caught the measure immense
Of our inescapable God!

The song of the singer is hushed—
For the singer lies dead.
The deaf world rumbles along
In thunderous roll o'er his head.
But the song of the singer shall live
In the thing that it wrought
When the earth and the moon and the sun
Have crumbled to nought.
For the song of the singer was love
And beauty and music and truth,
And the song of the singer is part
Of life's immemorial youth!
—MYRTA LOCKETT AVARY.

STANTON'S DEATH BRINGS SYMPATHY

genius of Stanton, some of which are printed in this issue of The Constitution.

HAGUE MAY PASS ON MEXICAN LAWS

people of North America "if the day of exploitation gives way to a new spirit of willingness to share life and culture."

President Is Moved.

The president was visibly moved as he replied. The grim lines about his mouth relaxed; his stern features softened into a smile, as he told his visitors that it was a novelty to him to hear kind words, to hearing anything except threats.

"I rarely hear words of any spirituality," he said. "As a rule I always hear a discussion in the brutal form of material interests and menacing words about those interests.

"So, when I hear words based upon justice and brotherly love it makes me hope that true relations may at some time be established among peoples, makes me think that there are still people in the world working for international harmony upon the basis of justice. Justice is all we want in these moments so critical for Mexico. So long as nations fight only for material things and neglect spiritual things, the peace of the world will be a lie."

Assails Catholic Clergy.

President Calles described the enemies of the Mexican government as "the Roman Catholic clergy, some political elements and some reactionary forces," who, he declared, would start a revolution immediately on the withdrawal of American recognition, and who, he added, "are attempting revolutionary disturbances at the present moment, although the government does and will dominate the situation."

He answered lengthily questions regarding the religious situation, in effect repeating the previously expressed position of the government.

Asked whether he would be willing to submit the differences between Mexico and the United States regarding petroleum and land law to The Hague, he replied:

"Yes, with great pleasure, if necessary, although it would imperil Mexican sovereignty and establish a fatal precedent as to liberty and sovereignty of all nations. All history shows that all such international tribunals always support the viewpoint of the strong. But, if necessary, Mexico will take that chance, in order to avoid a more serious danger to the country, and will be willing to choose the least of two evils, and go to The Hague."

Nicaraguan Situation.

With regard to Nicaragua, Senor Calles reviewed the history of its politics and revolutions to sustain his position that the pretensions of Nicaragua's conservative president, Adolfo Diaz, were illegal and that Dr. Juan Sacasa, the liberal leader, was the only constitutional president.

"Two Nicaraguan governments were established—one of violence and illegality, the other of legality. Mexico recognized the government of legality; the United States recogniezd the one of violence. That is all there is to it."

E. J. Smith, Myrtle and Eighth, robbed in front of his home of $6.

J. K. Clayton, of 762 Lake avenue, relieved of $18 at almost the same spot.

E. A. Hightower, of 844 Claremont drive, robbed of $15 at Glenco avenue and Vermont drive.

E. J. Curtis, of 1446 Lanier place, robbed of $15 in front of his residence.

Took Sunday Groceries.

James White, negro, living in the rear of 80 Hilliard street, lost $6 and a bundle of groceries to the two negroes near his home.

Boyd Little, negro, living at 210 Fort street, dropped $5 to the pair near his home.

Milton Porter, negro chauffeur for Captain F. J. Spratlin, clerk of the Fulton county superior court, who resides at 620 Houston street, turned over $9 to the bandits when accosted near his home.

White, the negro whose groceries were taken, told police that after the highwaymen had taken his money they looked over the bundle he was carrying.

"Watcha got thah, nigger?" one of them asked, White said.

"Sunday groceries," he answered.

"Tha's right, tomorrow is Sunday," the stickup is said to have answered, "It's Sunday all day so Ah guess we'll jest take these vit'als along."

Negro Woman Choked.

Mary Chancery, negro, of rear of 599 North avenue, N. E., reported to police that she was held up and robbed of $1 Saturday night while walking along Juniper street at Tenth street, by an unidentified negro man. The negress told police that, after being held up, when she produced only one dollar, the negro man choked her and told her to have more maney next time. Police were furnished with a description of the footpad.

City Detectives M. P. Warren and C. D. Holton were riding down South Pryor street late Saturday night and hearing a speeding motor approaching attempted to stop it, but the driver of the cut-down car increased speed, whereupon officers opened fire. As far as could be learned none of the shots took effect. The officers state that the car occupants answered the descriptions given by persons held up earlier in the night.

Greatnesss Passing By

Some Reflections On the Death of Frank L. Stanton

BY LOUIE D. NEWTON
(Editor Christian Index.)

It is lonely in Atlanta today, strangely lonely. The sweetest singer we had has joined the Choir Invisible. Frank Stanton is dead. I am not to look at him any more at the little desk at The Constitution, all crowded with papers. I am not to see him any more beside his fireplace on Fairview road. He has gone Home. And it is lonely here on earth.

All who love the ancient and beautiful things will be lonely today. Frank Stanton kept us close to them. He pointed men and women and little children to worship, to prayer, to hope in God. His rhythmic lines were like church bells urging the upward climb toward God. He believed in the Bible—in mother's Bible and in mother's religion. He possessed that mysterious quality of soul which could distil the essence of life from the gross materiality which weights us down. He knew what was abiding and beautiful in an age of fitful, puny jazz.

And it is lonely here today with such a spirit gone. Who will be able to hear the trumpet flower blowing its bugle note of spring, with Stanton gone? Who will tell us to be still and hear the tramping caravans of flowers and growing grasses on ten thousand billsides and in ten thousand fields? Who will teach us to listen to the little feet of billions of apple blossoms in the glorious mountain valleys? Who will catch the love notes of robins at mating time and the mother notes of bobolinks in April? Who will record for this noisy, metallic day the music of the running streams? Isn't it lonely, without Stanton?

Will Live Forever.

But Tennyson said that "the poet cannot die!" There is comfort in these words for all of us this lonely day. Frank Stanton is not dead. Oh no! He is not dead. He will live on and on and on. Close your eyes, even now, and let those great organ notes of his matchless lyrics sweep through your soul. Alive? Why, the most powerfully living thing you have thought of today are those lines, and all other such lines of verse and story as reflect eternal truth. Channing Pollock said, "A single line will outlive a marble temple." And when these storied structures of steel and stone have crumbled away, Frank Stanton's winged words will be cherished in countless hearts as living treasures. Victor Hugo said, "There is only one thing greater than armies, and that is an idea whose hour has come." Stanton dealt with the imponderables. They live on.

I loved him for his gentleness. Did you ever hear his resonant voice? Did you ever feel his gentle hand? Did you ever see his shrinking modesty when some word of appreciation was spoken of his work? Did you ever see those eyes? I never think of Frank Stanton's eyes that I do not recall Shakespeare's lines:

> The poet's eye, in a fine frenzy rolling,
> Doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth to heaven;
> And as imagination bodies forth
> The forms of things unknown, the poet's pen
> Turns them to shapes, and gives to airy nothing
> A local habitation and a home.

Stanton Understood.

He had an understanding heart. Oh, how greatly the world needs people of understanding hearts today! It is said that Joaquin Miller and James Whitcomb Riley had longed to see one another. After several years they met in Indianapolis in the railway station. They looked into one another's eyes. They smiled. They walked away arm in arm, with not a word.

What does it require to possess such a heart? Carlyle said, "How does the poet speak to men with power, but by being still more a man than they?" Pope said:

> Vain was the chief's the sage's pride!
> They had no poet and they died.

I loved him for his recognition of beauty and truth everywhere. He could make the poppies redder; he could make the roses sweeter; he knew how to give the aroma of the magnolia to the dashing beauty of the dahlia; he could discover and give forth the sweet, timid perfume of the trailing arbutus; he could fill the bluebells and lilies deep with the precious dews of heaven. And in it all he recognized the touch of God. What a gift—this wondrous ability to see beauty and truth everywhere?

> Poets are all who love, who feel great truths,
> And tell them; and the truth of truths is love.

There it is—there is the key to Stanton's true greatness. It is the "truth of love." He sounded this note over and over again. How tenderly he painted those matchless picures of the love of the parent for the little baby! Tear ducts long since dried up will burst forth anew if you will just open your eyes, perhaps I should say close them, to the beauty of "Mighty Lak a Rose." And the picture he has hung in the inner chambers of our hearts—the divinely sanctioned love of man for woman are but the reflections of his own great heart of love. Who can ever read "Just a Wearin' for You" and not feel this deep, living impulse of love? And Frank Stanton never stopped short of love's true goals. When I think of his many beautiful lines about motherhood and homes I always like to recall this couplet:

> "O mother, when I think of thee.
> 'Tis but a step to Calvary."

Why He Loved Poet.

I loved Frank Stanton for his constant emphasis upon heaven. He believed there was something beyond the grave which was far better than this world with its thorns. True, he recognized the thorns of loneliness, the thorns of suffering, the thorns of disease, the thorns of defeat; but how triumphantly he would weave these thorns into a crown of flowers whose petals seem to blow from the gardens that border that River on the other shore. Many times I have found myself coming away from his presence humming that beautiful little hymn:

> "I look away across the sea
> Where mansions are prepared for me."

He loved to sing about heaven and to write about others who have sung so sweetly of heaven. I shall never forget one day last autumn. It was dark and dreary outside. The smoke and rain were mixing into a dark and dismal day in Atlanta. I had stopped by his desk to hear him speak some kindly word and to look upon his gentle eye. As I started to leave he held to my hand and said: "You had a beautiful little song in The Index the other day. I like those lines about the bells aringing for you and me. How does it go?" And as he touched his fingers on the table I recalled the little song:

> "Don't you hear the bells now ringing?
> Don't you hear the angels singing?
> 'Tis the glory hallelujah Jubilee.
> In that far-off sweet forever,
> Just beyond the shining river,
> When they ring the golden bells for you and me."

And while we are lonely here in Atlanta and here in Georgia and here in the earth today—lonely because this sweet singer has passed on—we may be surely comforted by the fact that his songs remain with us. He may not again sing his songs to us, but yonder in that "land beyond the river" he is answering the roll—the roll call which awaits every one, even you and me.

Let us find quiet of heart today in pausing to recognize his passing and in contemplation upon his true greatness. It is John Drinkwater, beloved British poet, who has said:

> "When the high heart we magnify
> And the true vision we celebrate;
> And worship greatness passing by,
> Ourselves are great."

RICH MAN WEDS CHAMBERMAID

Port Chester, N. Y., January 8.—"The boss" has married his chambermaid.

Frank W. Savin, millionaire financier, and second oldest member of the New York Stock Exchange, stood up at noon today before the servants of his luxurious mansion. Winchester Hall, and was married to Anna Schleis, 43-year-old immigrant maid, who had been in his employ for 14 years.

"The boss said he had been watching me and I would make him a good wife," explained the bride, smoothing her graying hair and obviously flustered by the dignity of her new position as mistress of the household in which she had served in a menial capacity, more lately acting as housekeeper.

The erstwhile chambermaid is the fourth wife of the millionaire, who is 76.

"The boss called me into his study last Sunday night," explained the fourth Mrs. Savin. "He said he had been watching me and he needed someone to take care of him, so I should marry him.

"I hadn't expected it and I was flustered, but of course I said I would.

"Our wedding won't make so much difference. He wants to go on as usual. I'll continue to look after the house."

In taking out the license, however, the bruegroom, who is said to have enjoyed several stormy years of matrimony in the past, insisted that Anna never would work again.

Otherwise, the financier would not discuss the wedding.

Up until the day of the wedding, during the week following Savin's brusque proposal, the bride-to-be continued to take her meals with the other servants, while the master of Winchester Hall ate alone upstairs in his customary solitary splendor.

Savin is immensely wealthy, but made his own way in life after his father cut him off in the traditional manner while the financier still was a youngster. He went into Wall street and reached the top after a hard struggle.

An individualist, Savin takes the attitude that today's wedding is nobody's business but his own. He had reporters thrown off the grounds before the ceremony.

The Rev. Stanley Kilbourne, rector of St. Peter's Episcopal church, officiated. Servants and members of the Savin family looked on.

A honeymoon was not even considered, it was said, the bride merely removing her things to the stately bedrooms of the master suite at the Hall.

The millionaire's first wife was Arriba Wheat, daughter of a New Haven, Conn., physician. They had two children before separating, and both children have been cut off by Savin. The second wife was Sarah Hamilton West and the third another former housekeeper of the elderly financiar, who died about a year ago.

CHINESE RIOTERS INVADE CONCESSION

satisfaction for the killing of Chinese marines, necessitating the Chinese to assume control and appoint a committee of government for the foreign area.

Radicals Urge Aggression.

Although the adjoining Japanese and French concessions still have not been molested, the radicals are starting agitation for taking over all the foreign areas in Hankow.

Mr. Chen also issued a proclamation urging the foreigners to resume business, guaranteeing protection, but the foreigners are unable to leave their houses owing to the menacing events. A laborers' mass meeting, attended by more than 500,000 Chinese laborers, students and farmers, passed eight resolutions, demanding punishment of the British marines for firing on the crowds, that Great Britain indemnify the Chinese, that the British concessions throughout China be taken over by the Chinese, that the British gunboats evacuate the Yangtze river and the British volunteers to disarm, that British goods be boycotted and telegrams dispatched to all world capitals telling of the "outlawry" of Great Britain in China.

FOREIGNERS DEMANDING ACTION BY COUNTRIES.
BY CAL S. HIRSH.

Shanghai, January 8.—Aroused by the sight of their fellow nationals arriving as refugees from Hankow, Americans, British and other foreign residents of the Shanghai concessions today demanded immediate action against the Cantonese forces which have seized Hankow's foreign settlement.

Business in the foreign section is virtually suspended and the settlement resembles a huge mass meeting of protest against the American and British consular inactivity as well as against the Chinese.

Those who have realized for weeks that a similar situation may face Shanghai foreigners any day propose organization of a vigilantes committee to be ready for action in case the Cantonese army reaches Shanghai.

Ousting of the foreigners from Hankow constitutes the first complete anti-foreign victory of the Cantonese. As friends of Shanghai residents are welcomed from Hankow and provided with quarters the storm of resentment grows. Demands that the British consul general impress on the government the gravity of the situation are heard on all sides in the British community.

Many believe that allied international action against the Cantonese is the only thing that will check complete routing of the foreigners resident in treaty ports. Missionaries living in such outlying places are being urged to proceed to Chungking or Wanhsien where transportation to Shanghai is available.

SCANTILY-DRESSED REFUGEES ARRIVE.

Shanghai, January 8.—(AP)—Refugees began arriving today from Hankow, 585 miles up the Yangtze, where infuriated Chinese mobs attacked the British concession Monday and Tuesday and since have held possession. Without money and with only the clothing they were wearing, some 300 British women and children were landed in this city. They left Hankow Thursday with but scant notice, some of the children being carried away wrapped in blankets.

The refugees made the long river trip in two badly over-crowded boats, the Poyang and the Loongwoo. One vessel equipped to accommodate only 20 foreign passengers carried 122. The other, with a capacity for 30, had 180 aboard.

When the rioting Chinese took over the British concession at Hankow Wednesday, the British women and children of the district were hastily taken aboard ships in the river in commandeered launches.

At midnight when the situation became worse orders were given the vessels to depart.

Ships Reprovisioned.

The vessels were not adequately provisioned but by means of rationing sufficient food was supplied to every one until the vessels reached Nanking where they were reprovisioned.

Shanghai organizations made ample arrangements to take care of the refugees, many British and other white residents offering their homes. Among the arrivals were two British policemen who, with other foreign members of the British police, had been placed on the blacklist by agitators to be killed at the first opportunity.

The secretary of the British municipal council, also said to have been blacklisted, is understood to have been taken aboard a gunboat.

RIOTING AND LOOTING IS RAGING IN KIUKIANG.

Shanghai, January 8. — (AP)— Aroused by anti-foreign agitation, Chinese mobs have been rioting and looting the foreign section of Kiukiang since Thursday. Dispatches received here today stated that all foreigners were evacuating the city which is 450 miles up the Yangtse river from Shanghai.

Coolie mobs flung down the barriers before the British concession Thursday and overran the district. Joined by Chinese soldiers, they looted the business district and dwellings of foreigners. Cantonese government authorities helplessly looked on, while the mobs vented their anger upon the white people, the dispatches asserted.

The British relinquished their district to the rioters. On Thursday 258 British women and children with a few men boarded gunboats and started for Shanghai.

Another dispatch stated that American residents of Kiukiang had been taken on board the American gunboat Penguin, Friday. All women and children departed from the city. Following the rioting Cantonese troops took charge of the concession.

SITUATION REPORTED IMPROVING AT HANKOW.

London, January 8.—(AP)—At Hankow, China, where the foreign residents, particularly the British, have been endangered for the past week by the inflamed populace, there appears to be a temporary improvement in the situation. A similar outbreak, however, has occurred in Kiukiang, about 140 miles down the Yangtse river from Hankow, and from both places women and children have been taken aboard warships and are proceeding to Shanghai.

Communications from Hankow remains slow and uncertain, and the outcome trembles in the balance. Latest press dispatches received in London bring the record only to Friday night, but the British government had a dispatch this morning indicating that the British consul had arrived at an agreement with the Cantonese foreign minister, Eugene Chen. By this agreement the British concession was freed of Chinese soldiers and the commission policed by natives under British control.

Business pressure seems to have brought about the amelioration. Chinese merchants complained of the impossibility of doing business while British and American business houses were closed, and advised the Chen government to restore the old situation in the concession. There is no word yet, however, to show whether the business men have returned to their offices and stores.

Wait Attack on Shanghai.

There is an unofficial report that the foreign powers have agreed to regard as an act of war, any attempt on Shanghai, and still another report that the Pekin government is planning violation of the foreign concessions at Tientsin.

It is understood that the agreement reached at Hankow stipulates that no crowds shall be allowed to assemble along the bund and that British subjects shall not be molested.

The foreign office today had little news of the incidents at Kiukiang, but admitted that events seem very similar to those at Hankow. Press dispatches report that when looting took place, the gunboat Wyvern landed men to preserve order, and it was believed that the nationalists intended to occupy the British concession there. Women and children were taken out of Kiukiang on Thursday.

COMB SAGE TEA IN HAIR TO DARKEN IT

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product for only 75 cents. It is improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.—(adv.)

MARCUS LOEW, JR., VISITS ATLANTA

In the new Loew theater to be erected soon on the site of the present Loew's Grand theater and adjoining property recently leased, Atlanta will have the biggest, prettiest and finest theater in the entire south, according to David Loew, son of Marcus Loew, who is with the real estate department of the famous Loew theatrical organization. Mr. Loew and David Picker, head of the real estate department, are in Atlanta inspecting the new site and working out real estate details of the $8,000,000 deal closed recently under which the property on Forsyth and Houston streets was acquired from the DeGive interests.

Both Mr. Loew and Mr. Picker expressed complete confidence in the future business growth of Atlanta and both joined in the statement that Loew's, Inc., will give Atlanta the greatest theater in the entire south.

Announcement of the closing of the recent deal was made during the Christmas holidays in The Constitution by E. A. Schiller, vice president of Loew's, Inc., and general representative of Loew interests.

Here for Several Days.

David Loew and Mr. Picker have been in Atlanta several days inspecting property recently acquired for the theater and will make a general insection of realty holdings of the Loew organization in the southern states.

Although quite a young man, Mr. Loew displayed a keen knowledge of business conditions and real estate values in the south during his talk to newspapermen here. He also is in close touch with the theatrical situation.

"We have the utmost confidence in the growth and expansion of our amusement interests in the south and particularly are satisfied with conditions in Atlanta," Mr. Loew said. "Why, our Atlanta theater was one of the theaters that gave us our start."

Mr. Loew began work in the theatrical business as an usher in one of his father's theaters and in a few weeks was given a post as ticket taker in the upper gallery of the theater.

Reversed Usual Order.

"I went to work high up in the gallery," he said. "In other words, I began my theatrical career at the top and worked down."

Mr. Picker, who has been at the head of the real estate department of the Loew organization for many years, also was highly pleased with the prospects of the Loew organization in Atlanta.

"We already have reached a stage in our progress here where we can assure Atlanta of possessing soon the finest theater in all the south," he said.

While here the visitors were entertained by Howard McCoy, southeastern representative of the Loew organization, with headquarters in Atlanta, and Manager Thomas H. James, of Loew's Grand theater. Mr. Loew and Mr. Picker will go to New Orleans from Atlanta.

Noted Evangelist To Conduct Revival At Central Church

Gipsy Smith, Jr., widely-known evangelist, will visit Atlanta after closing a series of engagements at Memphis, Tenn., on January 16, to address Atlanta audiences at the Central Presbyterian church from January 18 to 30, according to announcement by Dr. W. E. Davis, pastor.

GIPSY SMITH, JR.

The noted religionist will speak every night except Saturday at 7:45 o'clock. On Sundays he will hold services in the morning at 11 o'clock, and for men only at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, in addition to the regular evening services. This will be the first occasion on which Mr. Smith has been in Atlanta to hold a series of revivals. Early last October he was giving a similar series of lectures at Griffin and came to Atlanta Sunday, October 3, to speak in one of the churches here. News of his engagement here brought out a crowd that could not be provided for by the church's seating capacity.

The lectures on Mr. Smith's coming visit will be of a general nature to arouse interest for the Christian church as a whole, and the general public is invited to attend the meetings. Special musical programs to be participated in by a choir chorus of 100 voices now being trained for that purpose will be given in conjunction with the evening services.

Mr. Smith comes from a family noted for its evangelistic tendencies, his father having attained fame in that service.

W. B. STEWART ASSUMES OFFICE AS COMMISSIONER

County Commissioner Walter B. Stewart, appointed chairman of the police committee of the commission last Wednesday at its first meeting of 1927, was officially introduced to the county police department Saturday morning.

Edwin F. Johnson, chairman of the commission, in a brief talk to members of the police department introduced the new chairman and expressed appreciation of the board for the excellent service rendered by County Police Chief George Mathieson and his 35 men.

"We have, undoubtedly, the greatest county police department in the state, and no more capable head could be obtained than your chief and friend, Chief Mathieson," Mr. Johnson said. He commented at length on the "smoothness in which the department operated" and pointed out with praise the cooperation manifested throughout the department.

Commissioner Stewart also commended the department. He expressed pleasure as being the chairman of the police committee.

George M. Hope, the other member of the police committee, also praised the department.

DR. PARKS' MEMORY HONORED BY ALUMNAE

Memorial services in memory of Dr. M. M. Parks, former president of the Georgia State College for Women at Milledgeville, who was killed in Florida in an automobile accident December 29, were held recently at the Henry Grady hotel by the Atlanta Alumnae association of the school. Dr. H. J. Gaertner, a former member of the school faculty, led the simple service. Several members of the association spoke at the meeting. Mrs. Marguerite Bowden and Mrs. Hoyle Wilson were in charge.

POSTOFFICES ROBBED, INSPECTOR LEARNS

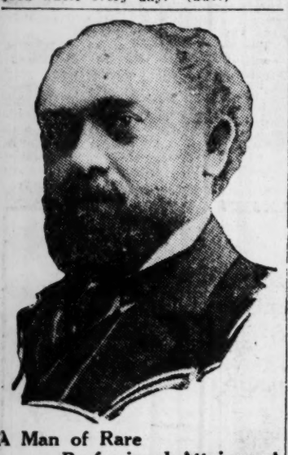

Postoffices at Brookman, Ga., and Trilby, Fla., were robbed Friday night, according to telegrams received Saturday by Postoffice Inspector in Charge Joe P. Johnston. Four c. o. d. packages were stolen from the Brookman postoffice, while $15 in money was taken from the Trilby office.

TAKE SALTS FOR A KIDNEY BACKACHE

Too much rich food forms acids which excite and overwork the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Flush the kidneys occasionally to relieve them like you relieve the bowels, removing acids, waste and poison, else you may feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, the stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get irritated, obliging one to get up two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste, begin drinking water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine and bladder disorders disappear.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help prevent serious kidney and bladder disorders. By all means drink lots of good water every day.—(adv.)

Mobley Will Cut Expenses In Bank Department, He Says In Outlining His Policies

New Banking Head Will Consolidate Offices and Promises Systematic Administration.

Outlining plans for administration of affairs of the state banking department, A. B. Mobley, of Monroe, recently appointed head of that department, issued a statement Saturday in which he declared that all branches of the department will be consolidated in offices to be established at the state capitol by February 1. Several branches are now located in the Connally building.

Mr. Mobley also announced that he would cut down to the lowest possible point expenses of the department for legal service in connection with liquidation of suspended banks.

Mr. Mobley declared that there are now 144 closed banks in Georgia in process of liquidation. He said banks themselves were largely responsible for the present situation. He promised his best efforts in solving problems faced by the banking department and reorganizing along lines which will reduce the number of closed banks to a minimum.

Mobley's Statement.

Following is his statement, in part:

"In assuming the position of superintendent of banks of the state of Georgia, I am deeply conscious of the responsibilities of the position, and yet I am profoundly grateful for the call for service.

"Next to our churches and schools, our banks are our greatest institutions. They provide a place where the combined financial resources of the state may be pooled into a fund for the common use of all who merit it. It is the duty of every one to make a contribution to this fund so that it may be constant and available for public use at all times. The security and safety of this common fund should be unquestioned and the use made of it should be for the good of all. It is of supreme importance therefore that the banks should function efficiently."

"While banks are organized for financial gain, the measure of this gain is the quality and quantity of the service rendered. The law of compensation cannot be violated; one cannot keep anything that he does not use justly and wisely. The banks themselves may be primarily responsible for the condition that exists at the present time. They may not have used the money entrusted to them justly or wisely; they may have extended credit too generously, encouraging extravagance and waste, resulting in a depletion of the common fund. It may be that the Lord of the vineyard has found some of them unjust stewards and has taken from them the talent entrusted to them. At any rate, the people's confidence has been shaken in banks and deposits have been withdrawn and are being withheld. Be that as it may, there is plenty of blame to share with all. The people of Georgia have sustained a great financial loss within the past few years by deflation, which can never be wholly restored, but the most serious loss has been in confidence in banks and in each other. . . . .

Beliefs as Official.

"I believe that every public officer should at all times give to the public full information as to the public affairs entrusted to him, and keep them informed as to the policies being pursued by him.

"I have been in office only five days. In that time I have not had time to acquaint myself fully as to the complete status of affairs.

"I find that the department on January 1 had under its supervision 425 banks in operation. It is my duty to examine these banks to see that they are functioning properly and efficiently; that they are obeying the letter and spirit of the law; that their officers and directors are able and honest. The relationship of superintendent of banks to banks under his supervision is similar to that of a father to a son, a guardian to ward, and sometimes a sheriff with a warrant. I want to cooperate to the limit of my powers in helpfulness, in sympathy and in kindness with the officers of these banks. At the same time, I will demand of the officers and directors of the bank the same kind of cooperation. All of us must obey the banking laws, as there is no liberty outside of them.

"Immediately upon assuming office, I called my staff of examiners, and there are eight, into my office and reappointed them, and gave them an outline of my policy, and they have been reassigned to their old territory and are on duty. Considering their ability and experience, they are the best men I could procure, and will be retained so long as they render acceptable service to the department. If I find that additional examiners are needed, I will employ others.

Present Condition Given.

"I find that the department has 144 closed banks in process of liquidation. Of these banks, I find that five closed in 1920, 14 closed in 1921, seven closed in 1922, eight closed in 1923, 16 closed in 1924, 15 closed in 1925 and 79 closed in 1926. Under the law, these banks were turned over to the department for liquidation and liquidation means liquidation. My policy will be to complete the liquidation of these banks as rapidly as possible so that depositors and other creditors may be paid without unnecessary delay, keeping in mind the reduction of expenses without too great a sacrifice of assets.

"With that in view, I have called upon every liquidating agent who is in charge of a closed bank to file with me without delay a complete statement of the condition of his bank, together with an itemized statement of all receipts and disbursements since the bank was closed. Upon receipt of these statements, I shall adopt a definite policy as to each of these banks.

"These liquidating agents are under bond for faithful performance of duty, and will be retained no longer than their services are needed, and when discontinued, their accounts will be checked and audited.

"I have made no contract for legal services, and will not do so until I find the need for them. I find a contract is now in effect covering legal services in connection with banks now in liquidation, and in most cases the fees earned and to be earned have already been approved, as provided by law, by the judges of the superior courts of the counties in which the closed banks are located.

Hopes for the Best.

"I trust that there will be no more bank failures in Georgia, and that very little legal expense will be necessary in the conduct of the department. I am inclined to believe that the employment of local counsel in connection with closed banks will be more satisfactory. However, since the superintendent can only be sued in Fulton county, it may be necessary to employ a general counsel to conduct this litigation and give him general supervision over the local. I am open-minded as to this, however.

"Just as soon as quarters are provided in the basement of the state capitol for the necessary clerical force, I will consolidate the entire banking department therein. This, in my opinion, will make for better service. I am assured that these quarters will be ready for the department not later than February 1.

"Thus far I have gone. I must make haste slowly. I will take the public into my confidence as I proceed further.

"In conclusion, I ask the citizens of Georgia to be patient with me. Believe me when I say that I want to give to the state a safe, sound and economical administration.

(Signed) "A. B. MOBLEY."

GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL TO ADDRESS LUNCHEON

Joseph Clark Grew, undersecretary of state, former United States minister to Switzerland and Denmark and an outstanding authority on international affairs, will be guest of honor of the chamber of commerce and the Atlanta Foreign Trade club at a joint luncheon to be held on Monday, January 17 in the general assembly hall of the chamber at 12:30 o'clock.

In addition to members of the chamber and foreign trade club, an invitation is extended to all Atlantans interested in our present relations with other countries and various aspects of modern diplomacy. The luncheon will be served at 75 cents a plate, Mr. Barker, executive vice president of the chamber, stated.

Mr. Grew has had long experience in the diplomatic service. Following several years' service in Mexico and Russia, he was appointed counsellor of the American embassy at Berlin in 1916, remaining there until the break in our relations with Germany in 1917. He then proceeded to Vienna and was charge d'affaires of the American government when relations were broken with Austria.

Shortly before the close of the war, Mr. Grew was appointed secretary general of the American commission to negotiate peace at Paris, bearing at that time the rank of minister plenipotentiary. He later served as unofficial observer at the first Lausanne peace conference and was appointed by the president to negotiate the American treaty with Turkey, which he signed on August 6, 1923, and has taken part in other international conferences. He has served as the undersecretary of state since April 16, 1924.

Mr. Grew is a very effective speaker, and with his wide experience, is in a position to place before Atlantans a constructive and entertaining message on the activities of our government through the machinery of the state department, as well as first-hand facts on our international dealings.

LEG MISLAID

Postmaster Large Gets Unexpected Support.

Many queer things have been misdirected in the mails and become lost, but perhaps one of the most unusual ever received at the Atlanta postoffice is an artificial limb received Saturday by Postmaster E. K. Large.

Entirely at loss as to the reason anyone should send him a wooden leg, as he has two perfectly good legs of his own, Mr. Large did not know just what to make of the package for a while, and, finally, in a quandry, ordered the leg kept in the local postoffice in the hope that some explanation will follow through the mail or the mystery will be cleared in some manner by the sender. Addressed to "The Postmaster, Atlanta, Ga.," the large box was brought into Mr. Large's office at the postoffice.

KENTUCKIAN HEADS SHORTHAND WRITERS

Harry G. Bright, of Frankfort, Ky., was elected president of the Southeastern Shorthand Reporters' association in annual session Saturday morning at the Fulton county courthouse.

Other officers named were E. L. Kiker, of Cordele, Ga., vice president, and Charles M. Fain, of Chattanooga, Tenn., secretary and treasurer.

Approximately 20 delegates representing southern states attended. The business session got under way at 10:30 o'clock Saturday morning and was followed by a luncheon to the association at the Kimball house. H. L. Parry, retiring president, was in charge of arrangements.

Following the luncheon a round table discussion featured the afternoon session. This was a new feature as previous sessions of the organization usually adjourn after the morning business session, Mr. Parry stated.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

Mother! It's Cruel to "Physic" Your Child

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even if the child is chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement, but, best of all, it never gripes, sickens or upsets the most delicate system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine or write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, for a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE and just see for yourself.

POSTMASTER SEEKS SISTER OF DYING BIRMINGHAM MAN

Search for the sister of a man dying in a Birmingham hospital from pneumonia, Saturday revolved about the "general delivery" window in the Atlanta postoffice, that narrow window so often the center of human affairs. Failing to find Mrs. Irene Fritts through the general delivery department, Postmaster E. K. Large appealed to The Constitution to aid in the quest.

If Mrs. Fritts is in Atlanta, she is requested to get in touch with the Birmingham long distance operator at once, for her brother, Hugh, is at the point of death in that city. Or should anyone have any information as to Mrs. Fritts' whereabouts, they are urged to get in touch with Postmaster Large.

Mrs. Fritts formerly lived at 307-A Rawson street, but postoffice authorities have been unable to get in touch with her. Notice was left for her at the general delivery window, where she had been receiving her mail. News of the serious illness of the brother was first received by Postmaster Large in a long distance message from Birmingham, later substantiated by a telegram.

LARGER QUARTERS TO BE OBTAINED BY ODD FELLOWS

Adequate quarters for the various branches of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows in Atlanta are being sought by Canton Dixie, highest ranking lodge in the city, it was announced Saturday with the appointment of a committee to arrange for the purchase or construction of a satisfactory building.

Several properties are already under consideration by the committee, which will hold a meeting Tuesday night to organize a subsidiary and draw up an application for charter of incorporation, it was stated. It is proposed that eventually a temple will be secured to house the grand lodge of Georgia.

WHOLESALE FRAUDS CHARGED BY WILSON IN VARE'S ELECTION

DEMOCRAT OPENS FIGHT TO PREVENT SEATING OF VARE

Senator Robinson Gives Notice He Will Ask Impounding of All Ballots Cast in Pennsylvania.

DEAD MEN VOTED, SAYS CONTESTANT

Men in Hospitals, Former Residents and Minors Placed on Registration Lists, Says Petition.

Washington, January 8.—(AP)—Another obstacle was thrown today into the pathway to the senate of William S. Vare, republican senator-elect from Pennsylvania.

It was in the form of a petition of contest of his election by William B. Wilson, labor secretary in the Wilson administration, who charges that Vare became the beneficiary of wholesale frauds in registration and voting in the November elections. Wilson, as a democrat, opposed Vare at the polls.

In presenting the petition to the senate, Senator Robinson, the democratic leader, gave notice that he would introduce a resolution later directing a senate committee to impound all of the ballots cast in the Pennsylvania senatorial contest to prevent their destruction.

Undecided on Course.

While standing behind Mr. Wilson in his contest, senate democrats are undecided whether the ballots should be collected by an elections subcommittee, the usual procedure, or by the special campaign funds committee, which disclosed expenditures of $3,000,000 in the Pennsylvania primary in which Vare defeated Senator Pepper.

Senator Robinson said the contest brought by the democratic nominee for senator was wholly apart from the fight that will be made to prevent Vare from taking his seat because of the expenditure of approximately $800,000 in his primary campaign.

A partial report on its investigation of the Pennsylvania primary has been made by the campaign funds committee and on the basis of this some democrats have announced that they would undertake to prevent Vare from taking the oath pending a hearing before the elections committee.

Smith Arrives This Week.

A similar move is to be made when Frank L. Smith, senator-designate from Illinois, presents his credentials to the senate. Mr. Smith is expected to arrive here next week, and although he will hold an appointment from Governor Small, a fight will be made against him because of contributions made to his primary campaign fund by Samuel Insull and other officials of public utilities in Illinois.

Personal expenditures of $71,000 by Vare in his primary campaign were made a part of the petition of Mr. Wilson, who asserted this violated the corrupt practices act of 1925, which limits expenditures of a candidate for senator to $25,000.

Wilson also raised the contention that under the law of Pennsylvania the primary is an essential step in the selection of a senator.

Many Frauds Charged.

In addition to this charge, the petition asserted that there were widespread registration frauds in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and other cities, and that registration lists were padded with the names of dead men and women; with the names of voters sick and in hospitals, and with the names of minors and former residents in voting districts.

The petition also charged that these methods of "corrupt registration and illegal voting were bulwarked by systematic and adroit terrorism and intimidation." It added that "a colossal political machine exists in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh with influence ramifying throughout the state," and that "it is necessary in the interests of justice that the senate take appropriate measures" to impound the ballots.

VERMONT LACKING MOUNTAIN TO NAME AFTER PRESIDENT

Rutland, Vt., January 8.—(AP)—The plan to give the name of President Coolidge, native son to Vermont, to some lofty peak in the Green mountain state has failed for lack of a mountain.

J. L. Griswold, chairman of the nomenclature committee of the Green Mountain club, reported at the annual meeting of that body here today that there was no unnamed mountain in the state worthy of the president's name.

Several months ago the proposal was made that some large and hitherto nameless peak be dedicated as a fitting and permanent memorial to Mr. Coolidge.

1927 CITY BUDGET $2,500,000 ABOVE EXPECTED INCOME

Finance Committee Must Wield Pruning Knife Heavily If Tax Increase Is Avoided.

When the finance committee of city council holds its initial meeting at 11 o'clock Monday morning, it will face the hopeless task of providing a total of approximately $2,500,000 in excess of contemplated revenue to meet needs of various city departments and providing for retirement of the school deficit.

Estimates of department heads as tabulated Saturday by B. Graham West, city comptroller, placed the needs of department heads at about $750,000 in excess of the city's contemplated revenue. To this total will be added approximately $731,000 in the budget approved tentatively by the school board and a school department deficit of $952,000 carried over from last year, thus making the total about $2,500,000.

Those familiar with the situation declare that the city government cannot possibly meet these demands without additional revenue, and Councilman Horace Russell Friday favored a special school tax or an increase in the tax rate.

Dr. R. M. Eubanks, president of the Atlanta board of education, Saturday admitted that the board has tentatively agreed to a school budget of $3,331,039.79, figures carried exclusively Friday in The Constitution. This means that the difference between the $2,600,000 which nominally would go to the schools by law, and the total amount of the budget must be raised by some method. The finance committee will be called upon to provide this amount if the citizens' committee selected to supervise school expenditures for 1927 agrees to the proposal.

Citizen Leaders To Meet.

Members of the citizens' committee will meet at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon to consider the school budget. The session will be held in the office of Harold Hirsch and will be open to newspapermen. The current expenditures committee of the board Friday considered the budget in a closed-door session, excluding the public as well as newspapermen.

It is expected that a joint meeting of the board of education and the citizens' committee will be held about Tuesday or Wednesday and that a budget on which both bodies agree will be ready to go to the finance committee about Thursday.

Members of the citizens' committee, in addition to Mr. Hirsch, who is chairman, are H. Y. McCord, Warner Martin, William Perkerson and W. W. Orr.

Thus, while the schools' financial situation will not come officially before the finance committee at its session Monday, it is expected that the finance body will bear in mind the

HISTORIC ISLANDS BLOSSOMING OUT AS HUGE RESORT

Pretentious Building Program Under Way on St. Simon's Island and Glynn-Isle.

BY BEN COOPER,
Staff Correspondent.

Brunswick, Ga., January 8.—(Special)—Upon mellow sands of St. Simon's island and Glynn-Isle, hallowed by oft-told tales of Spanish monks and missions, an English gentleman named Oglethorpe, bloody battles and a sweet singer of the old south, Lanier, within the near future will rise one of the greatest resort developments on the South Atlantic coast, according to plans of Howard E. Coffin, Detroit millionaire, and his associates.

Landscape sketches and plans for the first unit, the Tolomato Country club, have already been drafted. Actual work is expected to start soon, and by the end of the year the development should be well underway. The country club will stand near to the beach at the south end of St. Simon's island, facing Jekyl island across the sound, and will be the center of a winter community with golf, fishing, hunting and other sports as some of the main attractions.

Is Tribute to Coffin.

Far-sighted, practical vision of Howard Coffin is responsible for the plan for the development planned by St. Island Investments, Inc., of which he is president. Paul J. Varner and Charles Wright are vice presidents, and Lena M. Carle is secretary-treasurer. The company was organized to develop 2,000 acres, known as King's Retreat and Palm harbor on the south end of St. Simon's island, and the entire area of Glynn-Isle, which is five miles long, with a 400-foot beach at low water.

Realizing several years ago that the natural beauty of the Georgia coast, together with many other advantages, makes of the coastal islands veritable paradises, Mr. Coffin bought Sapelo island and erected a magnificent winter home, at the same time becoming interested in the seafood resources of the coast and buying thousands of acres of marsh lands threaded by salt creeks whose beds are covered with oysters. His purchase of the St. Simon's and Glynn-Isle properties soon followed.

From the standpoint of sheer beauty of an exotic, semi-tropical type, the scene of the Coffin development can scarcely be equaled anywhere. Here are great cathedral arches formed by gigantic live oaks festooned with long clusters of Spanish moss, forming a symphony in grey, with a relief of green, and touches of scarlet and ver-

S. C. MAGISTRATE FLAYED BY JUDGE

Seven-Year Term Given School Boy Is Reduced To Two Hours With Fine of One Dollar.

Anderson, S. C., January 8.—(AP) An Oconee county magistrate who recently sentenced a school boy to seven years in the reformatory for writing indecent language on the school's blackboard, must have imagined he was living in the time of Barnaby Rudge, according to Judge William H. Grimball, of Charleston.

Judge Grimball's order, just handed down on the appeal from the magistrate's court, reduced the sentence from seven years to two hours, and included the alternative payment of $1 fine.

The case was that of the state against Judan Owens, 14-year-old school boy, and the appeal was taken from the court of Magistrate W. M. Dillard, of Oconee.

After his preliminary remarks, Judge Grimball says that "a careful study of the record before me discloses that the defendant, a boy of 14 years of age, entered a schoolhouse and wrote indecent language on the blackboard. For this he was sentenced to the Florence reformatory until he should be 20 years of age, a period of seven years."

Judge Grimball's order adds that "Judge Dillard, in passing sentence on this young boy, must have imagined himself living in the times of Barnaby Rudge, as related by Sir William Meredith in his speech in parliament on 'frequent executions' delivered in 1777, in which speech Sir William recited the case of Mary Jones, who was hanged at Tyburn for taking some coarse linen off the counter of a linen draper's shop.

"Fortunately for us who live today, this is a more Christian age, and those of us who follow His teachings and who remember their own boyhood days, have ever a tender feeling of charity towards boys and girls."

EUROPE IS TORN BY WHISPERING OF ENEMY SPIES

Even Staid British Are Drawn Into General Fever of Suspicion and Scouting.

FRENCH, GERMAN "PLOTS" POPPING

And, Along Mediterranean, Mussolini, Rivera and Kemal Pasha's Iron Rules Keep Pot Boiling.

London, January 8.—(AP)—Europe is being stirred by its first international scare since the world war.

Secret agents, mystery women, melodramatic plots and counter-plots—all the adventurous secret service stories of prewar days when every European country was supposed to be spied on and plotted against by every other country—are being revived by sensational "revelations" in a half dozen countries.

Scotland Yard has redoubled its watch for spies at the channel ports. Sir Wyndham Childs, one of Scotland Yard's chiefs, knows almost the hourly movement of every suspected foreigner in Great Britain. Even American residents, who generally are considered harmless, must have identity cards, and must report their movements in Great Britain to the police.

Pops in Paris.

The spy plot excitement began popping in earnest with the arrest in Paris recently of a former officer in the British army. Graham Vivian Stranders, whose wife is German. He is awaiting trial as a German spy. Then a woman, known as the "eye of Moscow," recently was imprisoned in France. In Essen a long trusted German employee of the famous Krupps works was arrested and charged with espionage in behalf of France. He was reported to have committed suicide after his arrest.

Czecho-Slovakia furnished the most sensational spy drama of all in the retirement of Rudolph Gaida, young hero of the Czech legions in Siberia, from high army rank after a scandal involving wine, women and military secrets. Gaida is alleged to have been mixed up in the meshes of the soviet secret service which is the bogie of all the European governments.

Great Britain is ever watchful against "soviet spies." Even a party of innocent appearing Russian teachers, desirous of attending an educational convention in England, have been refused admission to the country.

On Mediterranean.

In the Mediterranean countries, the rule of Mussolini, De Rivera and Mustapha Kemal Pasha have resulted in numerous plots and counter-plots. They are mostly domestic affairs, but the secret service nets often catch foreigners involved in them.

At the root of Europe's revived spy system is the fact that although the League of Nations eliminates the old European menace of secret treaties, it does not touch the secret services. Consequently the governments are still spending large sums of money watching each other.

So far as known, Great Britain and the United States are the only countries having a gentlemen's agreement to put their cards on the table and boldly ask each other for any information desired, military or otherwise. If the information wanted is so secret that the other country cannot disclose it, the gentlemen's agreement is that there will be no spying, snooping or plotting to get it.

FATHERS REVEAL HIDING PLACES OF DAUGHTERS

Kansas City, January 8.—(AP)—Two fathers who chose to stay in jail rather than reveal the whereabouts of their two daughters were free today on charges of contempt of court.

James A. Hall spent 15 months in the Wyandotte county jail in Kansas City, Kans., rather than tell where his 9-year-old daughter was, so that the child's mother, from whom he was divorced, could have her.

William O. Stone, a barber of Fort Worth, Texas, stayed 40 days in the Fort Worth jail for the same reason.

Both capitulated yesterday and expressed a willingness to reveal their daughters' present addresses. Hall's imprisonment may have gone for naught, however, as he told the court today he had placed Grace Angela, the daughter, in an orphanage in a distant state, and that possibly she had been adopted by now. A search will be made for the girl.

Both fathers were alleged to have kidnaped their daughters following court decisions giving custody to their divorced wives.

Stone was remanded in jail to await bond on a charge of kidnaping his 10-year-old daughter.

$500,000 LOAN TO CITY SCHOOL BOARD REPAID

Note Indorsed by Citizen-Leaders Who Made Advance Possible Paid and Cancelled.

EUBANKS SEES NO RECURRENCE

Board Chief Says Not One Penny Above School Budget Will Be Spent This Year.

Repayment of the $500,000 loan made upon a note indorsed last December by private citizens of the city and used to pay salaries to teachers of local schools when a financial crisis impended on the Atlanta school board was announced Saturday by B. Graham West, city comptroller.

The shortage of funds created a furore in the educational organization, coming as it did prior to the Christmas season.

Following announcement of the note's cancellation, Dr. R. M. Eubanks, president of the board of education, announced that the board this year will live within its budget, regardless of the sum agreed upon.

"There will be no recurrence of lack of funds this year," Dr. Eubanks said. "No matter what the budget finally agreed on is, we shall not spend one dime outside of it. Criticism which last fall was heaped on the board because it tried to give Atlanta a good system will not be repeated.

"If Atlantans want an adequate school system, funds must be provided. We will give them the kind of system they want. If they provide enough money, they will have a good system; if they do not, they will not have a good one, because we will not have the money to make it good."

Bees 'Talk' By Dancing, Says German

Running About in Zig-Zag Manner Said To Indicate Anger.

New York, January 8.—Remarkable discoveries concerning the ways of bees have been announced from Germany, where, after years of research, Dr. Karl Von Frisch believes he has solved the mystery of how these insects "talk," it was disclosed here today.

Dr. Von Frisch reached the conclusion that bees do at any rate some of their talking by means of well defined, rythmic movements that might almost be termed dancing and call attention to a good patch of flowers by signaling. A hive bee signifies that it is puzzled, he declares, by repeatedly walking about in a figure of eight. To announce that it has just found a flowery meadow it walks around in linked circles, each a little farther to the right than the last so that its charted course looks like a chain.

Running about in a zigzag manner indicates anger. Walking forward in such a manner as if it were climbing one of those steep Alpine roads that go up and up and parallels connected by hairpin bends indicates that the bee is about to take the wing in quest of pollen.

MRS. DOCKERILL LOSES SECOND "PEACHES" SUIT

New York, January 8.—For the second time, the $150,000 damage suit of Mrs. Marion Dockerill against Mrs. Edward W. (Peaches) Browning, was dismissed today.

Supreme Court Justice Crain ordered the action discontinued because of failure to file the complaint within the specified time. A similar technicality ended the first suit.

Mrs. Dockerill accused the former Frances Heenan of slandering her in newspaper articles about her life with Browning, the rich real estate man who married her. Mrs. Dockerill said she had been referred to as the head of a love cult and "a female oom the omnipotent," who had influenced Browning with her doctrines.

The joint suits of Browning and his wife to sever their marriage tie will be heard on January 24.

RAGSDALE TO REQUEST BEAVERS FOR ARREST OF ALL 'JAY WALKERS'

Mayor Praises Constitution And Calls for Cooperation

"Editor Constitution: Please permit me to express my sincere thanks for your great editorials in your great paper that have appeared in the last few days relative to some of the policies that I propose to pursue. I hardly know how to thank you as I should because there is nothing that means quite as much to the city as our great papers, and if I can have their cooperation on my important policies it will mean much to me.

"May I ask you, if it is not asking too much, to give as much publicity to the traffic situation as you can between now and Monday, as I consider this one of the most serious problems we have to face and we want the people educated as fairly as possible to the importance of obeying traffic signals.

(Signed) "I. N. RAGSDALE,
January 8, 1927. "Mayor."

EUBANKS NAMES NEW COMMITTEES

Few Changes of Personnel Made in Board of Education Committees, Announcement Reveals.

Few changes in standing committees of the Atlanta board of education were made Saturday by Dr. R. M. Eubanks, reelected as president at the organization meeting of the 1927 board today. All chairmen were reappointed and the only shifts were made because of changes in the personnel of the board.

FASCISM ENLISTS YOUTH OF ITALY

Mussolini Program Also Includes System of Propagandized Schools and Solidarity.

Rome, January 8.—(AP)—Fascism's fifth year of existence will be devoted to mobilization of Italy's youth into "black shirt" ranks, education of the masses and an intense campaign of productive labor.

This is the program for 1927 mapped out by Premier Mussolini at two long night sessions of the grand fascist council, the proceedings of which were announced tonight.

Efficiency by singleness of purpose is the watchword of a series of resolutions adopted by the council, with the intention of eliminating all friction and wastage in time and energy.

The fascist program was drawn up by the "supreme organ of the revolution," as the fascist grand council is called, after Mussolini had analyzed past achievements and set forth the future problems of the regime in a three-hour address, the nature of which is being kept secret.

Henceforth the country will have only three official holidays—"Youths' day," March 23; the anniversary of the founding of the first fascist labor day, April 21, and "victory day," October 28, which is the anniversary of the fascist march on Rome.

The only other cleberations tolerated, it is announced, will be those devoted to "consecration of the work effected in the field of labor."

The program of the fascist party, which has been subordinate to the fascist regime, is defined as, first, education of the masses; second, disciplined collaboration with the authorities of the state; third, improvement in the fascist ranks in order to be able to furnish the men necessary for political, military, administrative and corporative positions in the state, and, fourth, to display the fundamental virtues of fascism in devotion, sacrifice and silent laboriousness.

BATTLE LOOMING ON FARM RELIEF

Sharp Fight Is Expected To Center Around Equalization Fee in McNary-Haugen Bill.

Washington, January 8.—(AP)—Completing hearings on a half dozen farm relief proposals, the house agriculture committee cleared its decks today for action on the new McNary-Haugen measure with indications that a sharp fight will result when it is taken up Tuesday over its equalization fee on basic commodities to control crop surpluses.

Relief advocates also were ready to open fire in the senate where Chairman McNary has ordered hearings by the agriculture committee on the farm question early in the week.

With farm leaders agreed that the principal fight in congress will be over the proposed equalization fee, there was considerable speculation as to what bills eventually would emerge from committees. As far as the house group is concerned, the sentiment among oponents of the fee appeared to lean towards the Curtis-Crisp bipartisan compromise measure, principally because it is said to have the partial indorsement of Secretary Jardine.

Louisiana, however, said he had lined up substantial support for his proposal which, lathough differing from the Curtis-Crisp bill, in several important details, also omits the equalization fee.

Among the house and senate members favoring the fee, the McNary-Haugen measure has incurred virtually unanimous favor.

The Curtis-Crisp bill attracted considerable attention due to an inference by Representative Aswell that it might have been written in Secretary Jardine's office, but this brought a denial from Representative Crisp, democrat, Georgia, before the house committee today. He said this bill had the "partial but not unqualified approval" of Mr. Jardine.

The Georgia representative appealed for relinquishment "on pride of ownership" among those who have drafted farm relief bills, in the hope of bringing out a measure reasonably sure of passage. He suggested that the committee take his bill, amend if it saw fit and report it under the McNary-Haugen label.

INFLUENZA HITS 2 U. S. WARSHIPS

Twelve Virulent Cases Found on Each of Two Destroyers Held as Cuba Cruise Starts.

Norfolk, Va., January 8.—(AP)—Outbreaks of a virulent type of influenza on the destroyers Lawrence and Reuben James sent them into the Norfolk navy yard today as most of the scouting fleet, of which they are units, sailed this afternoon for Cuba.

On each of the destroyers, which are of division 40, between 12 and 15 cases of the disease have developed. All are enlisted men.

There have been no fatalities.

The malady was contracted at New York, the vessels having been at the Brooklyn navy yard for a month previous to their coming to Yorktown two days ago to take stores preparatory to going south for winter maneuvers.

MAYOR DECLARES TRAFFIC IS VITAL PROBLEM OF CITY

Will Recommend Making Cases Against All Pedestrian Violators of Signal Lights Monday.

CHIEF LISTS 'DON'TS' FOR PEDESTRIANS

Beavers Thanks Constitution for "Educational Work" and Says Officers Are "Warning" Public.

Having given fair and repeated warnings that pedestrians must obey traffic system regulations and refrain from "jay-walking" and crossing street intersections in the face of red and amber signal lights, Mayor I. N. Ragsdale announced Saturday night that he is prepared to ask Chief of Police James L. Beavers to begin Monday a sweeping campaign for law observance.

The mayor told The Constitution he would recommend to the chief that cases be made against every person, regardless of age, sex or condition, who ignores the signal system's warnings and is guilty of "jay-walking."

Wants Drastic Action.

"I regard correction of Atlanta's disordered traffic situation as one of the most important problems now facing the city," the mayor told The Constitution. "I know the regulations of the traffic signal system should be rigidly enforced, and I am confident that drastic action on the part of the police would bring an immediate and conclusive change in the attitude of pedestrians generally toward it.

"I shall urge upon Chief Beavers that he begin Monday morning making cases against every person who violates the law. It is my hope that the police will enter determinedly into the campaign and clear up a situation which is losing invaluable time to the public and retarding civic progress. It can and must be done."

Chief Lists "Don'ts."

Chief Beavers Saturday stated that his traffic men are warning pedestrians to observe traffic laws exactly as motorists have learned to do. He expressed appreciation of educational propaganda published by The Constitution looking to strict compliance on the part of pedestrians with the traffic laws. The chief asked The Constitution to publish for the information of the walking public the following list of "dont's":

DON'T cross the streets except at intersections or designated crossings.

DON'T stand in the street when leaving a street car, step to the curb.

DON'T linger in the street.

DON'T walk thoughtlessly.

DON'T walk between parked cars.

DON'T leave curb without looking in both directions.

DON'T undertake to be the first one across without looking for the last car.

DON'T rush, it may cost you your life.

DON'T forget you're in the city now.

Begun By Bagsdale.

The movement looking for reform of Atlanta's traffic situation was begun by Mayor Ragsdale in his inaugural address to city council, in which he recommended that the police immediately act to bring about a pedestrian respect for the city's traffic regulations.

Judges of recorder's court have pledged to cooperate in whatever steps the police may take to this end; citizens generally have expressed approval of the effort to place local enforcement of traffic laws on a par with that of other cities, and everything now awaits action on the part of Chief Beavers.

Codfish Caused Discovery

DENIES COLUMBUS WAS DISCOVERER

Of America, Says Frenchman

Paris, January 8.—(AP)—Codfish, and not the riches of India, was the inspiration that led to the discovery of America, and it wasn't Christopher Columbus but a Frenchman who made the discovery, anyway, says a well-known French writer, Leon Sazie.

The desire of the people along the Basque coast, Sazie says in an article published here, to eat codfish, not only on Fridays but on most of the other days of the week, led to America's discovery.

Anyone at all conversant with history, he says, knows that the people of Spain and the French Basques got into the habit of eating codfish long before 1492, and the place where the fishermen went to fetch their favorite food was off the New Foundland banks.

"The wealth of India myth as a determining factor in the discovery of America is exploded," the writer says.

In fact, he continues, it was these Basque fishermen who first took Columbus across the ocean, having crossed it themselves long before.

The next startling theory advanced by M. Sazie is how the Navajo Indians got their name. There were a lot of people, the theory runs, from Navarre and Gascony on the New Foundland fishing trips, and what could be more natural than that the Navajo Indians got their names from the Frenchmen, who hobnobbed with the North American Indians long before Columbus was born.

Hardy Basque fishermen, in fact, Sazie says, knew their way around the world before Magellan made his famous voyage of circumnavigation. As proof he cites various names borne by members of the Japanese aristocracy, which he says are Basque in origin, with the added assertion that there are many Basque and Gascon words and modes of expression in the Japanese language.

White House "Spokesman"

"WHO IS HE?" ASKS SENATOR REED

Is Under Fire Once More

Washington, January 8.—Who is the official white house "spokesman?"

Senator Jim Reed, Missouri, democrat, wants to know, he told the senate today as he rose to a "question of personal confusion."

"Morning newspaper accounts of Mr. Coolidge's Nicaraguan and Mexican views were accredited in some portions to the president and in others to a, 'mysterious phantom,' the white house spokesman," Senator Reed remarked.

"Charges have been made that the spokesman is Mr. Coolidge, himself, who conceals the identity of his remarks to newspaper men behind the impersonal authority of a 'spokesman,'" he said.

"For some weeks I have been wandering in mists of doubt and uncertainty in reference to the public business of the country," Reed continued, "then there was suddenly interjected into the newspapers a nameless individual called the 'spokesman' of the president.

"In the morning papers Mr. Coolidge was represented by the white house 'spokesman' as remarking conditions grave and serious in Nicaragua but the headlines attribute the statement to Mr. Coolidge himself."

The white house "spokesman" and the oracle at Delphi, which spoke what the gods were thinking, were likened by the keen wit of the Missouri senator.

Government Admits Running

MELLON PRAISES WORK OF ZIELASKI

Bridge Whist Club 'Speakeasy'

Washington, January 8.—Government operation of the Bridge Whist club as a New York city "speakeasy" was admitted today by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon in a reply to the house judiciary committee on the LaGuardia resolution.

However, Mellon denied that he knew in advance that the club was to be opened by the government. It was used, he said, to obtain evidence of dry law violations.

A. Bruce Bielaski and Ralph W. Bickle, two government agents, opened the Bridge-Whist club, Mellon told the committee, and were authorized to spend government funds in collection of law violation evidence.

Eleven questions concerning expenditures for operating the club were asked in the LaGuardia resolution.

Mellon refused to answer these questions on the ground that it "would lay open to violators of the prohibition act details as to means used by the treasury in obtaining evidence."

The treasury chief praised the work of Bielaski, and said, "The work of Mr. Bielaski has been exceedingly fruitful. Through him many large cases have been brought to trial and convictions had. The Dwyer case, resulting in the conviction of William Dwyer and his principal lieutenants, is an instance of Mr. Bielaski's 'under-cover' work."

While Mellon was explaining the activities of the government-operated "speakeasy" to the house committee, Representative Sol Bloom, New York, democrat, protested to the secretary on the poisoning of industrial alcohol.

"More men have been killed by government-poisoned liquor during the past year than have been hanged for murder," Bloom said.

"The law makes poisoning a murder in the first degree," he continued. "It does not specify that the prisoner must have chosen a particular victim in advance, and yet the government is engaged in this horrible practice."

M'KELLAR OPENS FIRE ON WOODS

Washington, January 8.—(AP)—Urging the unfitness of Cyrus E. Woods, of Pennsylvania, to be a member of the interstate commerce commission on many grounds, Senator McKellar, democrat, Tennessee, today asked the senate interstate commerce committee to report his nomination unfavorably.

With the exception of a brief statement to be made Monday by Senator Neeley, democrat, West Virginia, the Tennessean's argument closed the case against the former ambassador to Spain and Japan. Senators Reed and Pepper, republicans, Pennsylvania, will appear in his behalf Monday and then the committee will close its doors to reach its conclusion.

The first objection to Mr. Wood's appointment raised by Senator McKellar was that it was in violation of law because of the nominee's large holdings in stocks and bondst of railroads and coal companies.

By disqualifying himself to sit in the pending or any future lake cargo coal rate cases from Pennsylvania and the southern coal fields, Senator McKellar said Mr. Woods had impaired his efficiency as a prospective commissioner to such a point that his appointment should not be confirmed.

The Tennessee senator contended that Mr. Wood's own testimony that he was not familiar with rate making should bar him from office. He also held that the nominee felt his own unfitness for the place when he consulted Secretary Mellon as to whether he would fit into the job.

Referring to Mr. Wood's part in the $3,000,000 Pennsylvania primary, Senator McKellar said he had been drafted for that job and that he also had been drafted for the post of interstate commerce commissioner.

After Senator McKellar concluded Senator Sackett, republican, Kentucky, placed into the record a number of telegrams and letters of protest received from chambers of commerce and other business organizations in his state.

HISTORIC ISLAND WILL BE RESORT

million from leaves. Palmetto, longleaf pine, saba and other trees and vegetation abound, while the purest of drinking waters bubbles from the ground in strong artesian flow. Food is to be had for the mere dropping of a fish line with baited hook.

Beach Is Ideal Track.

Smooth as glass, the beach on Glyma-Isle furnishes an ideal racing track at low tide, hard, firm and long enough for a good run in a car. Other sports are afforded by the many bridle paths through verdant woods, inviting nooks for a swim or a fishing trip, open waters for deep-sea fishing or a sail on the "bounding main," game-filled forests for the hunter, and, when the development is completed, an 18-hole golf course for the follower of the gutta-percha.

Walter J. Travis, internationally known golf course architect, is in charge of the laying out of the 18 holes. He stated recently that the woodlands of King's Retreat and the marshlands along the Florida passage offer a fine opportunity to produce unusual results. The course will be adapted to tournament play, but will also furnish the ordinary player with a chance to reap credit.

One of the big units of the development, in addition to the country club, will be a large hotel facing the beach opposite the foot of the famous Lovers' Lane, a magnificent avenue of live oaks set out by James Spalding, in 1750. The St. Simon's plan includes a yacht basin and other features to attract the cruising boatman en route to and from Florida.

To Use Large Dredge.

The great suction dredge Blue Heron will be used to deepen the yacht basin and fill the marsh leg of the golf course and the site of the country club. This most modern dredging outfit in the south today was delivered to the Paris-Singer organization just before the lull in the Florida boom.

Should the success of the hotel at the south end of St. Simon's warrant, another hotel will be erected at the northern end, near Hampton river, and will be adapted to summer as well as winter occupancy. While locally the Coffin organization has not announced its full development plans for Glynn-Isle, the Detroit office of Roger W. Babson recently reported that a "Southern Atlantic City" will be built on an island near Brunswick by a syndicate of Detroit capitalists, Carl G. Fisher, who is interested in the Montauk Point development on Long Island, New York, with Mr. Coffin, visited Glynn-Isle about a month ago and declared in enthusiastic terms that the place is admirably suited for such a project.

Romance has deeply marked the Glynn county section of the Georgia coast. Beginning with the occupation by the Spanish and the establishment of those frontier contacts of civilization with unexplored sections, missions, the history of Brunswick has been a glorious one, with military, religious and agricultural features.

In the first years of Spanish occupation, around 1566, a chain of missions long antedating anything of the kind in California, was established along the Georgia coast, chief points being Cumberland Island, at a point near the St. Marys river, on Jekyl island, St. Simon's island, Sapeloe island, Ossabaw island and St. Catherine's island, as well as inland points known as Talaje, near Brunswick; Tolomato, near Darien, and Tupique, farther up the coast.

Has Many Old Missions.

Well preserved ruins of the missions at Marianna, Talaje, St. Simon's, Tolomato and Sapeloe are to be seen today, and it appears that the historical appeal of these old structures along the Georgia coast will in time draw as effectively as those of California. The missions were constructed of "tabby," or a mixture of lime and oyster shell, the cement used in that day on the Georgia coast.

The tide of the Spanish occupation of Georgia was turned at Bloody Marsh, on St. Simon's island, by Oglethorpe and his band of colonists from Savannah. Here it was also that John Wesley visited and became so impressed by the attitude of the Moravian brethren en route to St. Simon's on shipboard that it modified his religious views and resulted in the establishment of Methodism. The Coupers, Kings and Spaldings did farming on St. Simon's that was famous the world over.

Under the spreading boughs of a live oak tree near the Brunswick end of the St. Simon's highway, Sidney Lanier sat and received his impressions which found medium of expression in that beloved poem: "The Marshes of Glynn." The oak stands today, and is the mecca of many admirers of the great poet.

At Frederica, on St. Simon's island, Oglethorpe established one of the largest forts of the day in Georgia, and started what eventually became one of the most historic dead towns of the state. Near Christ's church at Frederica stands a giant oak, under which Charles Wesley sang and John Wesley preached.

Brunswick Live City.

Modern Brunswick is wide-awake, progressive and quick to act on new ideas. The city is located entirely on salt water; has no mosquitoes or malaria and no local or contagious diseases, and also has a death rate which is second lowest in port cities of the country. The climate permits work in the open year around, with an annual mean temperature of 68.6; or 76 degrees summer and 53.3 winter.

The Brunswick plant of the Hercules Powder company is the largest manufactory of naval stores by steam distilled process in the world. The Atlantic Refining company has a $7,000,000 plant in Brunswick. Brunswick has for years granted a five-year tax exemption to worthy new industries, as well as providing sites, with rail or water facilities.

In addition to the Coffin development, a number of other activities are going on around Brunswick, including the reclamation of old rice fields. Colonel T. L. Houston, of New York, is reclaiming Champeney island, an old abandoned rice plantation in the Atlamaha delta, crossed by the new Atlantic coastal highway.

Colonel Houston has a large force of California truckers at work, and fields that were wet and sodden a few months ago are being put into shape rapidly with tractors and harrows for the planting of a winter crop of lettuce early in January.

Attracks Much Attention.

The Houston development is attracting attention from all sections of the south as the first successful attempt to wrest a delta rice plantation from the state in which it has lain since abandonment 60 years ago. Colonel Houston is a leading factor in the Dover Hall club, owner of a game preserve consisting of thousands of acres of Glynn county land. He is preparing to build a handsome winter home on Glynn-Isle.

R. E. Benedict, general manager of the Brunswick Peninsula company, a George H. Myers enterprise, is developing a tract of 20,000 acres along Altama road for division into small farms. Already a California poultryman has located a 20,000 hen ranch there; a Wyoming farmer is preparing to put in a truck crop, and two muckland farmers from northern New York are getting ready for a winter truck crop.

The Brunswick Railway and Terminal Securities company, a New York corporation which has owned a large amount of Brunswick property for many years, has started the construction of a number of modern residences in Windsor Park, a subdivision laid out 35 years ago.

At East Beach on St. Simon's Island, the Presbyterian church in Georgia will establish an assembly and conference grounds on property acquired as the entire portion of a development launched by Mrs. E. C Bruce. This movement was initiated by the Savannah presbytery several months ago, and has become statewide.

Associate Artists To Play In Fifth Symphony Concert

ELINOR WHITTEMORE.

Elinor Whittemore, violinist, and Rosita Renard, pianist, will feature, as associate artists, the concert to be given next Sunday afternoon at Loew's Grand theater by the Atlanta Symphony orchestra.

Playing the Symphonie Espanole, by Gallo, the two great players should form a combination to wring enthusiasm from the heart of a mollusc. For they are both remarkable at their respective instruments for the fire and dash of their playing, with a touch of dramatic effectiveness just as thrilling as it is rare. And the selection, the Symphonie Espanole, lends itself to spirited interpretation if ever a piece of music did.

The orchestra for this concert is going through some extra rehearsals, determined to make it one of the finest programs offered since the formation of the organization four years ago. It is an ambitious program, but Atlanta's orchestra has demonstrated that it can conquer most anything, and, with the inspiration of the two great soloists to spur them on, and the enthusiasm that flows from the tip of Conductor Enrico Liede's baton, it ought to be a remarkable performance.

Miss Whittemore will play during the first half of the program the Concerto in B-Minor, by Saint-Saens, with the orchestra, and will appear with Miss Renard after the intermission.

One of the most ambitious numbers ever tackled by the local orchestra will open the program, the Semiramide Overture, by Rossini. A couple of later numbers, one the "Chant Elegiaque," by Tschaikowsky, and the other the "Rustle of Spring," by Sinding, will close the first half.

After the intermission will come the Whittemore - Renard offering, while the closing orchestral number will be a group, the "Nell Gwynn" suite, by German, which includes a country dance, a pastoral dance and a merrymakers' dance.

Seats for the reserved sections, which cannot be bought on Sunday, the day of performance, will be on sale every day this week at the box office at Phillips & Crew Piano Co., 181 Peachtree street.

BROTHERHOOD BANK MAY BE REVIVED

Pittsburgh, Pa., January 8.—(AP)—Reorganization of the Brotherhood Savings and Trust company of Pittsburgh, closed several months ago by the Pennsylvania banking department, was a possibility today following a conference yesterday between Peter G. Cameron, state secretary of banking and representatives of various labor groups.

Affairs of the bank were taken over by the banking department last October when officials discovered that $102,500 of its funds were involved in a $320,000 bond swindle alleged to have been engineered by Charles E. Knapp, a bond salesman. The funds from the bank formed a part of a pool raised by R. A. McCrady, president of the institution, for the purchase of Liberty bonds from Knapp at bargain prices. Knapp disappeared after the money was turned over to him but was later arrested and most of the cash recovered. Knapp, McCrady and several other officers of the bank are awaiting trial on various charges.

Cameron told the labor union representatives he would not oppose reorganization of the bank but said it could not take place until appraisal of the bank's assets had been completed and the money recovered by the police is returned. All of the cash, found buried in a Pittsburgh suburb during investigation of the case, has been placed in a safety deposit box for use as evidence in the trial of those under arrest.

The brotherhood bank was organized in 1923 with a capital of $158,400. When it closed the institution had assets and liabilities of $728,619 of which $522,616 represented deposits, mostly all accounts by working people.

Constitution Bureau.

Rome, Ga., January 8.—State Commander Emory P. Bass, of Valdosta, has accepted an invitation to install officers of Shanklin-Attaway post, American Legion, Monday night, January 24, according to Joe M. Carr, state adjutant.

In addition to Bass, three past commanders will probably attend the meeting. They are Homer Watkins, Cedartown; A. L. Henson, Calhoun, and Basil Stockbridge, Atlanta. Carr said all posts in the district would be invited to the meeting.

A number of new members will be initiated and an entertaining program is being planned.

Postal Receipts Gain.

Rome, Ga., January 8.—Rome postal receipts for 1926 show more than a five per cent increase as compared with 1925, according to Mrs. Mary W. Barclay, postmaster. The receipts for 1926 totalled $79,957.45 against $76,067.97 in 1925.

A five per cent increase was also shown in December, 1926, the total for that month being $9,255.20. During the same month in 1925 the total was $8,825.28.

Church Body Aids Sick.

Rome, Ga., January 8.—A total of 67 patients were taken care of at the two local hospitals during 1926 through the activities of the church hospital board, according to a report made by Mrs. Luke McDonald, chairman.

The report shows that women's activities of Rome churches donated a total of $1,069.75 for the fund in 1926 and another $750 was received from the Community Chest, which with a balance of $34.72 in the bank on January 1, 1926, made total receipts $1,854.47. Expenditures for 1926 were $1,764.59, leaving a balance in the bank on January 1, 1927, of $89.88.

First Trans-Ocean Telephone Message Relayed to Atlanta

Copies of the first commercial transoceanic telephone message relayed to Atlanta were made public Saturday by E. K. McDowell, state agent of the North British and Mercantile Insurance company, who received the message direct from the New York office of the company. The message was one of greeting spoken to C. F. Shallcross, United States manager of the company, by Arthur Worley, general manager, who sat in his London office and talked across the Atlantic ocean to his associate in New York.

"I want to mark this historic occasion on which, for the first time, the London and New York offices of an insurance company are in oral conversation by asking you to convey to our American directors, office staffs, and field men in New York, San Francisco and elsewhere; to our broker friends and particularly to our fine body of agents throughout the United States, the cordial greetings of the London officers, directors and staff. I want to add my own best wishes for a happy and prosperous new year to all," Mr. Worley said over the new telephone service.

Mr. Shallcross replied that he could hear Mr. Worley perfectly and would see that his greeting was sent as directed. At this point there was a slight interruption in the telephone line of communication but the service was restored in a moment. Mr. Worley continued his part of the conversation, declaring that the success of the company was due almost entirely to the activities of the agents and their predecessors during the last 60 years. After further conversation about the company's organization and its work and another slight interruption due to buzzing Mr. Worley concluded by declaring that the new transoceanic service will add materially to the world-wide facilities offered brokers and agents by the North British and Mercantile company. He instructed Mr. Shallcross not to hesitate to use the new service wherever deemed necessary in the course of the company's business.

Mr. McDowell received a telegraphic copy of the whole conversation between the two high officials of the company and it is believed that this is the first transoceanic telephone message of any kind ever relayed directly to Atlanta.

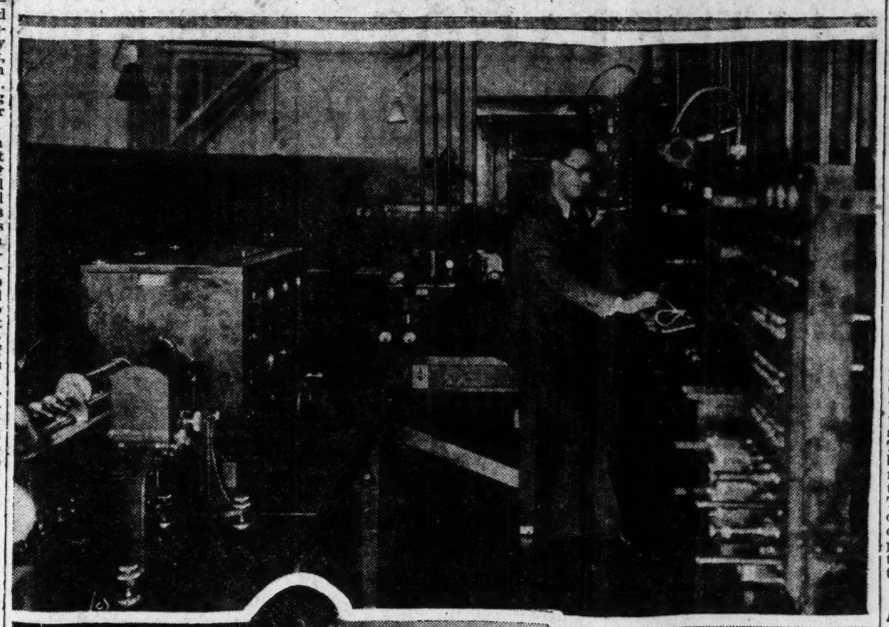

WHIPPING POST MAY BE REVIVED FOR WIFE BEATERS

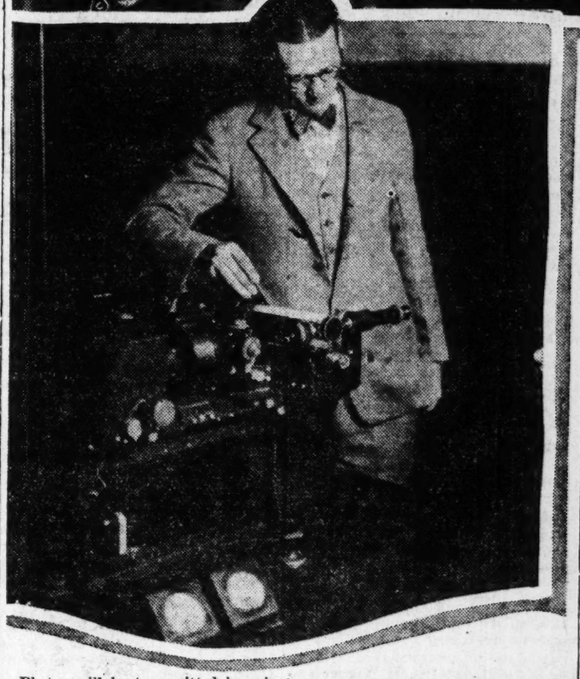

Stamford, Conn., January 8.—A revival of the whipping post to end wife-beating and neglect of children may be sought at the present session of the legislature.

A bill to that effect was advocated by Mayor Alfred Phillips in a letter to several legislators, made public today.

The ancient whipping post is still in effect in Delaware and Maryland, where wife-beaters and thieves are trussed up and lashed across the naked back with a whip. It has been claimed that its use has been effective in reducing robbery in Delaware.

Telephoto Service Opens Here Today When News Photographs Will Be Sent And Received Over Modern System

Above—General view of the sending and receiving apparatus. The operator is talking on the circuit over which a picture is about to be transmitted.

Photos will be transmitted by wire to and from Atlanta for the first time this afternoon.

The inauguration of the picture by wire service will occur at a special demonstration this afternoon at which representatives of the American Telephone and Telegraph company from New York will join with officials of the Southern Bell Telephone company as hosts. Several technical experts will be present to explain just how the apparatus works.

The regular commercial service for the sending of pictures by wire begins Monday morning. Wires for this purpose will be kept open daily between Atlanta and New York, Chicago, Boston, Cleveland, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Sunday afternoon photographs as well as conversation will speed over the long distance telephone wires out of Atlanta and news pictures taken in Boston and Los Angeles will be rushed with all speed and put on the circuits for transmission to Atlanta. The first pictures will arrive in a matter of minutes, in time to feature the demonstration at the new telephoto office at 78 South Pryor street.

The charge for sending a picture from Atlanta varies from $15 to $35, according to the distance to the point of reception. The same picture may be sent to all six of the points in the chain for $95.

Commercial Service.

While the new service will probably make a special appeal to commercial and news photographers, magazines and newspapers, it will prove valuable for a wide variety of other uses. Anything that can be photographed can be sent over the wires as a telephoto. This means that the service will be available for the transmitting of financial and general advertisements, stock certificates, mechanical drawings, accountants' statements, X-ray pictures, fashion and textile designs, legal documents and signatures and much other material, the prompt and accurate transmission of which is a matter of real concern to its sponsors.

The telephoto is a development of Bell system engineers. It is the outcome of work covering several years and provides a simple, rapid and accurate picture transmitting system. The apparatus in its present form represents the association of many recent inventions together with standard types of telephone and telegraph apparatus which have been readapted to this new use.

The simplicity of the method is such that a positive transparency film made from any subject matter is suitable for transmission. The apparatus is so designed as to transmit a picture five inches by seven inches in seven minutes. The picture is received in such form that after photographic development of the usual sort it is ready for newspaper or other reproduction. As films can be used for transmission while still wet, this system eliminates the delay which would otherwise be caused by drying.

Tiny Light Used.

The positive film is inserted in the transmitter simply by rolling it up in a cylindrical form. During transmission na very small and intense beam of light shines through the film onto a photoelectric cell within. The film is rotated at a uniform speed and by means of a screw mechanism is caused to advance parallel to the axis of the cylinder. The relative motion of the light to the picture on the cylinder is therefore the same as that of a phonograph needle to a cylindrical record. In this way, each minute portion of the picture in turn affects the intensity of the light reaching the photoelectric cell. This variation in the amount of light striking the sensitive surface of the cell gives rise to current variations which, through the agency of a vacuum tube amplifier and modulator, control the current flowing through the telephone line.

At the receiving end an unexposed photographic film is rotated under a beam of light in a manner similar to that at the transmitting end. The two films are caused to rotate at exactly the same speed and the impulses starting from the photoelectric cell at the sending end control, by means of a new device known as a light valve, the amount of light reaching the film at the receiving end.

The time of transmission of a 5x7-inch picture, about seven minutes, is a relatively small part of the total time elapsing between the taking of the picture and its final delivery in the form of a print. Most of the total time is used in the purely photographic operations. When these are reduced by using the films while still wet the over-all time is about one hour. Pictures transmitted electrically by the process being demonstrated are, in general, suitable for all purposes for which direct photographic prints can be used.

Conventions Transmitted.

It was in the field of news pictures that telephotographs made their first bow to the public when in June, 1924, pictures of the republican national convention were forwarded from Cleveland to New York for general reproduction. A month later similar pictures of the democratic convention in New York were transmitted to the press.

This phase of their usefulness has continued to be of prime importance. Within recent weeks photographs of happenings in the south, flown to New York by airplane, were flashed to the Pacific coast and there used in the daily newspapers on the very day of their appearance in the papers of the Atlantic seaboard.

Quite recently, also, has been the transmission of pictures of Queen Marie's reception and activities in this country, of football, baseball and tennis high spots, of channel swimming exploits, the Amundsen and Byrd polar flights, of British strike scenes, of the Eucharistic congress in Chicago—and last, but hardly least, a flock of Tunney-Dempsey action snapshots.

Probably the first great test of their value under service conditions was made March 4, 1925, when nine photographs of Calvin Coolidge's inauguration were sent from Washington to New York, San Francisco and Chicago. These pictures appeared the same day in the papers of the cities named and in those of many additional cities the following day.

The public was surprised by the accuracy of detail and general excellence of the pictures, even in their reproduced form. Except for the accompanying explanatory captions, it was difficult to distinguish them from photographs printed from original negatives.

Tornado Reproduced.

Two weeks after President Coolidge's inauguration came the first opportunity for telephotographs to demonstrate their value in a calamity of national interest. This was at the time of the great tornado in the middle west, when photographs were rushed by planes to Chicago, and thence put on the wires simultaneously to the newspapers of both east and west coasts.

The regular daily service for the transmission of pictures between New York, Chicago and San Francisco was opened in April, 1925; and although the news field has continued to offer the most spectacular opportunities for telephotographs, their suitability for a wide variety of uses has been causing one business or scientific interest after another to test their value.

A street railway company in California, for example, wished to show a new type trolley car at a meeting of its directors in New York city. There had been unavoidable delay in forwarding the picture, but it got there on time and very satisfactorily in the form of a telephotograph.

An advertising manager in New York planned to be in Chicago on a certain day, but at the last moment could not make the trip. An important cover illustration for a booklet had to be in Chicago the next morning. The airplane mail had gone. In the emergency the telephotograph system supplied the picture in less than two hours.

Another New York firm, interested in the floating of a new stock issue, was able to save 11 days and meet a favorable market by flashing telephotographs of stock circulars and stock certificates back and forth across the country, thus getting in

Independent of the work of their local organization and of the amount Kentucky will raise $750,000. This statement was made here tonight by W. S. Farmer, of Frankfort, a member of the committee on percentages, who returned from Nashville, Tenn., where he attended the meeting of the southwide cooperative program commission, which met there for the purpose of arranging the program for the year's work of the Southern Baptist convention.

J., with prominent clergymen from New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania and other points present, according to dispatches received here.

Hundreds of floral tributes and messages of sympathy were received from leading Baptist ministers and churches in many of the southern and eastern states.

The Easiest Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely, and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy never fails.—(adv.)

MME. GEORGES BOLONI.

Rambles With Anatole France. By Sandor Kemeri (Mme. Georges Boloni), translated from the Hungarian by Emil Lengyel, with most attractive and interesting illustrations. The introduction, which is written by Dr. Paul-Louis Couchoud, of Paris, tells the story of how he secured the efficient assistance of his secretary—Madame Boloni, and of which he says "the story is not only clear and accurate, but as sweet and calm as he is." The foreword by the translator, Mr. Lengyel, of New York city, who says that with the death of Mme. Caillavet, who was more than a friend to Anatole France, for she had stimulated his genius, "she was his inspiration," that he became mentally and physically heart sick, and it was a long time before he would make any effort at all to carry on his great work. But Mme. Boloni was willing to use her efforts to lift the great writer out of the Valley of Despondency, after making a call on him when she saw his agony beneath a smiling face.

It was in 1910, accompanied by his physician and secretary, Anatole France started on his rambles from Naples and from there to Rome and other Italian cities, for the broken old man loved Italy. And it was here that he became the real man, the pious believer, the devout pilgrim.

The preface is by Mme. Boloni in which she says that instead of the living Anatole France she dedicates this book "To the memory of the dead master."

What a pleasure it must have been to the great writer's party to stroll with him through old Paris, Naples, Rome and Braille, and to watch the eye brighten and soften when it fell upon the things he loved, and what a pleasure it is for the reader to ramble with him in his visits to the capitol of Lombardy, in Verona, the refuge of Dante, and in the forest on the Pincio of Rome, etc., and then later to have strolled with him through South America, of which he seldom spoke. Mme. Boloni, who was known in Hungary, her native land, under the nom de plume of Sandor Kemeri, is a descendant of an ancient noble family, and the book is made more interesting by her charm in expressing herself with, now and then, a little Hungarian wit. It is a charming book and one that will bring the reader in very close sympathetic touch with Anatole France. (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

The Missing Island, by Oswald Kendall, is a thrilling yarn of the sea, and the readers who so thoroughly enjoyed "The Romance of the Martin Connor" will have the pleasure of meeting once more Captain Hawks, Grummet, his mate, and Certain Wilfred, his astonishing cook. (Houghton, Mifflin company, Boston.)

The Dead Ride Hard, by Louise Joseph Vance, author of "The Lone Wolf," is a tale of adventure of Budapest before the red terror was forced to give way to the white. This story is just as full of thrills as the other thrilling mystery stories from the pen of Mr. Vance. (Lippincott's Book.)

The Wolf, the Cat, and the Nightingale. This story of France, of Paris, in the days when all Europe was torn and seared as never before by religious strife, is written with power, courage, knowledge and appreciation, by Stanley Hart Cauffman, author of "At the Sign of the Silver Ship."

The story is woven around three men in Paris—each of a different belief, yet bound by mutual interests and dependency. It was a case of the king's law, the church's power and the fanatic's sword—a time of plots and counterplots, of warring factions and yet ,through it all, there stood a man and a maid with the firmness of the Rock of Gibraltar. (The Penn Publishing company, Philadelphia.)

Spoilt Music, by Ruby M. Ayres, author of "Candle Light, "The Man Without a Heart" and several other books of fiction. Her new romance is the story of Jennifer Fry and Nicholas Gaunt.

"It may be all my love went wrong.
A scribe's work writ awry and blurred,
Scrawled after the blind evensong.
Spoilt music and no perfect word."
—Swinburne.

Sinister House, by Charles C. Booth, who writes a mystery story of southern California. (William Morrow and company, New York.)

God and Tony Hewitt, by Albert Kinross, a story of the Near East during the war, in which Captain Tony Hewitt meets at Salonica a lovely girl with whom he proceeds to fall desperately in love. The author who is a brilliant English writer paints an unforgettable picture of the grea twar. (Houghton, Mifflin company, Boston.)

Pine Creek Ranch, by Harold Bindloss, author of "Prairie Gold," is a story with all the charm of the prairie. "You can hear the rustle of the wind through the wheat, smell the wild peppermint, see the prairie grain rippling on and on," is a most appealing description of the country, and the story of the young mistress of Pine Creek ranch is full of life from the first chapter to the last. (Frederick A. Stokes company, New York.)

Carterets Cure, by Richard Keverne, who tells the story in a most interesting style of Michael Carteret, a young London barrister, who on account of overwork is banished by his physician for a rest cure to a little place on the English channel. While there he experiences many exciting adventures, among them being his rescue from the marshes by a young woman whose father is an impoverished landowner since the great war. The story of how the Seymours became involved in the smuggling business as well as the romance of Michael and Molly will hold the reader's interest. (Houghton, Mifflin company, Boston.)

The White Buffalo, by Warren H. Miller, author of "Medicine Gold" and other thrilling stories of the western country, and in this book especially he has included many Indian legends that will please the reader. This story is so entertaining that it will be of more than ordinary interest to both men and boys for it is filled with both action and adventure, and there is plenty of humor to please any reader. (D. Appleton and company, New York.)

VIVID SPAIN.

Vivid Spain. By Joseph Mitchell Chapple. Illustrated with original etchings by Levon West, is one of the most attractive books on this country that has been published. The author from "The Attic" in the great American city of New York, pays the following greeting to his far-famed and much-talked-of country:

"Spain, Vivid Spain! Redolent of romance and tradition, what fantastic visions you have conjured in the minds of alien peoples since the Phoenician navigators first sailed in the shadow of the Pillars of Hercules!"

America especially has learned to love the beautiful and the romantic—it loves to read of the past memories of this wonderful country and to live in its present vividness, for it was on American shores that Spain's flag was first unfurled.

In all America today there are evidences of Spanish courage and the beauty of Spanish dress is seen especially in the beautiful shawls. There are Spanish melodies, Spanish teachers of the beautiful language, Spanish architecture and even in the theaters as well as in opera Spain comes in for her part of the praise and glory of song and drama.

The author's appreciation of the beauties of this far-away country is presented in this beautiful volume in which he so generously asks that his readers share with him the joy of many happy days in Vivid Spain. (Chapple Publishing company, Boston.)

EMINENT HISTORIAN DANCES THE CHARLESTON.

When Dr. Herbert Adams Gibbons, whose "Ports of France" is attracting attention and who earlier in the year from a South American tour, was asked of his most interesting experience. Though Dr. Gibbons had been dined by presidents and had played golf with prime ministers, he confessed that his most delightful experience had been in learning to dance the Charleston—known as the "Charley Stone" in the antipodes.

A SOUTHERNER AND A WHITE MAN.

So many persons have inquired the race of Jerome Dowd, author of "The Negro in American Life," that Dr. Dowd hastens to state he is pure Caucasian. He was reared in North Carolina, was educated at Chicago university, has lived in New York and Philadelphia, and is now professor of sociology at the University of Oklahoma.

THREE DOGS.

Three dogs there are, that have captured the hearts of book lovers as completely as any real flesh and blood companion from the dog world could do. Boys dreaming of Alaskan adventure take with them Jack London's Buck; Bob, Son of Battles, has held his friends for decades; but in this generation, none approaches the place in public affection of "Lad," the famous Sunnybank collie about whom Albert Payson Terhune wrote in the book which bears his name.

E. P. Dutton has issued a new edition superbly illustrated with full-page talf-tones and line drawings in the text, over which any one who has ever known a collie can pore for hours admiring the fidelity to life of every line portraying "Lad" and his fellows. The artist is Robert L. Dickey.

Miss Louisa Alcott Pratt, daughter of the late Frederick Alcott Pratt, who was one of the "little men" in Louisa M. Alcott's famous story of that name, was recently married at Concord, Mass., to William Frederick Kussin, of New York and Boston.

'27 CITY BUDGET ABOVE EXPECTED REVENUE

unusual drain the school department will be on the city treasury during the year, and will cut all proposals to the bone in order to save funds for schools.

In addition to the difference between the amount the school department normally would receive and the sum fixed in the contemplated budget, —a difference of about $731,000—a deficit of $952,000 is said to exist in the school department, making a total of $1,683,000 which must be provided from some source, placing the total amount needed for schools well over the $4,000,000 mark.

Estimates of all city department heads submitted to B. Graham West, city comptroller, totaled $10,036,917.07, and estimated receipts of the city during 1927, based on 1926 figures, will hit the $9,350,000 mark.

Orme Returns Today.

Councilman A. J. Orme, chairman of the finance committee, has been out of the city for the past several days, but will return this morning. He and Mr. West will hold a conference this afternoon, at which the pruning knife will be sharpened to cut out every item which is not regarded as an absolute necessity during the year, so that the residue of monies saved may be diverted to pulling the school department out of debt and placing it on its feet.

Just what cuts will be recommended by Mr. Orme after going over the tentative budget as prepared by Mr. West on recommendations of department heads is not known, and he probably will be unwilling to announce his decisions until the finance committee meets, it was said Saturday.

The largest single item in Mr. West's budget calls for $1,440,000 for the streets and bridges department. Included in this is $96,000 for reconstruction of the Mitchell street viaduct, which the engineering department declares unsafe for further use, and $59,000 for reconstruction of the Magnolia street bridge. William A. Hansell, chief of construction, Saturday declared that both these projects are absolutely necessary. The first because the Mitchell street viaduct may collapse at any time, precipitating those on it into the train yards beneath. He stated that he and Charles Kauffman, bridge engineer, would be held criminally liable for such a catastrophe under the law, and that unless money is provided to rebuild it, they will be forced to take steps to close it to vehicular traffic.

The second project should be carried out to meet an agreement between the city and the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railroad. This work, under the agreement, should have been begun more than a year ago, but because of financial difficulties of the city, it could not be started sooner, Mr. Hansell explained.

Another bridge project is provision for the North avenue underpass.

ATKINSON TO LAUNCH JAYCEE THRIFT DRIVE

A year's program of thrift education in Atlanta will be launched by the Junior Chamber of Commerce at its weekly luncheon Thursday of this week with H. M. Atkinson, chairman of the board of the Georgia Railway and Power company, as the keynote speaker, it was announced Saturday by Stewart F. Gelders, chairman of the junior chamber thrift committee.

Mr. Atkinson's thrift address, outlining the goal for the thrift program to be carried on through cooperation of civic, agricultural, industrial, banking, real estate, insurance and other Georgia enterprises, will be delivered at the weekly luncheon of the junior chamber at 12:15 o'clock Thursday of this week in the chamber of commerce assembly hall No. 2.

Following announcement Friday by Dr. Herbert H. Kennedy, new president of the junior chamber, that Mr. Gelders would head the thrift committee, with George W. West, president of the senior chamber of commerce, as co-chairman, the names of chairmen of six subcommittees of the thrift body were announced by Mr. Gelders Saturday.

HARRY M. ATKINSON.

Baxter Maddox, son of Robert F. Maddox and one of the younger leaders in local financial circles, will head a subcommittee on bank cooperation; Roy LeCraw, former president of the junior chamber, will head a subcommittee on insurance agency cooperation; J. R. L. Boyd, director of the Legal Aid society and leader in the campaign conducted last year against loan sharks, will head a subcommittee on credit unions; Horace Russell, member of city council, president of the Family Welfare society and former junior chamber director, will head a subcommittee on Building and Loan association activities; Lawrence Burdette, junior chamber director and prominent young realtor, will head a committee on real estate dealer cooperation.

Other subcommittees to be created following the thrift meeting Thursday will include industries cooperation, public utility cooperation, and others representative of every local and state interest dependent upon civic and personal thrift in Georgia for their fullest measure of success, according to plans outlined by Dr. Kennedy.

EMORY TO OBSERVE 12TH ANNIVERSARY

Emory University, Ga., January 8. (Special.)—Plans for Emory university's annual charter day celebration, which will be observed with dinners by alumni in more than 40 cities, were laid Friday night by the executive committee of the Emory University Alumni association.

The celebration will be held this year on Tuesday, January 25, which marks the 12th anniversary of the granting of a charter to Emory university by the superior court of Fulton county.

Local interest centers around the dinner to be held by the alumni of Atlanta and nearby cities, nearly 1,000 of whom attended the celebration last year. The banquet this year will be held at the Atlanta Athletic club and will be under the general direction of Ward Wight, president of the Atlanta Alumni association.

Cooperating with Mr. Wight are three special committees, the program committee, headed by W. P. Bloodworth; the arrangements committee, of which Dr. Grady Clay is chairman, and the attendance committee, under the leadership of Russell Bridges.

Letters will be sent out to more than 7,000 Emory alumni in all states of the union and in many foreign countries, urging them to attend the nearest celebration or to "tune in" on the radio program which will be broadcast from Atlanta.

Man Faces Term Of 4,500 Years On Mail Charge

Faced by charges sufficient to send him to the federal penitentiary for 4,500 years, in lieu of a payment of a fine of $1,500,000, in the event he should be proved guilty, Walter W. Page, former postmaster of Wakulla, Fla., will go on trial Monday in Tallahassee, Fla., on charges of forging and passing government checks, according to information given out Saturday at the Atlanta office of the United States secret service.

Page is charged by secret service operatives with forging and passing 150 treasury department compensation and insurance checks, alleged to have been taken from mail addressed to negroes living at Wakulla, each check amounting to two separate charges, those of forging and passing. The law provides a penalty of 15 years or $5,000 on each charge.

According to secret service men, Page, who is a prominent merchant and landowner of Wakulla, began the practice of appropriating checks in 1919 and kept it up for two years, the papers being addressed to ignorant negroes who knew they had money due them from the government but did not know it would be sent in monthly installments by check.

Page also faces charges of postoffice inspectors of embezzling letters and funds from the mail, it was stated. The defendant is about 55 years of age.

ONE LOSES NERVE, OTHER LOSES COIN WHEN STUCK UP

Motor bandits were abroad in Atlanta Saturday night.

W. W. Numally, 1119 Sells avenue, kept his nerve, but lost $3 and a watch when a pair of negroes alighted from a light roadster and held him up in front of his home. The victim obtained the car license number and passed it on to police.

Louis Goldman, 979 Lanier boulevard, lost his nerve and kept his money when two white men sprang from a roadster and staged a stickup. Shouting for help, Goldman routed the holdup men. The victim told police he didn't linger long enough to obtain the license number.

Celebrating the Most Significant Record in Motor Car History

When public opinion takes hold of a product like the Chrysler and in three years' time lifts it over the heads of twenty-three other long established cars—from twenty-seventh place in volume in the industry to fourth place—the significance of the act is almost too plain to require analysis.

It can only mean, of course, that people have found in the Chrysler qualities and values they did not find elsewhere. No other explanation is even remotely possible.

In the four great quality car fields, they have preferred Chrysler to long established cars of both lower and higher price, sensing in Chrysler engineering, design, beauty, performance and long life, elements of progressiveness which inspired them to invest in Chrysler products the staggering total of five hundred and thirty millions of dollars ($530,000,000) in three years' time.

It is an inspiring tribute of public confidence —one which fills Walter P. Chrysler and his organization with a deep and serious sense of responsibility for the future.

It is their determination so rigidly to apply the Chrysler principle of Standardized Quality that fourth place in the industry will be merely a temporary stopping place — a momentary pause on the way to the higher place they will earnestly try to deserve in public esteem.

STRENGTH AND WISDOM:—"With God is strength and wisdom: the deceived and the deceiver are his." Job 12:16.

PRAYER:—O, God, Thou lookest upon the heart, and in Thee alone are we wise and strong.

PLAYING WITH FIRE.

There is substantial ground for the widespread criticism that is being heaped upon President Coolidge for his naval policy. By a narrow margin the house sustained it at Friday night's session. But that does not necessarily end the fight.

This criticism does not merely find expression through the insurgent leaders in the senate. It would be marvelous to find the fiery Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, in accord with the executive on any policy. And yet his views as to the violation of the agreed 5-5-3 ratio between the United States, Great Britain and Japan cannot be challenged.

When this treaty was signed as the one outstanding accomplishment of the disarmament conference in 1921 it was intended, and so understood and accepted, that the naval strengths of the two major powers should be kept on a parity, and that Japan's naval strength, as an accepted element in the equation, should be as 3 to 5. There is no getting around that fact.

What has developed since is a matter of record that is actually alarming to this nation if properly analyzed.

The United States has gradually slipped her ratio down to an actual inferiority to Japan, if the budget is not now amended to provide for the new cruisers authorized at the last session of congress.

There are no war clouds threatening, but the United States' foreign policy does not admit of bulldozing. This nation is not a member of the league and therefore has no recourse to its good offices. She is not overly friendly with the three or four minor powers—Mexico and Russia, to illustrate—that are also on the outside.

In the meantime America's domestic wealth and prosperity, her purchasing power, her international banking resources, are the envy of every nation. There are discords over the foreign debts. There are many reasons why a continued policy of lowering the morale and the fighting power of the first arm of defense to a position of practical helplessness in an emergency would be dangerous in the extreme.

The people of America take a commendable pride in their navy, and it should be as strong and as peerless as that of any nation whose pennant flies upon the seas.

LOW RATES PAY BEST.

The house of representatives, in passing a bill to restore the rate on postal cards to one cent, recognized the truth, proven by many examples, that it doesn't always pay to raise prices.

The rate on postal cards was raised to two cents in the belief that it would add to profits from the sale and distribution of this class of mail matter fully $10,000,000 annually. And what was the result? The postoffice department lost $6,000,000 a year by the two-cent law. People simply cut down in the use of postal cards. They did not make it up by the additional use of sealed letters either.

The Outlook, discussing this house measure says:

"Why not apply this truth also to newspapers and periodicals, which now pay excessive war-time postage? One reason for reduction is seen in a statement made by the Newspaper Publishers' association that second-class mail subject to the zone rates is the only branch of the mail service which, over a period of years, has shown a steady decrease in volume. In 1925 the mails carried 20,000,000 pounds less second-class mail matter than in 1920. Will congress please see the point!"

If the postoffice department would profit by experience it would ask congress to reduce the second-class postage rates. Should this be done the revenues of the department would be increased, and the public would be rendered a real, constructive educational service.

The postoffice department is purely a public service—one and outstanding of the services that we buy with taxation. It is not necessarily supposed to be self-sustaining. And yet it has been a policy for years to try to make it a money-making institution, as a privately operated railroad or other utility.

Even on that hypothesis, however, it has been clearly demonstrated that low rates are more profitable than high rates.

SOUND JUDGMENT.

In a communication to the Savannah Morning News A. P. Brantley, of Blackshear, who is one of South Georgia's most outstanding farmers and business men, makes a sensible and timely presentation of the farmers' case, and emphasizes it with correlating facts that ought to arouse thought and action. Among other things he says:

"Diversification in farming is absolutely essential to success, but even though a farmer 'lives at home' he must have money crops that he can sell at a profit and in substantial quantities if he is to succeed.

"The chief thought behind diversification is that the farmer should raise all of his home supplies. Not any one who knows anything about farming expects these excess home supplies (if any) to bring a profitable price even if they can be sold at the cost of production.

"Take corn, for instance, and there is an excess of corn in this section of the state, the best market for corn is in the neighborhood of Atlanta, and the cost of transportating corn from Blackshear to Atlanta points is almost as great as the cost of transporting corn from the corn belts of the west to Atlanta.

"The railroads have not waked up to the fact that there are certain crops upon which lower freight rates must be had if these crops are to be profitable to the farmer."

"Living at home," of course, is the first essential—the growing of the supplies needed to feed the family and the stock from one harvesting season to another. Whether an excess of these home supplies are grown or not should depend upon the local market conditions for disposing of such excesses. Or, whether or not these excesses can be turned into other commodities that will have a profitable market, as for instance meat, and poultry products. These should always be included in the "live-at-home" program.

Balanced production is a general injunction. But no program can fit alike into every community, nor can it be applied to every farm in a community. Local conditions must be taken into account. It would be folly to say that every farmer must confine his operations to the same schedule. Every farmer should be guided by the same general objective—to balance production according to acreage, local markets, home consumptive demands, and with such cash commodity crops—whether cotton or something else—that can be grown and marketed profitably. The crux of the whole matter is hard work in intensifying cultivation. That is, in getting more production to the acre, rather than being satisfied with the falacious policy of more acres and less to the acre. Cotton, of course, will be grown, and should be. But the objective in mind should always be to hold the cost of production down by getting more cotton to the acre.

Mr. Brantley is entirely correct in his reference to freight rates. No one feature of the farm problem today is more pressing than a readjustment of long and short haul rates, and a revision downward of rates on certain commodities. It would pay the railroads—as shown by past experiences—to do this. It would help agriculture to such a marked extent that the general economic conditions would reflect the changed freight rate status. Thereby the whole business structure of the nation would be strengthened.

ANOTHER NEW MILL.

The announcement, made at a Chamber of Commerce banquet in Gainesville Thursday evening, that a $500,000 unit will be at once added to the present Gainesville cotton mills, is of immense interest. President Montgomery, of the Pacolet Manufacturing company, made the formal statement.

There is already under construction at Gainesville a great $3,000,000 plant which will manufacture Johnson Red Cross materials. It will when completed be one of the largest cotton mills in the south.

There is every indication that Georgia is just beginning to move forward industrially although her progress in that direction in the past few years has been phenomenal. Gainesville is destined to become one of the great cotton mill cities of the entire Piedmont belt. Her elevation, healthfulness, good and ample water, climate, living conditions, tax rate, government, labor standardization, etc., all add to the paramount considerations of ample cheap hydroelectric power, and rail transportation.

Other great mill centers like Canton and Thomaston and others are showing marked industrial development.

More and more we realize the force of the argument that—

"It is great to be a Georgian."

SLACKER-VOTE MENACE.

Giving up the fight to get apathetic voters to the polls, the National Civic federation, in which such men as John Hays Hammond and Elihu Root are active, admits through an official statement of Mr. Hays that the situation is hopeless "unless drastic action of some kind is employed."

In 1926 the league conducted a vigorous nation-wide campaign, through publicity, the radio, civic "drives," etc., to arouse the slacker vote to a realization of citizenship duty and pride. It was backed by women's clubs and civic organizations in every city and almost every town in America. And yet in 24 states there was a smaller vote polled in each than in the off-year of 1922.

Georgia took a leading place in the ranks of the indifferent. And so did most of the other southern states. Here again, however, is made necessary the explanation. In the southern states in which there are no party contests in general elections the primaries are the elections. The general elections are perfunctory. The fact is, we don't poll one-third the vote in the primary that we should. And as to the general November election we almost forget about it, except in national years, and then there is no especial thrill to it in this part of the country.

But the situation is dangerous. We are walking on thin ice and do not apparently realize it. Congress takes into consideration only the November totals. Hence all of the fracas about violations of the 14th and 15th amendments in the south!

What we need are two strong white parties in Georgia, and everywhere else in the south. We are the heart and the soul of the democratic party, and get less for it than any republican stronghold of the north or middle west.

The late President Harding had the right idea. He started off good. And then the republican leaders of the middle west got cold feet because the negro voters of those states began to protest. They swung back to the negro alliance, and Georgia has had a negro for republican national committeeman since 1920.

It would not be difficult to build a strong white republican party in Georgia. It is fairly strong in Tennessee and in North Carolina. But it can never be done so long as conditions exist such as are in Georgia today.

In the meantime what are the negroes getting out of it? They have a national committeeman from this state—and that's all. And yet the fact that all federal patronage must be handled through him makes it impossible to build a white republican party.

But we need it. Then the national democratic organization would sit up and take notice. And the general elections would get out the vote. And we wouldn't be confronted all the time with threats against the size of our congressional delegations.

"GEORGIA SLANDERED."

Under the above caption The Manufacturers Record says:

"No state in the south has made a greater progress in diversification of its crops than Georgia. It is no longer dependent on cotton, and that fact has been reiterated over and over again a thousand times. And yet The Philadelphia Ledger in a recent editorial said:

"'Georgia, "a one-crop state," has been forced to return to the ancient system of bartering her surplus cotton for the necessities of life.'

"What an infinite pity that a newspaper that claims some degree of intelligence should make so stupendous a blunder!"

Laconic and to the point! Editor Edmonds never misses an opportunity to say a good word for Georgia, and defend the state against those who would designedly or ignorantly utter a slander.

It is true. Agriculturally Georgia is today less of a one-crop state than any in the cotton belt. And for that reason Georgia is less depressed by low-priced cotton.

REYNOLDS HONORED.

The Atlanta Hotel Men's association did itself proud in the election of Frank T. Reynolds to the presidency. He is assistant to Carling Dinkler, president of the Dinkler hotel interests that extend throughout the southeast. For several years he has been actively engaged in the hotel business, and it is doubtful if there is a more popular man in that great activity in the entire south.

Mr. Reynolds is an old newspaper man, and in that capacity became deeply interested in the economic welfare of Georgia and in the state's internal improvements. He is a veteran in the advocacy of a completed system of paved highways. He has spoken in practically every county in the state pleading for the building of roads, for better schools, for unified community spirit. He is a prominent Kiwanian, and has been a factor in the good work done by that organization in Georgia for the state's progress and development.

Atlanta's great hotels constitute one of the outstanding assets of the city. We have become a great national convention center, and the fact that ample hotel facilities of the better class are available has contributed largely.

WATCH THE LIGHTS.

The citizens of Atlanta are to be congratulated and commended for the hearty cooperation they are giving Chief Beavers and his traffic men, in observance of the light signals. Marked changes for the better have been observed since the crusade against "jay walking" began. It is earnestly urged and hoped they will keep this up.

Campaigns of this nature can do little permanent good if they are to be forgotten as soon as the fear of arrests passes.

The objective is to make the Atlanta streets and intersections safe—enduringly safe. It ought to be the pride of every citizen to help in that good undertaking.

Something else—

In keeping "safety minded" as every person should do, whether walking or driving, bear in mind the "red and the green" at intersections in the outlying districts, and even on the state highways, that do not flash before the eye but ought to flash through the brain.

It should not be necessary to always actually visualize a "stop" signal, or a "go" signal. Common sense, caution, judgment, ought to impress these signals — impress safety, not once but always.

OUR POLICY IN CHINA.

The government is fully justified in dispatching warships to Shanghai to observe and report on conditions, and most especially to offer such protection to American nationals as may be needed and warranted.

At Hankow the situation as to all foreigners seems to be alarming. The port is mob-ridden, and the anti-foreign tide is running high. The Cantonese, or nationalist government, is apparently in control of the foreign—including the British—concessions.

While cable dispatches are conflicting and confusing there does not seem to be any organized demonstration against Americans, although they naturally are included in the orders for foreign evacuation. Even a friendly government or political faction cannot always control mobs, fired by what the members possibly believe are patriotic motives.

America is not politically interested in China and should not be. She is interested in the safeguarding of her nationals, and in the maintainance of friendly trade relations. There is no doubt good reason for warm sympathy for the Chinese, and for the sincere hope that the civil warfare may be brought to an end as quickly as possible for China's own good. No nation was ever more exploited from the outside. There is perhaps just cause for the criticism of Great Britain's attitude. Our nation should exercise strict neutrality as to the Chinese-British issues, as the situation stands today.

There is a growing sentiment in favor of the Chinese national party. Ghang Wei Chiu, editor of the Chinese Standards Quarterly, in January Current History gives the following as extracts from the platform of the Chinese national party:

"All present treaties not based on the principle of equality between China and any foreign power to be abrogated and all future treaties to be based on such equality. (This covers extra-territoriality, foreign control of tariff, spheres of influence and other political privileges enjoyed by foreign powers at the expense of China.)

"A national convention to be called to devise means to free China from economic bondage to foreign powers by refunding foreign loans, no loan, however, to be repudiated unless detrimental to the political and economic rights of China or contracted by an irresponsible government."

On this side of the Pacific there is genuine hope that China's increasing nationalism may continue to increase, and that a stable democracy may be established.

Listening over the radio to the returns of the Stanford-Alabama game we thought the announcer said "Twenty-four votes for Underwood," but he may have remarked that Alabama was on the 24-yard line.

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL.

The Slow and Sure Subversion of Democracy by Growing Centralization.

Another long and strong step in the march of federal centralization is taken by the supreme court of the United States in the recent decision concerning the interstate transmission of electric power. The main contention of the Rhode Island public utilities commission was that the power generated in that state and delivered to a Massachusetts company at the state line remained an intrastate commodity and subject to the state's rate-making power.

But the supreme court holds that the place of exchange of the power from the lines of the Rhode Island company to those of the Massachusetts company does not determine the character of the transaction; that the creation of the electric power to be transmitted into another state renders the transaction into interstate commerce and that is subject exclusively to congressional regulation.

Technically that may be reasonably construed constitutional law, as was John Marshall's decision that congress has the right and power to charter a "Bank of the United States," but it contravenes general public ideas of national power and reserved state rights. It gives constitutional warrant to utility companies to discriminate between home state patrons and those in another state. It enables, for instance, the Rhode Island power company to sell its power to patrons in Massachusetts for less than it is given the right to charge in Rhode Island to its local patrons who have chartered it and protect it with their laws, police and courts.

That does not seem to be a fair and square situation to the average citizen. But the court of last resort says it is law and the law must so stand.

The Glacier-Like Movement.

This case is one more instance of the glacier-like movement that is slowly overwhelming the once-cherished doctrine of state sovereignty over institutions and actions relating to the internal operations and police of the state.

We have already seen the interstate commerce commission confirmed in its claim of right to override intrastate passenger fares as fixed by state legislation and state railroad commissions. They assume the same right with relation to freight rates in particular instances. They have gone so far as to require that their authority shall be sought for the extension or construction of a purely intrastate railroad line, and a bill is now pending in the congress to deprive the commission of any such extraordinary jurisdiction.

He is a very dull-witted man who does not see that "power is slowly stealing from the people" and being taken to itself in larger measures every year by the departments and agencies of the federal government.

The Consent of the Governed.

The serious feature of the process is that it is being done "with the consent of the governed," which is the very essence of a democratic system. Each step that is taken in the increase and consolidation of national powers is excused or defended upon the ground that "the people demand it."

And in each case there has been a seemingly popular sentiment in the change from local self-government to national administration.

The result is that Washington city is crowded with commissioners, bureaus and boards that are busy with affairs that the fathers of the republic believed were the prime and sole concerns of the state governments and their local auxiliaries. So that today one is not far from the truth in saying that not even the soviet republic of Russia is more a centralized government than is the United States of America.

The condition is the gradual and persistent growth of the spirit of "nationalism" that revived from the state wreckage following the war between the states over 60 years ago.

The "reconstruction" era not only reconstructed the southern states from their secession status. It reconstructed the basic theory of this republic and has edicated the mass of the people to depend more upon federal power than upon their own state powers. And the demands for more federal intervention and federal supervision are increasing with every session of congress.

The Hope That Has Failed.

The success of the consolidation policies has been largely due to the failure of the democratic party to stand inflexibly upon its original Jeffersonian platform and stick to its state's rights guns. After the war between the states the people who had fought for "the union as it was," with slavery and the doctrine of secession as the only elimination, looked hopefully to the democratic party to effect the restoration.

So general was hope for "the old union," with the exception noted above, that at the first national election in 1868, with the popular war hero, Grant, running against the spineless Seymour, Grant got a popular majority of only 309,584 in the total poll of 5,716,082, with Virginia, Mississippi and Texas barred by congress from voting in the election.

In the democratic platform of that year, 1868, the party "recognizing the questions of slavery and secession as having been settled for all time to come * * * and never to be renewed or re-agitated, do, with the return of peace, demand immediate restoration of all the states to their rights in the union under the constitution, and of civil government to the American people." It condemned the usurpations of the radical republican congresses for acts that "will subvert our form of government, and can only end in a single, centralized, and consolidated government, in which the separate existence of the states will be entirely absorbed, and an unqualified despotism be established in place of a federal union of co-equal states."

And now we have almost come to that with the too frequent consent and cooperation of the democrats in the congress.

The Evil Is Ineradicable.

This gangrene of government, rotting the firm flesh of Jeffersonism, has gone too far now to be arrested. It admits only the grafting on of more centralization.

It is unthinkable that a democratic national convention could be assembled in 1928 that would repeat as its battle slogans the salient principles of the party platform of 1856, or that of 1876, and especially that of 1884 on which Grover Cleveland stood and fought the democratic ship to victory.

Imagine the delegates from all the states now receiving federal aid in annual gobs of millions of dollars vociferously adopting the declaration "that the constitution does not confer upon the general government the power to commence and carry on a general system of internal improvements," nor "to assume, directly or indirectly, the debts (or costs) of the several states, contracted for local and internal improvements, or other state purposes." Can you see the delegates from Georgia falling over themselves to vote for such now heretical ideas?

Or, for the declaration of 1876 that the democratic party affirms its faith "in the liberty of individual conduct, unvexed by sumptuary laws?"

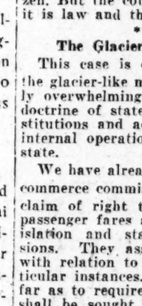

And so on, and so on, with the fact constantly staring you in the face that under the sway of either party now the old principles of a limited federal government and reserved state's rights are crumbling around the rising column of a centralized federalism.

TEXT AND PRETEXT

BY M. ASHBY JONES.

Keep Quiet With Coolidge.

Some days ago Mr. Coolidge made a request of the newspapers that they should not criticise the foreign policy of the government.

His point was that such criticism would make a bad impression upon foreign governments, and produce the impression that there was not a unity of thought and purpose in our own nation. Other people would get the idea that our government did not have the unanimous and cordial backing of the people of our country.

This, no doubt, seemed to Mr. Coolidge to be a very simple request to make. Mr. Coolidge is a very simple minded person. Indeed, Mr. Coolidge is as simple as a child, but one must add, that he is often as dangerous as a child with a high-powered machine. I am sure that he would do no intentional harm, and that he is perfectly sincere in his simplicity. We have all become familiar with the slogan, "Keep cool with Coolidge." Now we have a new one, "Keep quiet with Coolidge."

Objection Stated.

President Coolidge has a better manner than Premier Mussolini. The "Duce" silences all hostile criticism of the press by force. But is not the purpose of our president just the same as that of the Italian dictator? And if his request was complied with by the public press of America, would not the result be the same? Both leaders want a free hand, and each desires to carry out his personal policy, without interference of public opinion.

The immediate occasion for Mr. Coolidge's protest against the interference of the press with his foreign policy, was the vigorous protests made against the government's policy in Central America. The story was told by some of our newspapers, that our state department had sought to give currency to the charge, that the Mexican government, under bolshevik influences, was seeking to overthrow the legitimate government of Nicaragua, but was unwilling to assume responsibility for the propaganda. This story has never been satisfactorily disproved. According to the principle enunciated by Mr. Coolidge, the newspapers should have kept quiet, and this ugly story about the state department should never have been published. It would have been all right to have published the charge against the Mexican government, and thus to have inflamed public opinion against a friendly nation; but the wrong was in revealing the fact that our state department sought to have the story circulated, while refusing to become responsible for its truth.

Many American people severely condemn, and deeply resent, our whole policy of interference with the affairs of the countries of Central America, in, what they believe to be, the interest of American investors. Whether they are right or wrong is a debatable question, but it is a question for debate, and not for presidential censorship. I said above that the purpose of President Coolidge, and that of Premier Mussolini, was the same, and if carried out, the result would be the same. The result in Italy has been the death of democracy, and it has been accomplished by robbing the people of information, and depriving them of the freedom of criticism.

The Function of Criticism.

Strange as it may seem, it is in the quiet and simple personality of President Coolidge that the American people are faced with the supremely important question, shall we surrender the right of freedom of speech? It is under his administration that the war department not only denies the right of the citizen to criticize its policy of compulsory military training in our schools, but its representatives have sought to convict such citizens of being traitors to their country, for daring to utter such criticism. We must remind ourselves again that the right of freedom of speech, and the preservation of the facilities for free and full discussion of all public policies, is the life blood of democracy. Whenever the government seeks to control the sources of information, or to direct the public expression of opinion, it is poisoning the very fountain of freedom.

I do not mean for a moment that President Coolidge would intentionally rob the American people of any of their rights, nor do I think that he would knowingly hurt democracy. But the environment of Mr. Coolidge, from his early manhood, has been unfriendly to the genuine spirit of democracy, and made it almost impossible for him to understand its true meaning. He has been an officeholder for many years, and associated with the governing group. His political success has been promoted by those large business interests, which are anti-democratic in method and spirit. He has been raised in the school of "efficiency first," which is builded upon a discipline of unquestioned obedience to authority. It is only from this standpoint that we can understand what he means by a "business administration." No, he would not intentionally hurt the democracy of America, but nevertheless, if the American people should accept his principle, keep quiet and let the government govern, democracy would be dead in America.

Reviews of Year Often Overlook Important Happenings, Says Sullivan, In Citing Some Glaring Omissions

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

Washington, January 8.—Nearly all of us, at the turn of each year, have a human disposition to read summaries of what has just passed; and many of us who write have a zest to compose such summaries—to try to say what were the greatest events of the year and the most significant events, the greatest books that appeared, the most important trends in politics, the most promising developments in science. Some of us not only try to sum up the year past, but go on to try to forecast and predict about the year approaching. Of the two, prediction is of course the more difficult. The common assumption is that picking out the most significant events of the year past is quite easy. True, to say that certain events occurred on certain dates is easy enough. But to say that certain ones were the most significant, that certain ones have the most nearly permanent meaning—to do that calls for a good deal of confidence.

To realize this, let us go back 23 years and look upon some persons and periodicals which, at the close of the year 1903, presented the public with wise summaries of the events that had happened in the year then closing.

Events Pass Unnoticed.

We shall discover that the real obstacle to writing a review of a year while the year still exists lies not merely in the difficulty of selecting some events and tendencies and saying they had more permanent importance than others. The really great impediment lies in the probability that some of the most important events of the year, the ones that will be recognized many years in the future as having been really significant, did not appear in the newspapers at all or were so inconspicuously mentioned as to pass practically unnoticed.

Going back 23 years I have just looked through the summaries of the year 1903 that were made in "The Review of Reviews," "The Literary Digest," and other books, periodicals and newspapers of that time.

In none of those summaries of the year 1903 is there any mention of the fact that on December 17, 1903, the two brothers named Wright proved human flight possible, and actually flew.

Flight Overlooked.

In "The Review of Reviews'" record of current events for December, 1903 (printed in the January, 1904, number), the only entry for December 17, the only events of that day regarded as worth permanent record, were described as follows:

"December 17—In the senate Mr. Hear (republican, Massachusetts), and Mr. Gorman (democratic, Maryland), attack and Mr. Foraker (republican, Ohio) defends President Roosevelt's Panama policy. . . . The house passes the pension appropriation bill."

In "The Literary Digest's" summary for the third week in December, 1903, (printed in its issue of December 26), the entry for December 17 reads:

"President Roosevelt signs Cuban reciprocity bill. . . . Another indictment is found by the federal grand jury in Nebraska against United States Senator Dietrich."

In none of the compilations of the 1903 year end is there any mention of the fact that on December 17, 1903, man made the beginning of the airplane. On that day the Wrights first rose into the air on a power-propelled and man-controlled machine. In history in the largest sense that is an extremely important date. But at the time it passed practically unnoticed. That beginning of aviation was destined to grow into a development which altered civilization measurably; but at the time the fact was not recognized.

Difficult This Year.

All of which is to say that it is less easy on December 31, 1926, to assay and appraise the political and other events of the year just passing, and the deeper currents associated with those events, than it will be a century or two hence.

History, truly understood, does not synchronize with the almanac, though we almost always go on the assumption that it does. Events do not separate themselves into such smoothly cut sections as the calendar; nor do the characters of history come into being with any such accommodating regard for those numerical landmarks that are the conveniences of historians and journalism. And the economic trends which really determine history to a greater degree than any other one factor are most careless of all in their disdain for dates.

The events picked out by the editors and journalists of the day as the significant ones may be the occasion of some irony on the part of historians who check up 23 years later. This present summary of 1926, here written and printed, may provide more amusement to the future historian 23 years from now than it provides profitable instruction to the reader of today.

High Commotion.

In January, 1926, there was high commotion about America adhering to the world court. The debate had begun December 17, 1925, under a senate agreement that it should continue until a final vote should be taken. It was the most exciting and interesting political debate of the year. President Coolidge was for the court, his friends in the senate were for it. Cloture was invoked to prevent filibustering opposition, a discipline rarely practiced and intensely resented by the opponents of the court.

Finally, on January 27, the friends of the court prevailed. The senate ratified adherence by a vote of 76 to 17. Those proportions looked convincing. Practically everybody said the world court issue was settled at last. The New York World proclaimed:

"Before long the membership of the United States in the world court will be an unconsidered commonplace."

The Denver Rocky Mountain News said the vote of adherence "was the concentrated force of public opinion which has never been seen operating in such effective manner."

Nevertheless on December 31, 1926, the United States was not a member of the world court, nearly everybody was convinced it was not going to be a member, and President Coolidge had said in effect (at Kansas City on Armistice day, November 11) that American adherence to the world court was a closed issue. The St. Louis Star, saddened exponent of the friends of the court, said: "Mr. Coolidge thus buries the world court hopes at the foot of a war memorial on Armistice day — another shattered dream of idealism."

This world court episode looks like an event completed within a calendar year. Actually the world court is a detail of a movement toward international cooperation, arising out of forces we cannot wholly identify, and toward a form we cannot yet predict. This movement has been under way at least a hundred years. Possibly, if we could be sure about the deeper forces bringing it about, we might be able to recognize it as having been under way for many centuries. Certainly it had become concrete and had emerged to the surface as early as the organization of the Hague tribunal in 1899.

This idea, as a world unifying force, became conspicuously apparent in the very midst of the most world-disruptive war in many centuries. In the form of the impulse known as the League of Nations it came to the center of the stage in the latter part of 1918 and the early part of 1919.

Just what form it will ultimately take, and when, is more than anybody can say on December 31, 1926.

Dry Law Up In Air.

During the year a good deal happened about prohibition, but at the end of the year it was by no means clear just what direction it all pointed. It would take a political and sociological engineer to chart the currents, eddies, snags and reefs, and to say authoritatively just what the resultant is now or is going to be.

The prohibition commotion during 1926 began with a number of newspaper polls taken in a more or less organized way throughout the country. That sign of popular interest, whether latent or whipped up, was followed by hearings by a senate committee. The hearings lasted some weeks and several million words of testimony were taken, which now repose in bound volumes in the basement storerooms of the capitol. At the end an inconclusive verdict was registered by "The Literary Digest," which, on June 19, said:

"Wets as well as drys declare themselves satisfied with the action of the senatorial committee."

Then, in November, eight states held referendum elections, formal as respects the casting and counting of the ballots, but most of them informal as respects legal effect.

New York and Illinois seemed to answer yes to the question: Should the Volstead law be modified so as not to include "beverages which are not in fact intoxicating as determined in accordance with the laws of the respective states." (This assertion by states of the right to interpret the constitution each in its own way was described by Senator Borah, of Idaho, and by William G. McAdoo as "nullification." President Coolidge described failure of the state to help enforce the prohibition amendment as "evasion.")

Wisconsin answered yes to the question. Should the Volstead law be modified to allow the manufacture and sale of 2.75 beer providing it is not consumed on premises where sold?

Nevada Answers.

Nevada answered yes to two questions: One, is prohibition a failure? And two, should congress call a constitutional convention to amend the eighteenth amendment.

Montana answered yes on a referendum to repeal all state dry laws except that forbidding sale to minors.

California and Missouri answered no to the question. Shall the state repeal its local enforcement act?

Colorado answered no to a referendum on the question. To amend the state constitution to provide for manufacture and sale of liquor whenever it does not conflict with federal laws.

On the same day on which these referendum elections were held elections for senator were held in 33 states, and elections for members of the lower house of congress in every district throughout the country. In these senatorial and congressional elections the wets made some slight gain. It is difficult to define such a gain, because the word "wet" includes a wide variety of advocacy of change, ranging from merely raising the permitted alcoholic content from one-half of one per cent to two and three-quarters per cent, all the way up to repeal of the Volstead act and repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

Roughly one may say that, whereas the former congress and senate were about 75 per cent dry, the changes made by the 1926 elections give the country a senate and house that is roughly 70 per cent dry. This, probably, is the real measure of effective change, because action by congress is about the only formal means through which changes in the present status of prohibition can be made.

What will be the status of America's adventure in prohibition ten years from now?

Notable Decisions.

In all years it is usually true that decisions made by the supreme court of the United States go more deeply to the heart of things, have a rather more permanent effect, than any actions taken by congress.

During 1926 the supreme court handed down two particularly notable decisions.

One held invalid a law passed by the legislature of Oregon through which it attempted to compel parents to send all children under 16 years of age to public schools. That law, which in effect would have proscribed practically all the parochial schools of the Catholic church, practically all the church schools of the Lutheran, Episcopalian and other denominations; and if duplicated by all other states would have proscribed all private schools, such as Exeter, Andover, St. Paul's, Groton, Lawrenceville, and scores of others. The decision of the supreme court nullifying this Oregon law was universally recognized as going to the very heart of the organization of society.

The other important decision of the supreme court was the one handed down October 25 to the effect, as some newspaper headlines put it, that congress cannot put limitations on the president's "right to fire" government employees. Congress, as long ago as 1876, had passed a law which seemed to read that postmasters of a certain class could be dismissed by the president only with the advice and consent of the senate. No test case came up until the one decided last year. While the decision of the court, to be clearly understood by the reader, should be stated at greater length than is possible here, it was in general to the effect that congress cannot put this kind of limitation on the president's right to dismiss the holder of a government office; that congress cannot insist on the president consulting congress before he decides to fire a postmaster or other federal official.

That decision looks, and actually is, important; but it, like many other events that seem to settle things, is not necessarily permanent. Congress can beat that decision around the bush whenever it is disposed to.

Mediocre Book or a Classic

(Editor's Note—Thomas Cadett, of The London Times, is the holder of the Walter Hines Page newspaper fellowship, and is spending a year in America under the terms of the fellowship. He has temporarily joined the staff of The Constitution. Mr. Cadett has served on the staffs of The San Francisco Chronicle and The Chicago Daily News. The Constitution was selected, without its knowledge, as the representative southern newspaper on which he is to serve in getting a national acquaintance with American conditions.)

BY THOMAS CADETT.

"Rascal! Your name!" For a man to wrap himself up and draw his hat over his face, and then fall upon people who are walking about without any disguise—this is not the part of a gentleman. it is the part of a scoundrel and a knave."

Schopenhauer's views upon the anonymity of the critic, "that shield of all literary rascality," are, you observe, clear and forcibly expressed. So, in spite of the obvious but pleasant difficulty of an acquaintance with the author and much of the "milieu" of her heroine, of some realization that sharp reproach and unstinted admiration are to be found at every hand, let us examine "The Hard-Boiled Virgin" from a British pen-point.

Let it here be said—for until it has been said the local connection of the book will hang like a cloud about what I write—that unless Atlanta is prepared to give up the privilege of enjoying literary titling by other novelists at their own less fortunate surroundings, there can be no quarreling with the book save where there are unnecessarily unpleasant revelations. And who is to be judge of that?

In other words, if one is prepared either to laugh at or disapprove of the foibles of other communities, the same process at the hands of others must be faced. Further, with the idea of establishing a principle rather than ascribing immortality to what may only be a very good novel—but most certainly is that—tenderness for local or family dignity, even if the autobiographical element be proved, may be a personal virtue, but it is destructive of that refreshingly healthy form of literary art known as satire.

Not To Be Ignored.

Shorn of its aptly incongruous title and its local interest, that is to say, viewed as a novel, it is not to be ignored, even by those who hold that good writing is simple writing—for they will have to revise their ideas. Only the impatient and the ignorant will find boredom therein. The rest must certainly find pleasure or, even more pleasant, acute annoyance as they take leave of Katherine Faraday and her tiresome inability to realize that there is only one illusion, which is always being shattered, only to be pieced together so cunningly each time that eternally it offers, like a box within a box, the illusion of freshness.

The ratio of inner to outer life, that is to say, of intellect and emotion to action is high; on that account alone the book commends itself to all who hold that only in bad novels is incident there on its own account. Indeed, the "plot," save for the discreetly indicated climax that robs the title of its substantive, will be found distressingly frail by seekers after red—or even fuchsia-hued—meat. But as the study of a successful struggle of an intelligent female against an upbringing that had bed and breakfast as its ultima thule; and as the revelation of a healthily iconoclastic attitude, that might nevertheless have spared one or two very harmless little idols, it is a remarkable piece of work.

It is something of a relief to find a heroine who is not so much a heroine as a principal character; moreover, her less creditable thoughts are recorded with a fine courage and a faithfulness that deserve nothing worse than surprise and certainly not disgust, since we all have them. Where conviction occasionally halts on the threshold of the reader's mind is in the youthful precocity of Katherine Faraday. It is at this point that the question arises whether or not Miss Newman has invested the doubts and self-searchings of an undoubtedly clever child with all the subtlety that later came to her. In this respect, and in this alone, the author reveals a quaint inconsistency, drawing nearer for the moment to insist upon this cleverness instead of being content merely to demonstrate it, and retiring a moment later, leaving Katherine to fight her way alone in a world that is apparently composed exclusively of potential lovers, the last of whom, being finally actual, is fortunately also impotent, a curious kind of mental promiscuity, and the treasured cleverness.

Consistent in Parts.

In all other respects Miss Newman is consistent enough. She has painted a pathetic personality who makes for herself, therefore, a pathetic world. The pity of it is that, in juggling with contemporary celebrities, she did not afford her heroine the last relief of psychoanalysis at the hands of the very Freud of whom she has become aware. As an illustration of the utter folly of exclusively academic cleverness, Katherine Faraday's personality has considerable value. As a proof, witting or unwitting, of the contention that to be "hopelessly virginal" may merely be synonymous with "hopelessly cowardly" it is convincing enough—a certain sunrise over the river Elbe is the unmistakable token.

If Miss Newman has sought to enlist for her heroine a sort of irritable sympathy, she is likely to succeed; if she has sought a place in the literary sun, most surely she has found it. Both in style and form she has achieved that rare thing, originality; it remains to see what she will do with it in future. Meanwhile, those who depreciate its value, may very fairly be set against those who ascribe it to immortality, leaving room for the middle verdict that, neither mediocre nor a classic, it is assuredly an interesting experiment.

MACHINE MADE SPECIALISTS.

A certain baking concern has an enormous trade, employs an army of salesmen, wins prizes for the best bread and makes biscuit which I'd like to bet our next ten years' supply of 'em to what have you would quickly turn that ranchman who likes 'em damned soggy into a resigned and willing cook. Were it not for the well oiled conveyors, the machinery which carries innumerable knickknacks prettied up to please small time housekeepers and sad little children this bakery could never in the world unload its biscuit. Restaurants are springing up and thriving in vast numbers in the territory served by this baking institution. One gloomily wipes the waiter's thumbprint from the edge of the soup dish and wonders whether there is a conspiracy afoot. Restaurant biscuits are well baked.

Colonel Sellers, in the spirit, seems to be in control of most lines of industry, commerce, business and even the professions.

Santa Claus filled my stocking last Christmas with a gift which resembled a cheese box, an old fashioned turned wooden box full of what I finally concluded must be shaving soap. It had come from England. If there was a name on it I failed to notice it. The box knocked around here for months, until one day it occurred to me to see whether the stuff would lather. Boy, if our poets could have such inspiration the hokum sheets of our magazines would be literature. When at length the last drop of this actually good shaving soap was gone I scurried around trying to find some more, but I might have known better. Colonel Sellers has never discovered this homely English shaving soap. He's so busy devising new lids and other jimcracks, so concentrated on improving the appearance of the package that he can't bother about the contents.

Excellent little garage, in quiet village, conducted by the proprietor, a real mechanic and one good assistant. Always a pleasure to run in when anything went wrong with the chariot. The man had an uncanny way of diagnosing the trouble after the briefest examination and he would generally have it remedied in what seemed a jiffy. Then one day the spirit of Colonel Sellers entered that garage. Next time brakes needed adjustment a brisk clerk came to take the history. Proprietor was dictating to stenographer or in conference. Time clock working obtrusively. After what seemed half an hour, clerk summoned mechanic. Mechanic requisioned card and entered upon it sundry essential data. Time clock actually said it was now 25 minutes. Here we withdrew. Preferred to let the brakes go.

The way of all commerce, it seems to me, and Colonel Sellers has not spared the medical practitioners. Young physicians turned out by the present preposterously prolonged course are in desperation almost driven into "special" practice, though qualified only for general practice. The emoluments of the specialist beckon the tyro who has been apprenticed for about 25 per cent of his productive life. He yearns to be out of debt before he retires.

Thus it happens that anybody, anywhere may have a "bone cut out of his name" at any time the fancy strikes him, or a gastroenterostomy, or an electrocardiograph.

Machine made specialists are the natural fruit of a highfalutin, impracticable course of training.

Answer—Gosh, your letter brings back memories of old Dr. Hossdoctor's Almanac. How we used to laugh over the jokes in it! And they were real jokes, too, not the up-to-date revamped kind you find in the inside cover of the quack pamphlet today. You've remembered one of the best of them all, as it seems to me now. Turning up unexpectedly in the midst of a lot of lugubrious complaints, it caught me with the windows wide open and the cop down on the corner thought some chiropractor or vinyi agent had got into my shop. But it is all right now. I'll send along rules for recovery from the constipation habit, and we'll just forget about the liver and that sore spot under your wing. I can sympathize with you over that sore spot—I had such a sore spot when Eddie Cantor went shopping for a coat with a belt in the back, and a relapse when the ranchman commented on the condition of the biscuit, but how to deal with such a spot or any other selection from the pill nursery vintage of '92 is a question I must leave to some genuine doctor who takes life seriously.

Daily Dozen..

Is cold water drunk at any time harmful? Is eight glasses of cold water a day all right? (H. F.)

Answer—As a general rule it is rather healthful to drink cold water whenever you feel thirsty, irrespective of time of day or meal time. Eight glasses a day would be all right for most persons, but a dozen glasses a day would be better for persons who are fairly active.

Frieda Hempel To Sing Here In Special Concert Friday

Frieda Hempel, the "modern Jenny Lind," most popular soprano on the concert and operatic stage today, will sing next Friday night in recital at the Auditorium, brought here by the Southern Musical Bureau as one of the artist series of attractions for the 1926-27 season. Seats will go on sale Tuesday morning at Phillips & Crew Piano company, 181 Peachtree street.

Miss Hempel has not sung in Atlanta since 1920, though she appeared frequently prior to that date as one of the biggest stars of the Metropolitan Opera company in their annual opera seasons here. She is remembered for the furore she created in "Martha," "Rigoletto" and other famous operas, particularly for her singing opposite Caruso.

On her last visit to Atlanta Miss Hempel gave her famous "Jenny Lind" program. In as much as Atlanta has heard this, she is preparing a special program for next Friday night and writes that she "hopes Atlanta will enjoy it, for I am trying to give you better than my best."

Varied Program.

The ability to arrange an attractive program is as important as the intrinsic art of the singer and in this Miss Hempel excels. Her method is a simple one, for it pivots around a system of variety, but the means of obtaining it is not easy, unless, of course, one happens to know French, German, Italian, Norwegian, Swedish, English and a little Irish brogue. That seems like a highly impossible order, yet of such diversity is Frieda Hempel's vast repertoire.

Thoroughly familiar with the field of oratorio, she may open her program with a Bach or Handel aria, and from the classics she will sail through the entire field of romantic art song, including Schubert, Schumann, Mendelssohn, Brahms and all the rest of the fine lieder composers. Then again she may begin with a set of folk songs of any country—she is as much at home in one as in another—and you may hear the Norwegian herdsman's song, a Swiss shepherd melody or a jolly Irish tune.

It is only natural that after her years of operatic experience Frieda Hempel should not limit her concert programs to the purely lyric music, but rather should insert several of her most famous dramatic arias. Behold still further variety and even within the arias one finds an unbounded gamut running from Mozart to Weber and Meyerbeer, and from Bellini to Verdi. There you have the Italian and the German—and then comes a beautiful aria from Thomas' "Mignon" and another from Massenet's "Manon," rounding out the group with a touch of the fragile French.

Pleases All Patrons.

With Frieda Hempel the coloratura and florid art of song, what the Italians call the "bel canto," is only secondary. Assisted by Louis P. Fritze, formerly flautist of the Metropolitan Opera company, Miss Hempel usually gives one or two of those florid melodies for the sake of those in the audience who enjoy music from a purely technical standpoint. Trills and high notes abound when the lovely soprano gives the "Shadow Song" from "Dinorah," the "Casta Diva" from "Norma" or the ever popular "Etoile du Nord." While she enjoys such vocal outbursts it is in simple folk songs, pretty waltzes and lullabys that the true Hempel is to be found. Just listen to her sing the "Kiss Waltz" of Arditi, Strauss' "Blue Danube" or Humperdinck's "Lullaby" and Max Reger's "Virgin's Lullaby."

There is one more phase of her versatile art that is admirable, namely her proud championing of songs in English, everything from old folk melodies and vesper hymns to contemporary songs such as those of Granville Bantock, Lieurance and many others. Thus far she has limited her American songs to those of the old revolutionary period. Perhaps this season she may find real modern yankee melody to be added to her repertoire of a thousand songs. And that number, by the way, does not even include her many songs for voice and orchestra!

Everyday Questions

BY DR. S. PARKES CADMAN

Richmond, Va.

I have read your occasional references to spiritual healing with deep interest, because it seems to be my only hope for continued life here. I am suffering from an apparently incurable disease at a time when my husband and children greatly need me. Can you shed any light on this problem?

I would gladly help you if I could, but I fear that the mass of indefinite and incoherent opinion upon spiritual healing is beyond my powers of clarification. Certainly the claims of Lourdes and similar shrines deserve the most respectful attention. The missions of reputable healers like Mr. Hickson also forbid one's unthinking hostility to the process.

I notice that those who sincerely believe in and practice your "only hope" are prompt to recognize the tangle of interactions by body, soul and spirit which besets spiritual healing. They require, I think rightly, the patient's strict obedience to the conditions laid down. All healers known to me regard complete faith in God and in their ministry as indispensable requisites.

Without doubt there is a therapeutic power which responds to favorable spiritual conditions. Its existence and nature are mysterious enough to repel diagnosis. But its evidences seem to me irrefutable. They cannot be dismissed as deceits of the imagination or lying wonders.

Christian healers would deny that this power is in nature. They declare that its origin is divine, and regard themselves as nothing more than the channels of its transmission. Its manifestations are intermittent; dependent on the character of the malady and the confidence or lack of it of the sufferer. Christ experienced its presence in Himself and used it for the relief of those who hung upon His words. His apostles also employed it for the furtherance of the gospel. Nevertheless, it did not cure St. Paul of his thorn in the flesh, nor heal Trophimus, whom he left at Miletum sick.

Since psychotherapy is now established among physicians, why not seek the advice of your doctor? He understands your case and is best qualified to advise you in the matter of spiritual healing. I feel sure you are aware of the misleadings of excited feeling, and also that true faith and life's ultimate blessedness do not depend upon the body or upon anything that can happen to it.

New York City.

In a recent publication I read that $2,000,000,000 are annually obtained by fraud; and that our crime bill is $15,000,000,000 a year. And yet the churches say that America is a religious country. Dare you say it is?

Certainly I dare. I am saying it every day, not because "In God we trust" is a national motto, but because this nation is professedly, heartily, statistically, irrepressibly and determinedly religious.

The implication of your question is that this cannot be so because our crime bill and our liabilities for fraud are so heavy. But you do not take into account the fact that America, like every new country, is in a state of becoming.

We are passing through the transition stage in which we must work out of our national system the virus that is frequently of foreign origin. Study a list of the names of delinquents and criminals and you will see for yourself that years must elapse before we can expect to purge this element from the social system. The complete Americanization of some types of humanity resident here takes 50 years.

I admit that serious charges can be made against the country's handling of criminal problems, and my confidence in its essential religiousness does not blind me to this short-coming. But neither are our jurists, social workers or police authorities blind to it.

Last year Dean Roscoe Pound, of Harvard Law school, declared that our legal system which served us well in the pioneer days must be altered to suit modern conditions. Agreed. But this is a big country and time is needed to effect the change. Meanwhile, we do the best we can with an ineffective system.

Critics like yourself fall into doubt about the advance of the Kingdom of God in America. Nevertheless, it is advancing despite our huge crime bill. Do you know how much money was given during the last 10 years in the way of benefactions by men of Hebrew, Christian and philanthropic mind? As reported, the total amount runs into several billion dollars.

To F. L. S.

They tell me, Frank L. Stanton, you have gone
To join th' immortal host on yonder shore;
They say the golden harp you played upon
Shall sing unto the hearts of men no more;
But I, who lately held your hand as friend,
In friendship's name the words of men deny;
I know your joyous song shall never end,
I know that Frank L. Stanton can not die!

Wherever hearthstones are; in every land;
Wherever shines the sun, and children play;
Wherever Mother-love, with soothing hand
Shall smooth a brow, or wipe a tear away,
Wherever men may toil, yet toiling sing,
The joy you brought into the world shall stay;
The songs you wrought, throughout the years shall ring,
The love you bore the earth shall live for aye!

Flowers at Albany.

Albany, Ga., January 8.—(AP)—The old adage that "April showers bring May flowers" does not hold here. Local citizens are already sporting spring posies plucked from their own gardens. Narcissi were found blooming in several yards on New Year's day.

Atlanta Merchants Meet In Banquet Here Tuesday

Plans to begin the 25th year of its existence with an elaborate banquet have been completed by the Atlanta Merchants and Manufacturers' association, C. Arthur Kitchings, president, announced Saturday. The annual banquet will be held at 6:30 Tuesday night at the Atlanta Athletic club. Former Senator Hoke Smith will be guest of honor.

Election of officers will feature the annual meeting. A summary of the association's accomplishments during 1926 will be given and a full outline of proposed activities during 1927 will be presented to members.

Membership in the Atlanta Merchants and Manufacturers' association is composed of approximately 200 leading Atlanta manufacturers and wholesalers and is the largest organization of its kind south of Chicago and New York. Members take an active part in forwarding the work of the association and in bringing to Atlanta retail and wholesale trade that otherwise would be shifted to other cities.

During 1926 the association broadcasted its message of "buy from Atlanta" to more than 300,000 merchants of the south. These included direct communications from the association and messages from various individual members. This campaign will be carried forward in the new year and on a broader scale, according to present plans.

Through the Southern Merchant, official organ of the association, more than 80,000 merchants have been reached during the year with direct talks on the advantages of trading in Atlanta. Responses from the advertising placed in this journal have been numerous and from them hundreds of merchants have been pursuaded that Atlanta is their logical trading center.

Plans for the coming year include an extended membership drive, taking into membership division offices which now are actually warehousing merchandise in Atlanta and shipping from here. This new rule was passed recently by the board of directors of the association in order to further emphasize Atlanta increased service in all lines of business.

The Southern Merchant will continue as the official organ through which the markets' news and views will be broadcasted. Direct correspondence with merchants throughout the south will also be a part of the concentrated plan for 1927.

Stone Mountain Blast To Remove Tons of Granite

The last great "bench" of granite, comprising approximately 140,000 cubic feet, and stretching 200 feet across the mountainside, will fall from Stone mountain Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, as the final touch in the operations preparatory to carving the figures of Jefferson Davis, Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson, forming the central group in the gigantic memorial. Governor Clifford Walker, Mayor I. N. Ragsdale, and a large number of state officials have been invited to attend the ceremony and are expected to be present when the granite falls.

This last blast, which will be one of the largest ever undertaken in the south, will clear away the superfluous granite in the area whereon the feet of the horses will rest, and extending as high as the knees. The preceding six "benches," beginning at the top and at the heads of the riders, have cleared the area approximately 110 feet in height. Already more than 400,000 cubic feet of granite has been torn away in the operations beginning September 15, 1926.

Following the blast Thursday, the outlining of figures of horses and riders will begin, estimated by the sculptor and the contractor as the latter part of January. With the last blast, the first of the three major operations will have been concluded. Outlining the figures and removing roughly the stone will constitute the second operation.

Some idea of the magnitude of the blast may be gathered from the statement that each of the holes are drilled to a 20-foot depth, the row of holes extending 200 feet at intervals of three or four feet. At the spark from the electric box the entire shelf lifts into the air, and then begins falling from the mountain, a tremendous spectacle of force and power. At the base of the mountain now lies the removed granite, equivalent to 1,000 carloads, or a freight train six miles long.

An invitation has been extended to the public to view this blast, and a large crowd is expected to gather along the roadway before the mountain.

To F. L. S.

I am walking in my garden where the roses are abloom.
But I miss the fragrance of their delicate perfume;
The red within the hearts of them has turned to ashen gray,
For the rarest bloom is missing from its stem of yesterday.

I am roaming through the wood and listening for a song—
But a broken note is heard, and softly borne along
Upon the harp-strings of the wind from the song-birds all:
"The mocking bird has taken wing unto the Master's call."

MACON TO OBSERVE SIDNEY LANIER WEEK

Macon, Ga., January 8.—(AP)—Lanier week honoring the memory of Sidney Lanier, Macon's poet son, will be observed the first week in February it was decided at a meeting of the Sidney Lanier association held at Washington Memorial library.

Mrs. Walter D. Lamar, president of the organization, presided. Mrs. Lamar asked for suggestions for the observance of Lanier's birthday. It was suggested that each of the civic clubs of the city hold exercises commemorative of the poet during the week and that the week be brought to a close with a musical or other appropriate event to which admission would be charged and the proceeds be used towards furnishing the Sidney Lanier room at the Washingaon Memorial library. At present the association has $1,000 available toward the room.

J. A. Coburn Spins Few Yarns Of Ministrels in South of Old

:: OLD TIMER IN TRIBUTE TO HAM TREE ::

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

Revival in interest in the days when minstrel shows were in the hey dey of their glory came with the recent visit to Atlanta of McIntyre and Heath, famous comedians, who closed a week's engagement Saturday at Loew's Grand theater. Several prominent men in minstrelsy of the olden days wrote The Constitution following an interview published with McIntyre and Heath, and related interesting details of "trouping" in those days in the south.

One of the letters to The Constitution came from J. A. Coburn, owner of J. A. Coburn's minstrels, one of the few organized white companies now on the road which is touring Georgia and which is rounding out its 29th season.

Mr. Coburn relates an amusing incident of the old trouping days in connection with the first time he witnessed a production of "The Ham Tree," by McIntyre and Heath, in New York. Mr. Coburn is not only a veteran manager but he steps into the center of his band and gives about as perfect exhibition of solo work on the cornet extant in these days of muted trumpets and saxophone whines.

Headed Barlow Minstrels.

At one time Mr. Coburn, with his partner Lew Baldwin, headed the Great Barlow Minstrels, composed of Barlow, Ward, Coburn and Baldwin. In the roster of the show were such stars as Frank P. McNish and Walter Wilson, song writer who wrote, "Ain't Dat a Shame," and numerous other "coon shouting" songs. Those were the days of George Primrose and his soft shoe dance; John Queen and "Just Because She Made Dem Goo Goo Eyes." Dan Quinlan was the graceful interlocutor with Al G. Fields, and among the better known shows that toured the country were Primrose and West's minstrels, Haverly's Mastodon minstrels, the Great Barlow minstrels, the Coburn organization, Vogel and Deming, Hi Henry's minstrels, Gorton's, Guy Brothers, W. S. Cleveland's and George Wilson's, McIntyre, Heath and Belmont and numerous others. Coburn, McIntyre and Heath, George Wilson and Dan Quinlan are the only ones mentioned with these organizations still active.

In those days such modern day comedians as Bert Swor, Billie Beard, Lasses White, Sugar Foot Gaffney, "Slim" Vermont, Harry Van Fossenn, Al Herrman, Frank Quinn and others were mere boys in knee trousers.

The incident mentioned by Mr. Coburn follows:

"In 1892-3 several performers mentioned by McIntyre and Heath in this morning's issue of The Atlanta Constitution together with Lew Baldwin, then Coburn and Baldwin musical comedians and myself, were en route with a well-known minstrel company carrying 60 Japs, and 11 Arabs, about 80 people.

"The route from New Orleans east and north was "wildcatted" by "Bill" our manager, with all night rides, morning parades, daily matinees and night shows until we were absolutely worn out. Theaters packed to the doors but receipts inadequate to pay salaries and expenses. We played Atlanta en route, of course, and finally reached Richmond, Va., early in March. During the night show "Bill" came through the dressing rooms as usual slipping us a five or ten dollar bill,—to cover hotels and eats,—but there seemed to be considerable haste and strained concentration in our worthy manager's efforts and I became convinced the "blowoff" was right now. It was Saturday night, no route ahead. The show closed.

Land "Eat Money."

I sent Baldwin to "Cap Putnams Variety theater," before the show was out to see if there was a chance for us the following week. Putnams was a 7:30 to 2: a. m. featuring the bar, wine room and plenty of intermissions. We secured work, and had to remain there three weeks to get enough money together to get back to New York, and have "eats" long enough to insure another job.

On arrival at the old town—Baldwin went out to meet friends. I drifted to 14th street then the centre of booking offices and theaters. It was cold. I went into Keiths Fourteenth street theater and "Up" not down stairs. Was little interested in the bill,—sore, disgusted, broke, and blue. My attention was finally drawn to the stage by an unusual "hand" and I looked down to see a darky in Prince Albert coat, a tall $11.45 (silk hat) and carrying the front end of a trunk —followed by a rough dressed "boy" on the other end of the trunk and carrying a bass drum reading on its head "Georgia Minstrels,"—they were "walking back." I let out one yelp that could have been heard in Pastors, —and forgot my troubles. One of the team looked up to where the noise had come from and said, "I bet that's a nuther niggah singah jest struck town broke." Oh boy, I'll say it was, and I was it. I went out of that theater feeling bully. We got work and I'm still in the game. I have never seen or heard anything in vaudeville or enjoyed an act like "The Ham Tree—McIntyre and Heath." There never was and never will be another act like it or another team in minstrelsy like them. Success and good luck to them, and long may they wave."

Governor To Speak.

Governor Clifford Walker will go to St. Simon Island Tuesday to deliver an address at a civic celebration to be held there. A new resort development on Long Island, adjoining St. Simon Island, is now under way under direction of Howard Coffin, famous Detroit engineer.

They said she'd never live to be 18

Every woman at some time faces a situation like this—but how few solve it so happily?

"Could any woman face a more serious situation than I did? Jim,—that's my husband,—had been feeling miserable for months. So fagged out and weary he could not half attend to his job. When he came home he fell into his bed irritable and exhausted.

Edna, the oldest of my five girls, was so thin and listless that I was constantly worried about her.

One day the blow fell—or rather two blows.

Jim's employer suggested that if he could not get himself in shape his place would have to be filled with a stronger and healthier man. And at school the doctors said that Edna would never live to be 18.

Dark hours indeed. My home, my husband, my children and my income all threatened at once.

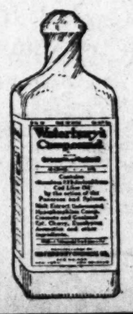

That was six months ago. Today Jim is stronger and healthier than he ever was in his life and he has been promoted with a raise. I have quit worrying and have gained twelve pounds. And Edna—well, I laugh at those worries now."

JOHNSON TO SING ON ATWATER KENT PROGRAM TONIGHT

Brilliant Canadian Tenor Will Feature Concert Broadcast by WEAF and 14 Other Stations.

Edward Johnson, brilliant tenor of the Metropolitan opera, will broadcast his Atwater Kent concert from WEAF and fourteen connected stations, on Sunday night, January 9, at 8:15 p. m., central time.

The famous Canadian tenor, who has toured the world in concert, has become an enthusiastic radio fan and predicts that it will not be long before the operas will be broadcast in full from metropolitan centers, resulting ultimately in opera becoming America's most popular form of dramatic entertainment.

Mr. Johnson believes the large operatic organizations will soon arrive at a realization of the publicity value of nation-wide broadcasting and that this radio development will in time effect an increasing number of opera companies. He also predicts that larger cities will in time support municipal opera, as European cities have done for years.

"Never before has a nation made such strides in bringing music to the people," said Mr. Johnson, "and never before has there been such an imperative desire for the finer things that older civilization and culture have given.

"Radio, phonographs and reproducing pianos have brought music into almost every home, and the result is that choral societies, orchestras and bands have sprung up by the hundreds. I returned from 10 years in the old world to find 15 symphony orchestras of the first rank.

"I believe the next important step in radio development will be the broadcasting of complete operas. Tendencies in this direction are already apparent. All the leading opera singers are now broadcasting operatic arias, and the broadcasting of synopses of operas of one hour duration is proving most popular. Opera will surely be broadcast when subsidized to reach more people."

   Miss Fleischer, Mr. Johnson and Orchestra.

N.Y. SYMPHONY TO PLAY AGAIN ON SATURDAY

Walter Damrosch, the noted leader of the New York Symphony, will broadcast another of his highly popular dramatic piano recitals of Wagnerian operas Saturday evening, January 15, Balkite hour, 8 p. m. central time over WEAF, WEEI, WGR, WFI, WCAE, WSAI, WTAM, WWJ, WGN, WCCO, KSD, WDAF, WOC, WCAP. Mr. Damrosch has had perhaps one of the most interesting and spectacular careers as a musician of any one in this country today, and has occupied the unique position of succeeding his father as conductor of the famous New York symphony, a position which he has now held for four decades.

In this recital Mr. Damrosch will present the third and last act of "Gotterdammerung" and therewith conclude his series of concerts on the Nibelung ring. Though "Gotterdammerung" is the last opera of the Ring group, it was the first to be written. It was first performed at Bayreuth, August 17, 1876.

In the third act of "Gotterdammerung" Siegfried is found, strayed away from the main hunting party, and meeting up with the Rhine maidens who almost succeed in coaxing the ring away from him. Then up comes the rest of the party to sit down by the riverside for lunch. Hagen then gives Siegfried an antidote for the love philtre and stabs him in the back. Thus Siegfried dies upon his shield and Hagen returns to the palace, proclaiming Siegfried's death by a wild boar. The body is brought in, Gunther and Hagen fight for the ring and Gunther is slain. But the dead Siegfried's hand closes over the ring when Hagen attempts to remove it.

Brynhild comes, the funeral pyre is erected, and throwing the torch into the pyre, she rides her horse into the flames. The palace catches fire, the Rhine overflows extinguishing the conflagration and permitting the three Rhine maidens to swim in and remove the ring from the dead Siegfried's finger. Hagen attempts to grasp the ring but is drowned by the Rhine daughters. In the distance at the same time appears the house of the gods, Valhalla, being consumed in the fires of Loki just as the final curtain falls.

The Balkite concert next Saturday night with Walter Damrosch and the New York symphony will include music from the works of Mendelssohn, Casella, Tschaikowsky, Bach and Saint-Saens.

Gigli, DeLuca and Chemet Feature Victor Program

Beniamino Gili and Guiseppe De Luca, Metropolitan stars, and Mme. Renee Chemet, violinist, who will take part in the elaborate Victor concert to be broadcast January 14.

Stars of the operatic and concert stage will feature the second concert sponsored by the Victor Talking Machine company to be broadcast from WJZ and the stations of the Blue Network, WBZ, KDKA and KYW at 8 o'clock, Friday night, January 14. Beniamino Gigli, tenor; Giuseppe de Luca, baritone, both of the Metropolitan Opera company, and Renee Chemet, the noted French violinist, will be supported in this program by the Victor concert orchestra under the direction of Rosario Bourdon.

Beniamino Gigli was born at Recanati in Italy on March 20, 1890, and began his musical studies at childhood. His father was the sexton of the largest church in his native town and for ten years young Gigli sang in the choir, soon rising to be the chief soloist. His voice attracted great attention and he was sent to the conservatory at Rome, where he studied under Rosati making his operatic debut in "La Gioconda" in 1914, at Rovigo. He became the most celebrated Italian tenor of the day and in 1918 was selected by Toscanini to sing the tenor role in "Mefistofele," and shortly thereafter he created the tenor part of Mascagni's opera, "Lodoletta." A tour of Latin America was very successful and when he came to the United States was engaged practically immediately by the Metropolitan Opera company, for which he sang a number of important roles.

Giuseppe de Luca, who was heard in one of the Victor concerts of the 1926 series, was born in Rome, receiving his musical education under Bartolini, the famous baritone. He later entered the Conservatory of Santa Cecilia in Rome, where he studied for a period of five years before making his debut in the opera "Faust." He followed this with eight winter seasons with the famous La Scala Milan and then came to the United States, where he became one of the most distinguished members of the Metropolitan Opera company.

Renee Chemet, another artist who was heard in last year's Victor series is regarded as one of the outstanding violinists of today and she is frequently referred to as the logical successor to the famous Maud Powell. This will be the third time that Mme. Chemet has been called upon to appear in one of the Victor concerts and the radio listeners who have heard her in the past will recall the lightness and fleetness of her finger work and virility and deep musical feeling of her playing.

SEARS-ROEBUCK FARM COURSE ATTRACTIVE

Hundreds of farmers and agricultural students throughout the southeast have enrolled in the radio farm short course now being broadcast over WSB under the auspices of the Sears, Roebuck agricultural foundation and the National Fertilizer association. Every southern state east of the Mississippi has representatives enrolled for the series of discussions by outstanding farm authorities of the southeast, which clearly indicates that farmers with radios are making a careful study of their 1927 cropping problems.

The farm short course, which was planned to emphasize farm production problems in the southeast in 1927, will close Friday night, January 14, at 5:30 p. m., with the famous mock farm court, "The Trial of a Soil Robber."

Free copies of all lessons broadcast during the course will be sent to all students, and they may also compete for prizes to be awarded to the twenty-five students who submit the best examination papers at the close of the course. Details of the examination will be announced later.

Among agricultural leaders who will be presented on the short course this week are R. N. Hamilton, acting chief agronomist, Clemson college, South Carolina; J. C. Pridmore, director, soil improvement committee; Ward H. Sacks, agronomist, soil improvement committee; J. M. Purdom, tobacco specialist, Atlantic Coast Line railway; C. A. Whittle, soil improvement committee; C. A. McLendon, plant breeder, Waynesboro, Ga., and J. T. Williamson, agronomist, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, Alabama.

Invents Radio Device

DR. PALMER H. CRAIG

Youthful head of the department of physics at Mercer university, Macon, who has been offered $100,000 for his invention of a device to take the place of batteries and vacuum tubes in radios. He describes the invention as "an application of bismuth plates as detectors and amplifiers."

Berry Cochran Opens Service As Radio Expert

With the passing of the Cochran Electric company, one of Atlanta's pioneer radio wholesaling organizations, a new service to the public has been inaugurated by Berry W. Cochran, who headed the Cochran Electric company for many years.

The new service to be inaugurated, according to an announcement just issued, consists of an expert radio engineering service on any make of radio receiving apparatus. So complicated has the radio industry become that the establishment of qualified radio repair service has followed as a necessity.

Mr. Cochran, whose new enterprise will be carried on under the name of the Atlanta Radio Laboratory, has been associated with the industry for more than 14 years. He is well versed in the principles of radio and thoroughly conversant with the fundamental circuits of practically every set now on the market.

According to its recent announcement, the Atlanta Radio Laboratory is in a position to furnish expert repair service as well as rewiring. It is the first step taken in Atlanta to furnish the public with up-to-the-minute radio advice and service.

Set Building Made Easy

Operating the Super Hilco-Dyne.

BY J. J. FOOTE.

Turning on the filament switch at right hand side of the set turns on both A and B battery current and set is in operation. A voltmeter wired in the circuit to show voltage of each tube is an asset, but a good pair of ears can regulate voltage on tubes better than a voltmeter and this should be done on the Hilco-Super in order to get best results, both from tubes and the set.

The way to do this is to tune in a station, preferably a distant station. Then, beginning at the first rheostat, turn the light down as low as possible, that is, as low as you can without lowering the signal you are receiving. Then turn the second rheostat the same way and so on until all five have been set. After one proper setting, the rheostats do not have to be adjusted, unless the battery runs down or the tubes are changed. The battery should not be allowed to run down and should be kept full charged all the time on any radio set.

When tubes are adjusted properly the only operation needed with the Super-Hilco-Dyne is to turn the filament switch on, then tune with the two dials by setting both at zero and turning together toward 100. The right hand dial should run slightly above the left hand dial. When a station signal is passed a slight whistle will be heard if the potentiohmeter is set for weakest volume. Now tune in the weak signal to where you receive it strongest with both dials. If it is not loud enough, turn the potentiohmeter to the right and this will increase volume to full loud speaker volume.

Old Model.

This operation is all that is necessary for the new style Super-Hilco-Dyne, which uses an oscilator to cover all the broadcast wave lengths, but if you have the old model, the operation is little different, as follows: The first operation of turning on the filament switch and setting tubes to operate best burning low, is the same as on the new style set, but when the dials are turned from zero toward 100 the right hand dial will run considerably above the left hand dial and when the right hand dial has reached 100 the left hand dial will be about 50, the dials set this way have a wave length range of about 450 meters. Now throw the little switch in between ment, the Atlanta Radio Laboratory is in a position to furnish expert repair service as well as rewiring. It is the first step taken in Atlanta to furnish the public with up-to-the-minute radio advice and service.

No Regeneration.

The Super-Hilco-Dyne does not employ regeneration, therefore it will not annoy your neighbors with squeals and howls. Sometimes, however, when listening over a Super-Hilco-Dyne you will hear the set howl or squeal. This is due to a neighbor who has a set that squeals or howls and you may prove it, by not touching your set and soon you will hear the squeals or howls stop as your neighbor tunes for another station.

When two or more stations are operating on the same wave, whistles are heard, which originate from the stations sending. This cannot be tuned out on any set.

The Super-Hilco-Dyne operating on the Super-Hetrodyne principal is the sharpest tuning set known and will separate any station that can be separated. It also will bring in distant stations on a loop aerial and with good loud speaker quality.

Any further information desired will be gladly given if you will send self-addressed stamped envelope to the radio editor of The Constitution, or you may write direct to James J. Foote, Radio Engineer, Atlanta Hilco Corporation, 80 Mangum street, Atlanta, Ga.

ENTIRE VILLAGE IS WIPED OUT BY AVALANCHE

Tiflis, Republic of Georgia, January 8.—(AP)—Most of the inhabitants were buried alive when avalanches, crashing hundreds of feet, obliterated an entire village in the Kudar district of southern Ossetia, which is the name given to the central part of the main Caucasus range.

Soldiers are working desperately to extricate the victims. In the Okonsky district snow slides have destroyed more than 300 peasant homes and the headquarters of the local government with a heavy death toll.

AGREEMENT FINALLY REACHED ON RADIO LEGISLATION

COMPROMISE BILL IS BEING PENNED BY SENATOR DILL

Measure Provides for Commission Appointed by President, But Acting Under Department of Commerce.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Washington, January 8.—Complete agreement between senate and house conferees on radio legislation became assured today.

The conferees, after tentatively settling most of the controversial points instructed Senator Dill, democrat, of Washington, and Representative White, republican, of Maryland, to draft the compromise bill with a view to submitting it for final approval next Tuesday.

The tentative agreement provides that a commission appointed by the president shall have complete authority over allocation of wave lengths and licensing of broadcasting stations for a period of one year.

The department of commerce will retain administrative control of radio from the start and at the end of a year will take over original jurisdiction over wave length allocations and broadcasting stations. Thereafter provision would be made for appeals from rulings of the department of commerce.

The compromise is fairly satisfactory, both to the senate conferees who have held out for commission control independent of Secretary of Commerce Hoover and to the house conferees who favored the continuation of department of commerce control.

More Stations.

The year of 1927 promises bigger—if not better—broadcasting, inasmuch as it shatters all previous records by according to the public the programs of 671 stations, which, including those which have gone out of business during the year, amounts to a net gain of 135 new stations over the year previous.

However, since July 1, when Attorney General John Garibaldi Sargent ripped off the lid and informed Secretary Hoover he no longer had control of the situation, 159 stations have been licensed to go on the air on any old wave length.

More than 100 stations already established jumped their wave lengths, 150 changed their power, and 120 stations were reported under construction—among them 44 in Chicago, 19 in Seattle, 14 in New Orleans, 11 in San Francisco, 9 in Boston and 4 in New York city.

Where a year ago—when it was thought 500 stations was more than the traffic could bear—and eight to ten new stations a week began to cause apprehension, the first week in 1927 sees the average about doubled. Because of the impression that whatever else congress may do the free-for-all licensing of stations is soon to be cut off, there has been a wild scramble to get under the wire, no less than 36 stations having been granted broadcasting licenses during that time.

If they should continue to come in at this rate, or anything like it, and congress does not act, this year will surely see 1,000 stations on the air—or about five times as many as there ought to be. In other words, the situation is becoming alarmingly and rapidly worse.

WARMER WEATHER AND LIGHT RAINS PROMISED SUNDAY

Light rains accompanied by higher temperatures is the weather outlay for Atlanta today, according to C. F. von Herrmann, local meteorologist.

The rains will not be heavy and may not exceed a heavy mist, Mr. von Herrmann said. The sky will be overcast all day and the mercury will climb about 10 degrees higher than on Saturday. The rains are caused by a disturbance over Texas, he said.

The highest temperature reading Saturday was 44 degrees and the minimum was 40 degrees. Low reading for today will be 45 degrees and the highest about 55 degrees, Mr. von Herrmann predicted.

The rains today will break an 11-day drouth for Atlanta. Although this dry period is comparatively short for most times of the year, it is unusual in January, Mr. von Herrmann stated. No cold weather is in sight at present, as moderate temperatures are recorded throughout the northwest, he declared.

RADIO-ING The Air Waves.

BY WILL H. SMITH.

The Constitution's International Radio Atlas came off the press Saturday and gave the Dial Twister an opportunity to learn a lot about the geography of these good old United States last night as he romped round the dials and checked distances, wave lengths and locations of the various stations he heard.

The Atlas, compiled by the Cram Publishing company, makers of maps, is one of the most comprehensive books of the kind that the Dial Twister has seen in many a moon. It has four large maps in colors, of the United States, Canada, the world, and an additional map showing the boundaries of the various amateur radio districts.

The various broadcasting stations of the United States are spotted on the map in red for easy location, so that when one has heard the station he can mark the location in addition to entering its dial settings in an accompanying log.

Much Information.

Besides the various maps, the Atlas contains a wealth of information for the convenience and enjoyment of the radio fan. One of the most interesting bits of information the Dial Twister noted was the list of international call signals that accompanies the world map, on which are spotted all the prominent stations of the various nations. Maybe we'll be able to locate a few of the foreign stations this year during international broadcast week.

The Atlas, which retails regularly at 50 cents wherever maps are sold, will be passed out to readers of The Constitution for 25 cents and a properly signed coupon. These coupons must be presented in order to take advantage of the special price at which the Atlas is being offered. The coupon is published in another column of Sunday's Constitution.

Last night, just to satisfy our curiosity, we speared WBAP, at Fort Worth, Texas, and then took our perfectly good ruler out and found that it was not nearly as far away as we so often thought. Do you know how many miles away as the crow flies, Fort Worth is? Make a guess. We found it to be but 825 miles from Atlanta to Fort Worth. It was 637 miles from Fort Worth to Denver but only 1,275 miles from Atlanta to Denver. From now on we will not feel so big when we spear KOA, at Denver. The map proved Chicago was a lot nearer than the railway fare we paid coming down here would seem to indicate. The railroad fare covered 900 miles if our memory serves us correctly yet Chicago, as the crow flies, is but a paltry 600 miles away.

Good Reception.

If one wants to enjoy a real evening's sport grab one of these Atlases and sit down at your radio receiving set and see just where your outfit is taking you. You will be as surprised as was the Dial Twister.

Saturday evening was one of the best receptive nights we have had so far this year. Stations came in with ease and with great volume that was unmarred by static or interference of any kind. We heard some excellent concerts from the four points of the compass. Our Stromberg-Carlson treasure chest was put to work with the dinner hour concerts and was kept busy throughout the evening. Now that we know it is percolating as it really should we are looking forward to Sunday evening's entertainment with a great deal of pleasure and anticipation.

New Radio Movies Device Held Success

Radio television apparatus developed by Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson and demonstrated to electrical engineers' convention in St. Louis, is declared by some experts to be most convincing of several similar attempts to solve the problem. It is claimed the invention will flash on a screen visions of events happening many miles away, giving effect of movies. Left, receiving device which puts pictures on screen; right, sending equipment. The cluster of lights to which Alexanderson is pointing do the projecting.

SIGMA NU VOTES TO SUPPORT PLAN OF IMPROVEMENT

Headed by E. G. Gallaher, widely-known scientist, philanthropist, manufacturer and economist of New York city, the alumni of Sigma Nu fraternity in Atlanta will cooperate with other members of the organization in carrying on a campaign to stimulate a wider interest in education all over the United States, it was decided at a banquet meeting Saturday night at the Athletic club.

A vote to carry on such a campaign was taken after a talk by Mr. Gallaher, who was honor guest of the occasion. Gallaher told how Sigma Nu chapters in other cities greeted his proposals.

The Atlanta alumni of the fraternity offered a unanimous vote in favor of taking part in the campaign. The idea, as outlined by Mr. Gallaher, is to build higher educational principles, in both a material and idealistic way, on what has already been done. Rather than build new colleges, it is proposed to improve those already established. Fifty members of the Atlanta alumni attended the banquet.

STREET, SEWER PROJECTS SOON TO BE LAUNCHED

Widening of Fair street from Capitol avenue to Pearl and extension of the Lloyd street sewer from the A. & W. P. belt line railroad about 280 feet south of Boulevard will be two major projects to be sponsored by the Third Ward Improvement club, it was announced Saturday.

The Georgia Railway & Power company has agreed to provide a $10,000 fund for the widening project and the city and county each will post $25,000. This will make the total cost $60,000. The proposal is to widen Fair street 7.5 feet on each side, making a traffic boulevard.

The finance committee of city council this week will be asked to provide adequate funds to carry to completion this year these two improvements.

CITY PLAYGROUND PLANS MENACED

Fear that the Atlanta playground system may be crippled through the pruning system necessary to balance Atlanta's financial sheet during 1927, was expressed Saturday by John A. White, chairman of the parks committee of city council.

Mr. White and the committee have asked for a fund of $50,000 to operate the playgrounds throughout the year, and stated that thousands of Atlanta parents are interested vitally in establishment of the play centers for the physical and moral development of the city's youth.

The city last fall began the first year-round play program in Atlanta and this was abandoned when funds for its operation were exhausted. The experiment was declared to be a success in every phase, and thousands of children were given supervised play advantages for less than 10 cents a week for each child.

"There is no more important a matter to come before the finance committee than provision for supervised play for Atlanta's youth," Mr. White said Saturday in commenting on the situation. "We should take every precaution to insure proper recreation facilities for our children, and we have found by experience that the playground is the best yet devised.

"The playground is democratic. It appeals to the rich and poor, the old and young, and the program which we put on last fall fully justified itself. Practically all live civic and patriotic organizations are already on record as favoring a year-round play program, and we hope that these organizations will rally to the support of the system which we hope to inaugurate just as soon as the January finance sheet has been approved by council and the mayor.

The parks department under the direction of L. L. Wallis has grown by leaps and bounds until at the present time property owned by the city for recreational purposes is valued at more than $5,000,000. What corporation would permit a $5,000,000 plant to remain idle nine months of the year only to operate three months? We have a $5,000,000 plant or a series of play plants valued at that figure, which heretofore have lain idle in this manner. It is time we took advantage of our resources and helped build strong, red-blooded Atlantans."

"B" Eliminator or Rectifier Tubes

Satisfactory socket power devices, including "B" eliminators, in order to supply power for operating your receiver directly from the house lighting circuit, must deliver constant and uniform direct current voltage under varying line voltages and load conditions. The filament type rectifier has numerous advantages over all other rectifying devices.

CX-313 is a full wave rectifier. CX-316B is a half wave rectifier. CX-374 is a glow tube used to regulate output voltage. C-376 is a "ballast" tube designed to regulate input voltage.

PILES DISAPPEAR WHEN TREATED FROM INSIDE

COMBINATION TREATMENT WITH INTERNAL TABLETS QUICKLY CONQUERS SEVEREST CASES

Thousands of Former Sufferers Who Had Abandoned All Hope of Relief Have Been Freed at Last by This Original, Scientific Method

Piles, which authorities state is one of the most prevalent afflictions of the human race, is no longer regarded as a serious trouble. Unfortunate and painful they are, sparing neither old nor young, man, woman nor child; but easily and pleasantly banished by a new scientific treatment.

To this good news is added the information that the new method has been thoroughly tested and proved before such announcement could be published. In thousands of cases where victims have suffered for years and frankly given up all hope of relief, this marvelously simple method has freed them so quickly of piles that they were positively amazed.

"We are so thoroughly convinced of the merits of our treatment," says the E. R. Page Company, of Marshall, Michigan, the originator of this method, "that we do not hesitate to let those suffering with the most aggravated cases try our treatment without risk or expense to themselves. In fact, we have purposely sought and found such cases as were most painful and of longest standing—some who had been afflicted well over thirty years—and persuaded them to try our method. From every nook and corner of the country, reports reach us daily telling of the relief brought.

"This is what has encouraged us to carry on the work—the knowledge that we were giving the world something that would ease the pain and suffering, the ill health and unhappiness, of so many thousands of pile victims."

Real Trouble Well Concealed

The Page Internal Tablet Combination Treatment, as this new method is called, quickly strikes at the root of the evil which is inside. The real cause of piles, or hemorrhoids as they are scientifically termed, must be remedied before the slightest hope of permanent relief can even be entertained. That terrible burning, that miserable smarting, that unbearable itching and, in some cases, alarming loss of blood is obviously not the cause but merely an effect of the condition which so manifests itself.

Then, logically, the means which must be taken to drive piles away should include a treatment that attacks the cause. While this treatment is taking effect, it is also possible to give immediate relief from the attending pain and to prevent the local irritation and aggravation which makes piles so uncomfortable. This the Page Treatment actually does, for it is a combination idea which heals the condition as it relieves the suffering.

A Welcome Announcement

Thousands of men, whose efficiency in the business and professional world, has been seriously impaired because of the constant discomfort of piles, will welcome news that such a method as the Page Treatment is at last obtainable. Thousands of women, whose daily duties keep them constantly active and therefore in constant pain, will hail the Page Treatment with unalloyed joy. If these sufferers will avail themselves of this wonderful discovery, it is reasonable to assume that the percentage of pile victims in this country will shortly become so greatly diminished as to be almost unworthy of mention in medical reports.

Despaired of Being Helped—Treatment Did the Work

L. H. Wallace, of 707 West Chestnut St., Louisville, Ky., relates his experience in the following brief letter of praise. He says: "Some time ago I was bothered with piles so badly that I despaired of ever being helped. About that time, however, I saw your advertisement in some paper and sent for a trial treatment. It helped so much that I got a full treatment and I can say that I have not been bothered with piles since. That was more than a year ago.

Woman Freed of Long Agony by Unique New Method

After suffering untold pain and constant discomfort for 14 years, Mrs. Joe W. Kelly, of Asheville, N. C., tells how she was freed of piles by the Page Combination Treatment. In her letter she says: "I am glad to say that your Pile Treatment has entirely rid me of this terrible disease. I had suffered agony for 14 years. Now I cannot tell you how thankful I am for this wonderful relief, and I will tell everyone whom I know to be a sufferer about this wonderful treatment."

Well After 32 Years

After 32 years, A. L. Goldston of Cambridge Springs, Pa., is rid of piles. "I am perfectly well of my pile trouble from which I have been suffering for the past 32 years. I can say so far that all the discoveries of this century do not compare with this great discovery to free the many thousands of people suffering the torture of piles."

PILE TREATMENT WINS FAVORABLE VERDICT ON TRIAL

Testimony of Former Sufferers Conclusively Proves Merit of New Method

That a new discovery, based on established scientific principles, is ending pile suffering for thousands of men and women, is revealed by the tremendous volume of grateful letters received by the distributors of this treatment from people who have tried it. The big problem which science had undertaken to solve in its efforts to end this distressing and almost universal complaint was that of permanent relief.

A number of sufferers, it was generally known, had formerly been able to obtain temporary relief, only to find the trouble returning with increased discomfort at frequent intervals. The question to answer was, therefore, how to rid sufferers of the real cause of piles—to strike at the same time that relief was being afforded.

Trouble Deeply Rooted

Indication was not lacking as to the origin of piles. It was an accepted fact that the local discomfort was merely a manifestation of other trouble, far more deeply rooted. Once its origin is reached and effectively combated, it is but reasonable to assume that the piles themselves will leave forever.

This was the theory of the originators of the new discovery which is known as the Page Internal Tablet Combination Treatment. Abundant proof of its accuracy is furnished by the voluntary letters of former sufferers who testify to its merits.

Two Typical Cases

As an example of how quickly the Page Internal Tablet Combination Treatment ends suffering, even in extreme cases, a letter from Mrs. M. L. Buckner of Kansas City, Mo., follows. She writes, "One week ago yesterday, I was in bed, helpless. Today I have cleaned my home, cared for my children, and feel fine. I feel sure I would have been dead if relief had not come when it did. Now I do not know I ever had piles."

"I had suffered for five years with itching, bleeding and protruding piles," writes Mrs. Adeline Horsley of LaPorte, Ind. About a year ago, when I felt I could not stand the pain from them, I sent for the Page Treatment. Today I am not bothered any more. Although I only used about half of the treatment, the trouble has disappeared."

Brief Treatment Ends Long Years of Suffering

That pile cases that have lasted for years can be healed quickly by a new scientific treatment is clearly demonstrated by the experience of Louis Bathke, an Algoma, Wisconsin, man. Thirteen years of suffering was endured before Mr. Bathke determined to try the Page Internal Tablet Combination Treatment. The surprising and highly gratifying results are shown by Mr. Bathke's letter: "I want to let you know that I have been suffering with piles for 13 years. A year or so ago I learned of your new method. I used one large and small size treatment received last spring and now I find myself well. Thanks very much. I shall recommend your treatment to any sufferer of piles as it means sure relief."

"I Want Every Pile Sufferer to Have a Free Trial Package."

Piles Can Wreck the General Health of a Sufferer Unless They are Permanently Banished

A UNIQUE PLAN OF GIVING FREE PILE TREATMENTS

Huge Sum Used to Demonstrate Merit of This New Scientific Combination Method

A decided departure from the usual promotional custom of business concerns has been inaugurated by the E. R. Page Co., of Marshall, Michigan. This company has perfected a new scientific treatment for piles, the success of which has been instantaneous, as letters received from thousands of former sufferers confirm.

At a recent meeting of the directorate, a policy was adopted that would place this remarkable treatment in the hands of pile victims everywhere without the slightest risk or expense. In a formal statement issued by the company, when this measure was voted upon and passed, may be seen the reason for this unusual move.

A Novel Policy

"Many concerns," the statement reads, "spend thousands of dollars annually to advertise their products to the public. For the most part, these products must be bought and paid for 'on faith.' If the purchaser is dissatisfied, it is often optional with the seller as to whether he will give the customer the satisfaction to which he is entitled.

"The idea of this company is to keep our advertising down to the very minimum that will give our product sufficient publicity. We prefer to give our patrons the benefits of this expenditure. Therefore, we agree to send every person afflicted with piles a trial package of our new Page Internal Tablet Combination Treatment. This package costs the sufferer nothing. But we feel that the money used to introduce our product is well spent—that it proves our good faith with sufferers in not asking them to spend one cent until they have demonstrated the merits of the Page method to their own complete satisfaction."

Merit Justifies Plan

The Page Treatment is based on purely scientific facts that are common knowledge in professional circles. These facts prove that piles in themselves are not a cause but an effect—the natural indication of other trouble inside.

Science has also determined what the real cause is, and this new method, employing internal tablets in combination with a bowel regulator and a soothing ointment for external application, has clearly demonstrated its ability to remove the real cause of piles. Once this is accomplished, it is only natural that the piles themselves will disappear.

Free Trial Package Ends Suffering for Many Pile Victims

So effective is the Page Combination Treatment for Piles that in many cases the trial package alone suffices to end the trouble. Even severe cases of bleeding piles have responded quickly to this marvelous internal treatment and enabled their victims to regain health and happiness in an incredibly short time.

Results produced in literally thousands of cases show conclusively that the Page Internal Tablet Combination Treatment is not a mere theory. It is a demonstrated success. It drives away piles and it does this quickly, pleasantly, surely. This, because the Page Treatment attacks the cause of the piles, and when this condition is remedied the trouble naturally disappears. You can test it free. The coupon is handy. SCIENCE FINDS LOGICAL METHOD TO TREAT PILES

Treatment Corrects Conditions That Cause Trouble—Then Suffering Ends

"There is nothing mysterious or magical about our combination treatment," says an official of the Page Company. "It is just a logical medical campaign directed against piles and those things which cause piles. This campaign is directed both internally and externally. Not only are the piles healed and the suffering ended but when properly treated, they do not return."

The treatment being discussed was the Page Internal Tablet Combination Pile Treatment, which has so successfully rid thousands of pile suffering and agony. It consists of three medicines. There is a tablet which, when taken according to the directions, helps the body eliminate its poisons and prepares the system for the fight which is to do away with the piles and end the suffering. In addition to this tablet, there is, second, a pleasant tasting tablet which was originated by the Page Company chemists to wage its war against the disorder which results in the formation of piles.

To end the suffering and intense pain, while the two tablets are doing their work, a soothing, cooling, pleasant ointment has been included. This, when applied, seems to stop the pain at once. It has been prepared in such a way that everything obnoxious and unpleasant to its application is avoided and it can be applied with the greatest ease.

To the sufferer's surprise and delight, this system usually not only ends discomfort practically at once, but corrects those physical disorders which are at the base of the trouble.

PAGE TREATMENT PROVES THE WISDOM OF ATTACKING THE SOURCE OF AILMENT

"Strike at Cause of Trouble," Says Man Who Spent Years Perfecting Treatment Which Rids Humanity of Suffering and Ill Health

The original method of pile treatment, adopted by the E. R. Page Company, proves conclusively the sound reasoning of those who discovered it. Thousands of sufferers throughout the nation have learned by painful experience that to actually heal piles so they leave forever, the condition or physical disorder, which causes the tumors, must be corrected. Piles constitute an organic condition, and because of this the logical treatment of piles is through the internal method; by a system that affects the entire body.

ORIGINATOR OF METHOD TELLS HOW IT HEALS

Combination Treatment Starts Vigorous Attack on Conditions That Cause Piles

A pile treatment, if it is to effectively combat that condition and end suffering forever, must be planned to strike at and remove the cause itself. This is the contention of officials of the E. R. Page Company, who have originated a combination treatment, which results have proven to be a very effective and thorough one.

"We contend," said one of these officials, "that piles are manifestations—the symptoms you might say—of a disordered physical condition. If we are to successfully end pile suffering, it is necessary that we go further than merely to stop the pain only temporarily.

"We must combat the disorder which causes piles and, while we are waging that fight internally, we must stop the pain and suffering by external means. This has been done. It is on this basis that the combination treatment is founded.

"The combination treatment is made up of three parts. There is a tablet that helps the bowels to function properly. Poisons are eliminated by this means. Then in addition, there are the pile tablets which, when taken internally, tend to correct the condition which is responsible for the piles. And lastly there is the soothing, cooling, relieving ointment which, when applied to the piles, seems to make pain vanish almost instantly.

"When it is considered that our treatment fights piles so thoroughly, both internally and externally, it is no wonder that thousands of men and women who have been pile sufferers for years are finally healed by this method.

"Because it is so thorough in its work and so efficiently cleanses the body of those things that cause piles, the piles leave and the suffering is stopped. We are sure we have a wonderful treatment as hundreds and hundreds of people credit us with having healed their piles forever."

Protruding Piles Quickly Yield to New Treatment

Enthusiasm for the benefits he derived from the treatment induced Curtis C. Oliver, of Forest City, Pa., to send a joyous letter of praise to the E. R. Page Co., Marshall, Michigan. His missive reads: "Your treatment accomplished wonders for me. I suffered with protruding piles for 25 years and one of your small treatments was all that I needed to make me well."

Piles Are Symptoms

Authorities know that piles themselves are but symptoms or indications of a physical disorder that must be corrected—if the piles are to leave forever.

The people responsible for the E. R. Page Internal Tablet Combination Treatment for piles recognized this fact many years ago. They sought a type of treatment which would heal internally. They have been exceedingly successful, as thousands of people who have been rid of piles by this method will testify.

The E. R. Page Company, each day, is swamped with letters from all parts of North America; these letters are from former pile sufferers who thank them for not only complete relief from suffering but express sincere, heartfelt thanks for permanent freedom. There are more than 53,000 of these letters in the files of the company today.

This Method Successful

The success of this internal treatment can be attributed to its being founded upon medical facts. There is no guesswork about it, as the fact that it accomplishes all that is claimed for it clearly demonstrates. The method has been worked out with great care and study—each part of the treatment has a specific thing to accomplish.

The bowel regulator—just a small tablet—puts the system in good order, so that it can readily combat the inroads of disease which result in the intense suffering. The pile tablets are pleasant tasting and were originated to correct the condition which is responsible for the piles themselves. That it does its work well is attested to by the thousands of letters received from people who have been rid of piles by this method.

Carefully Planned

To relieve the pain and suffering while the internal tablets are doing their part, a pleasing ointment has been created. This ointment has been packed so that all the obnoxious, objectionable features of application are avoided. It stops the pain almost at once. People who credit the Page Treatment with having healed them forever call it "the magical ointment."

The combination treatment leaves nothing undone. It strikes directly at the root of the condition which causes piles and at the same time gives immediate relief from suffering. It goes even further, for thousands will testify that it healed their piles for all time.

It stops pain and suffering almost at once and even after the suffering ends—the internal tablets are waging their war against the things that caused the piles. When that war is won and ended—the piles will leave forever.

1926 Proved Banner Season for U. S. G. A., Annual Report Shows

New York, January 8.—(Special.)—The triumph of American golf in 1926 was emphasized in the annual report of the executive committee of the United States Golf association, made public today.

The report follows:

"Beyond question the year 1926 was a year of triumph for the golfers of the United States. In every form of competition at home and abroad our players were supreme, and the record established by them will doubtless never be equalled.

"Stated in tabular form, the results of the outstanding competitions of the year were as follows:

Titles Won.

(Events and Winners.)

National amateur championship, George Von Elm.

National open championship, Robert T. Jones, Jr.

British amateur championship, Jess W. Sweetser.

British open championship, Robert T. Jones, Jr.

French amateur championship, John G. Anderson.

Canadian open championship, MacDonald Smith.

P. G. A. championship, Walter Hagen.

Public links championship, Lester Bolstad.

Women's championship, Mrs. G. H. Stetson.

"The details of the championships conducted by the association will be found hereafter.

"Robert T. Jones, Jr., added to his record-breaking feats by winning the two open championships; Jess W. Sweetser has the distinction of being the first American-born amateur to win the Brtish amateur championship and George Von Elm rose to supreme heights to win the United States amateur.

"All previous records for attendance at our championships were shattered. More spectators saw competitive golf played this year than in any year in the history of the game.

"The team selected by the association again won the Walker cup from the British team at St. Andrews.

Trophy Destroyed.

"The Havemeyer cup, the trophy emblematic of the amateur championship, was destroyed by fire in the disaster at the East Lake club, Atlanta, Ga. The cup has been replaced by a specially designed cup of gold, the gift of Edward S. Moore, former theasurer of the United States Golf association, and the association thus owns the handsomest sport trophy in existence.

"The association is gratified at the appointment of its former president, Howard F. Whitney, to the rules of golf committee of the Royal and Ancient Golf club, of St. Andrews. Mr. Whitney, as chairman of our own rules committee, has been an ardent worker in the field of the problems arising under the rules, and it is believed that his election will give further opportunity for closer and more effective cooperatiton with the Royal and Ancient clubs."

GOVERNING BODY TAKES OVER GREEN SECTION.

Pittsburgh, January 8.—(AP)—The activities of the green section of the United States Golf association passed into the hands of the governing body today.

A merger of the section, a separate organization, was approved at the closing session of the association's annual convention here. The consolidation was authorized yesterday by the section, which was forced in 1921 to care for turf grasses and maintain courses. Henceforth the section will function as a subcommittee of the U. S. G. A.

As a consequence of the amalgamation, the association's active membership will be increased 338 to 1,200 clubs. William C. Fownes, Pittsburgh, who was elected president of the organization, announced a membership campaign would be started soon to make the association more representative of the entire golfing fraternity.

Single Membership.

All allied memberships were abolished and the association agreed upon a single membership fee of $30 annually, including the green section service.

After several speakers had stressed the cordial relationship existing between the association and the Royal and Ancient Golf club of St. Andrews, Scotland, a cablegram was read from Norman Boase, chairman of the championship committee of the foreign club, on the subject.

"I wish that the cordial relationship shall continue as always," the cablegram said.

Pleading for support to maintain "the high standards in amateur sport," Mr. Fownes said the association would

Epic of Sports

Avalon, Catalina Island, January 8.—"Goats vs Buffaloes!"

That may be the title of the next sporting event sponsored by William Wrigley, Jr., baseball magnate and owner of Catalina Island.

Wrigley recently prohibited the shooting of the semi-wild goats that roam the island. Since then they have increased in numbers and fighting tendencies, it is reported.

And now, a herd of buffaloes is "working" at the summer resort for a motion picture company. They will be left there when the film is completed.

Catalina natives are laying wagers as to what will happen when the goats and bisons meet in a wooded canyon some afternoon.

EIGHT GAMES ARE BOOKED IN Y LEAGUES

The four regular scheduled games in the Dixie league will be played as usual Tuesday night on the Y. M. C. A. court. Four will also be played in the Sewanee loop Thursday night. New players have been registered by nearly all the teams along with much improvement and some big upsets are likely to be seen. The game between the Anchor class and College Park should be the feature battle Tuesday night. The fast but little Boethian five will doubtlessly make things hot for Confederate avenue. First Methodist should also give the Anchor Feds a merry chase.

The strong Pep class of the Dixie league and the West End Presbyterian of the Sewanee loop are at present leading their respective leagues. Neither have lost a single game although the Pep class just did manage to win a couple of games by small margins. West End Presbyterian have a good all-round squad, but the teams in this league are nearly on even terms and upsets are frequent.

The games for the week will be played as follows:

THE SCHEDULE.

Dixie League.

Dideons vs. Wesley Memorial at 6:30.

Western Heights vs. Patillo Memorial at 6:50.

Pep class vs. Epworth Workers at 7:50.

Anchor class vs. College Park at 8:10.

Sewanee League.

F. E. F. class vs. All Saints at 6:30.

West End Presbyterian at 6:50.

Boethians vs. Confederate avenue at 7:50.

First Methodist vs. Anchor Feds at 8:10.

Pete Latzo Bout Date Is Arranged

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., January 8.—(AP) The ten-round bout between Pete Latzo, world's welterweight champion, and Sammy Baker, twice postponed because of injuries to the titleholder, has been set for January 14 here, it was announced today by State Boxing Commissioner Harry Farrell.

Farrell intimated that any further delays will bring suspensions for either boxer. The championship will not be at stake.

Gully To Return To Little Rock

Chicago, January 8.—(AP)—The Chicago Americans tonight announced the release of Jim Edwards, left-handed pitcher, obtained from Cleveland two years ago, to the Seattle club of the Pacific Coast league.

Tom Gully, outfielder, obtained from the Little Rock Southern association club last year, was turned back to that club.

POLICY LOOP LEADERSHIP IS THREATENED

Southeastern Underwriters Association reigns supreme in the Insurance basketball league, after the Fireman's Fund cagers defeated the Insurance Company of North America last week in the biggest upset of the week.

Although Southeastern has held the lead for the past week, its advantage will be seriously threatened by Insurance Company of North America in the feature battle of Tuesday night's games, which is to be played at the Atlanta Athletic club. These games will complete the first round, and should the Insurance Company of North America pull the surprise stunt and down Southeastern, the league leadership will be a three-way tie, provided Fireman's Fund can defeat Hartford Insurance Company.

The feature game of the evening will start at 7:30 o'clock, and then Fireman's Fund will play Hartford. Although Hartford has failed to win a game this season, the team is coming along at a fast clip, and is due to hit its stride before long.

Commercial Union and Royal Insurance tie up in the last battle. Both outfits are tied for fourth place, and a win will help considerably toward the final standing of the teams in the first round.

So far the Insurance league has developed some real basketball players, and the attendance is steadily increasing with each night's games. Only bona-fide employees of the different companies are eligible to play in this league.

Schedule for Tuesday night, January 11:

Southeastern Underwriters Association vs. Insurance Company of North America, 7:30. Referee, Slate.

Fireman's Fund Insurance Company vs. Hartford Insurance Company, 8:30. Referee, Glassman.

Commercial Union Insurance Company vs. Royal Insurance Company, 9:30. Referee, Slate.

RECOGNITION OF SOUTHERN STARS SPREADS

BY JULIEN SAKS.

The southern athletes are beginning to get the encouragement of invitations to the big indoor meets in New York City. Last year Linsey Roberts, of Georgia Tech, winner of the southern conference cross-country championship, was invited through the efforts of the Tech chapter of the Spiked Shoe society, to compete in the Millrose two-mile run. Lindsey was handicapped on account of having received the invitation at a time when he was out of condition and had only a short time in which to prepare himself, but he finished sixth in a field of Olympic and national stars.

This year the Millrose program does not include a high hurdle race and, of course, in indoor competition there is rarely a running broad jump because of the danger of spraining an ankle. Baskin, of Auburn; Hamm and Boyd, of Georgia Tech, are men who deserve recognition for their performances. Baskin was southern conference hurdle champion; Hamm was S. E. A. A. U. broadjump champion, and Jimmy Boyd was middle Atlantic champ in the high hurdles. Roy, Newman and O'Dell, of Clemson, are three top-notch performers who should be recognized for their first places in the southern conference meet in Chapel Hill last May, in the 440, half mile and pole vault.

This year John G. Anderson, chairman of the Millrose games, has invited Bill Tate, the winner of the Birmingham road race, and Buster Cook for his work in the 440 while a student in Tech High.

The coaches of the south with exceptional men in events which are held indoors should get in touch with such men as Frederick Rubien, of 200 Broadway, New York, who is secretary of the A. A. U., and from whom could be secured the names of the managers of the meets which are held weekly during the winter and witnessed by thousands of rabid track fans.

The manager of the Millrose games is John G. Anderson, who can be reached at the Wanamaker store in New York city. Matt Halpin and Paul Pilgrim, a former Olympic champion, have the reins of the New York A. C., and Samuel Dallas, of Wanamaker store, in Philadelphia, arranges the Meadowbrook meet. There are many meets, so many, in fact, that some have to be held in the middle of the week on account of conflicting dates. The coach seeking to have men entered should base the claims upon performance first, and second, the encouragement of the Olympic track timber of the south so that the United States will draw upon the full athletic force of the country to prevent the victory of little Finland or Sweden or Germany at Amsterdam in 1928.

Whitehead Named Fla. Ball Coach

Gainesville, Fla., January 8.—(AP)—Captain C. S. Whitehead, attached to the military department of the University of Florida, will take up the coaching reins of the varsity baseball squad when Lance Richbourg leaves here on March 1 to join his new team, the Boston Braves, according to an announcement made tonight by Captain Everett W. Yon, director of athletics.

Captain Whitehead is known as one of the most capable pitchers in the army, having won several championships for his team during the occupation of Germany. He has refused several professional offers in the past.

Richbourg is at present attempting to schedule several games with major league teams for the early part of March and is said to have tentative arrangements with the St. Louis Cardinals and the New York Giants. The collegiate schedule for the Gators includes 24 games, 12 of them with southern conference members.

Where Gandil Gets Off.

Just what is going on behind the flexible countenance and snowy thatch of baseball's Mussolini in Chicago right now is something to ponder over. But there was an inkling to his convictions contained in the accounts of "Chick" Gandil's testimony.

Maurice Mermey, well known sports writer, in his account of the hearing, came to the point where Gandil asked Landis for a reopening of the case in which he was outlawed from baseball as among the Black Sox of 1919.

And the stormy jurist replied, "I'll tell you right now you are put on the ineligible list because of your very own testimony."

To us, that indicates several things, among which may be included a disgust of the whole affair entertained by the commissioner, or a belief in the testimony offered by Risberg and Gandil. Landis cannot, that is not very well, take the word of these two organized baseball outlaws and pit it for truth and veracity against the combined denial of all of the thirty-odd nationally known diamond figures involved. He has done queer things in his lifetime, he has probably the most sensational mind in present-day America, certainly he is the most sensational man sportdom has ever produced; and his career is by no means ended. But the chances of anyone being found guilty in this latest foray of fuss and fol-de-rol are remote to say the least.

He took "Chick" Gandil at his word. Chick said he took part in a series of thrown games. Therefore Chick was guilty of violation of baseball's ethics. And Landis saw that it was an immediate and final crowbar with which to pry "Chick" loose from organized baseball for all time. So he immediately inserted it and hauled away.

A Treat For Tennis Fans.

And now comes the announcement that Suzanne, the incomparable, the temperamental, the dazzling, slashing, brilliant Suzanne will display her racquet ability on an improvised cork court at the city auditorium next Saturday.

Suzanne and her company are fresh from the Pacific coast where she battled Mary K. Browne continuously and where Paul Feret and Vinnie Richards met each other in professional competition any number of times.

Perhaps there will be those that will say, "Well, she and Mary Browne have played each other so long that all the pep and enthusiasm will be taken from the match," and pass up an opportunity to watch a tennis star with a temperament of a prima donna who even kept a queen waiting once on a time.

But Mary Browne, who sometimes writes for The Constitution, says not. Her one ambition, it would seem, is to beat this French gal. And her statements indicate that she always strives to the utmost. Followers of tennis will not have to be told that Mary Browne is no second rate racquet wielder herself.

What would probably prove as one-sided in Mary Browne's favor as her matches with Suzanne do in Suzanne's favor on the courts is a contest between these two on the links. It is quite widely known that Mary Browne swings a wicked niblic and she could probably spot Suzanne half-a-dozen holes and then beat her 10 up.

Sandlot League Meeting Called

There will be a meeting of all captains and managers of the basketball teams in the Sandlot tournament, both leagues, on Tuesday, January 11, at the office of Sam H. Saltzman, 55 1-2 Luckie street, at 3 o'clock.

The captains are instructed to have a complete list of all players on their respective teams that day. At this meeting the pairings will be drawn and a complete list of all rules concerning the tournament will be made. The boys and Mr. Saltzman will also decide on the prizes which are to be awarded the winner in each league.

All games will be handled by competent officials.

Sande Is Again Leading Jockey

Earle Sande, America's noted jockey, captured 22 stakes races last year ranging from a $3,000 claiming race to the rich Riggs Memorial handicap, worth $22,450 and the Fairmount derby, valued at $24,725, netting his employers $240,275.

Alfred Johnson, who rides for Bardley Idle Hour stables, brought his master $203,610 for the year, although not winning half the stake races that Sande did.

Sande led Crusader to the tape first in the Cincinnati derby, and "outsmarted" Eric Blind to put Haste in front of Baggenbaggage, a one to two favorite in the Fairmount derby. Astride Haste, he also captured the Withers stakes.

EPWORTHERS BOOK TWELVE BASKET GAMES

Last week proved a busy one for the basketeers of the Epworth league and from the close scores quite a few real games were enjoyed by the fans. Large crowds have been attending the games and the officials are highly elated over the fact that this will be the most successful year the association has experienced.

President Wilmer H. Kimberly announced that since all teams have been organized the officials have been requested to tighten up on the rules concerning entering new players.

Trophy Offered.

Claude S. Bennett, president of the Atlanta Epworth League union, has offered a silver loving cup to the team considered the best during the season. To win this cup a team and its spectators must adhere to quite a few rigid rules. The main points that count are the conduct of the players, the conduct of the spectators, strict compliance to all rules of the association, cleanliness of the players' uniform and the general attitude of both players and spectators.

According to Manager W. L. Barker, there is room for two more players on the Epworth All-Star team. The team is getting along splendidly and the boys will no doubt bring the bacon home when they return from Birmingham near the end of the season.

Miss Peggy Launius is doing wonderful work with the girls' all-star team and in a short while expects to show Atlanta a real brand of girls basketball played by girls' rules.

THE SCHEDULE.

FATE OF FLA. HORSE RACING IS AWAITED

Tallahassee, Fla., January 8.—(AP) The destiny of Florida horse race tracks was placed in the hands of the state supreme court today.

Whether the sale of lease certificates at race tracks is "betting" and as such comes under the state statutes against gambling was the question the court has been asked to decide for all tracks in Florida.

Although John M. Bryan, Broward county commissioner, is the latest to raise the question, considerable agitation and several suits in the past have raised the point whether the certificate system is legal. Mr. Bryan has obtained an injunction against the selling of the certificates at the Pompano Horse club track in his county. Yesterday Pompano officials carried the case to the supreme court when they asked that the injunction be set aside. The tribunal was expected to render an opinion today, but instead invited oral arguments. Immediately the Pompano officials filed a new motion requesting the court to hear as early as possible oral arguments "on their merits" all cases involving the legality of race track operation in Florida. The hearing tentatively has been set for next Monday.

Racing Suspended.

Meanwhile racing has been suspended at Pompano and Commissioner Bryan has issued a statement declaring that he will proceed against every track in Florida to stop the sale of certificates. Paul M. Beacom, president of the Pompano Horse Club, Inc., said today an effort would be made to keep the horses at Pompano until the case has been settled. It was announced yesterday that the races were being suspended owing to lack of horses at the track.

In their latest petition to the supreme court counsel for the Pompano club contend that the club is now enjoined from operating while "similar industries, or industries of an allied nature are being operated in adjoining counties to Broward county and in other counties of the state of Florida, with interposition of the courts, or of the officers of the state charged with law enforcement."

They argue that the effect of the restraining order obtained by Mr. Bryan has deprived the Pompano club of equal protection of the laws, "this appellant being advised and believing that a similar proceeding has been brought heretofore in the circuit court of Dade county against a similar industry operated in Miami, and the injunction in such case having been denied and no appeal taken from the order."

Mr. Bryan is questioning the legality of the certificate system at Pompano under a decision in the case of McBride versus the State of Florida in which the court held that the method was pool selling upon the result of horse races and in violation of the law against wagering of money on horse races. James M. Carson, of Miami, counsel for Mr. Bryan, declared that a clause in the certificates regarding "free will donations" had been held by the courts to be a mere subterfuge.

Signal Corps Wins Over Ordnance 11

The Signal Corps defeated the Ordnance Corps, 12 to 6, Saturday afternoon in an exciting game between these two units of the Tech military regiment. The Signal Corps outweighed, and outplayed the Ordnance gridmen practically throughout the entire game but the grim determination and fight of the losers kept the score to a close margin.

Both the Signal Corps touchdowns came in the first half. Coe carrying the ball over for the first score and a little later R. P. Lee went across the goal line for the winning points. The Ordnance tallied their six points when Stephens blocked a punt, picked up the ball and hoofed it for a touchdown.

MissBrowne,Richards, Feret Will Be Seen At City Auditorium

Suzanne Lenglen, Vincent Richards, Mary K. Browne and Paul Feret, touring kings and queens of the tennis courts, will play exhibition matches in Atlanta next Saturday night, according to announcement Saturday.

Bill Pickens, business manager for C. C. Pyle, completed arrangements Saturday to stage the matches at the city auditorium. The Lenglen party will arrive here next Wednesday.

C. C. Pyle is sending his brilliant professionals on a tour of the south that will touch at principal cities and wind up in a series of matches at Florida resorts.

First Visit Here.

This will be the first visit to Atlanta of these international stars and the first indoor tennis match ever staged here involving ranking players. A court 120 feet long by 60 feet wide, made of composition cork, is carried in a special baggage car. The court will be placed in the center of the auditorium, leaving 4,000 seats in easy view of the matches.

Suzanne Lenglen, conqueror of the great Helen Wills and rated the greatest woman tennis player the world has ever seen, is the most colorful athlete on the globe today. Her outbursts of temperament and her matchless skill alike make her the most fascinating figure in sport today.

Bill Pickens will arrive in Atlanta Monday to place tickets on sale.

Any Old Job

Phoenix, Ariz., January 8.—(AP)—George Grantham, first baseman of the Pittsburgh Pirates, is working for $5 a day as doorkeeper of the Arizona senate chamber.

"I have been hunting game in the northern part of Arizona," Grantham said today. "I have had plenty of diversion and found nothing to do when I got home, so I took this job."

S. S. A. A. BOOKS 5 CAGE GAMES MONDAY NIGHT

Sunday school basketball teams will again get into action Monday night with five games to be played on the Atlanta Athletic club court, starting at 7:15 o'clock.

After the battles of last week, only three teams remain with a perfect percentage, two in the American league, Druid Hills Baptist and St. Luke's Episcopal, and one in the National league, Jackson Hill Baptist.

The T. N. T. class of Baptist Tabernacle pulled a comeback last Monday by downing Pryor Street Presbyterian, thereby going into a lead for second place with the Pryor Street basketeers in the National league. In the American league race, Fortified Hills Baptist is holding down second place, while the rest of the teams with the exception of the two leaders are all tied for fourth place. The race in the American from present indications is going to develop into a hectic affair before the season is over.

As to the games Monday night, the two leaders in the American league, Druid Hills Baptist and St. Luke's Episcopal, play for the leadership of their league. This game is scheduled for 9 o'clock and is sure to be a hard battle, for the team that loses this game will have to be satisfied with a lower berth in the standing.

The other four games will no doubt develop some fast basketball from a spectator's standpoint, as all of the teams are about evenly matched and some real good games are sure to be played.

The Schedule.

Schedule for Monday, January 10:

G. F. G. class of Capitol Avenue Baptist vs. Fortified Hills Baptist (American), 7:15; referee, Mundorff.

Clifton Presbyterian vs. St. Paul Methodist (National), 8:35; referee, Glassman.

Druid Hills Baptist vs. St. Luke's Episcopal (American), 9:00; referee, Glassman.

Grace Methodist vs. Druid Hills Presbyterian (American), 9:55; referee, Glassman.

Man O'War Seen Greatest of Sires

Man O'War seems destined to become America's greatest sire. This peerless son of Fair Play and Mahubah, produced the champion three-year-old last year in American Flag and this year Crusader, another of his illustrious sons, leads the three-year-old pack while Scrappa Flow, another son, is second only to Fair Star in earnings for the two-year-olders.

Edith Cavell, Florence Nightingale and Maid at ? ? ? ? three of his daughters, and ? ?? ?, also are helping their half brothers hold up the record of the famous stallion. This year his sons and daughters captured purses valued at $358,612.

At the Saratoga Springs sales this summer one of his colts out of Jean Bowdre brought $25,000, while last year one of his colts brought $50,000.

Davis again forged into the lead with one up on the 11th hole. Letzkus Gives 'Gators Victory Over Georgia

BY MARCUS BRYANT.

Athens, Ga., January 8.—A beautiful field goal of Letzkus gave the Florida 'Gators a 33-32 victory over the Georgia cage artists here tonight in an extra five-minute period game. The game was closely contested and was witnessed by the largest crowd of the year. This was the first conference game of the season for the Bulldogs, and, incidentally, their first loss of the present campaign.

Just as the whistle ended the game, Kiroche counted a two-pointer, necessitating the play-off. The Bulldogs were not adept in foul shooting, losing the game in this manner. Kiroche, who had turned the game into a 31-31 deadlock, committed two fouls. But Turner's effort was not successful, and a minute later Keen dropped one in out of two tries. This was not to prove a margin, when Letzkus dropped one through the hoops from near the middle of the court, and on the extreme left side.

Florida began the game in whirlwind fashion, scoring six points before a Bulldog tally. A period of eight minutes elapsed before the Red and Blackers found the basket. After the first 10 minutes of play the locals found themselves and knotted the count in quick order, and forged ahead, 20 to 13, and the first session ended.

Shortly after the half the Bulldogs counted again, and with only five minutes to play a 30-23 score stared the invaders. Goals of Kiroche, Walker and Smith sent them close behind and Harris shot a foul, the Bulldogs leading, 31-29. Then Kiroche played the leading roll to even the game.

The Bulldogs tonight showed some several flashes of form but were noticeably off in the scoring department, missing numerous attempts with a close range. On the other hand, the attempts of the visitors were of the long variety, due to close guarding of the Stegeman machine.

Keen, Harris and Florence again proved the scoring triumvirate of the Bulldogs, with the first named duet adding nine points in their credit column. Florence's four field baskets made the race for honors highly interesting. Coach Stegeman started Drew in place of Turner at guard, during the first half, and each, along with Captain Forbes, played a good game.

Smith and Millman counted nine points apiece for the visitors. Kiracofe, played a guard, handled the ball in dandy style and was an ace for the 'Gators. Smith, at center, deserves praise for his showing, he performing with one bad hand.

Hornsby Signs 2-Year Contract With Giants

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, January 8.—Activities in the sport business in the east have now reached the thrilling conference stage and the program from now until spring will tend toward bigger and better and more mysterious conferences.

Rogers Hornsby and John J. McGraw held their conferences here today, closely following the great conclave of the best minds of the cauliflower industry in St. Louis and Hornsby agreed to play ball for the Giants for the next two seasons at $40,000, a season baseball money, at which price he will also perform the mild ceremonies devolving upon the captain of this ball club. Inasmuch as Mr. Sam Breadon, of St. Louis, paid Hornsby only $30,000 for playing baseball and precisely nothing whatever for managing the Cardinals it will be apparent that he is to receive a raise of $10,000, baseball money, for assuming the captaincy of the Giants. This is believed to set a new record for wages for errand boys as the captain of the Giants has no official functions beyond obtaining a slip of paper containing the line up from Mr. McGraw before each ball game begins and handing the same to the umpire.

Correct Figures.

The wages mentioned are reckoned in baseball money because this is a mysterious currency and it is always deemed advisable in the sport industry to create a certain sense of mystery in announcing the results of the conferences. Neither Mr. McGraw nor Mr. Hornsby would state the price of the hire but the public is allowed to infer that the figures here announced are correct.

This conference was unusually peaceful and there was a report that Mr. McGraw and Mr. Hornsby both were indisposed as they are both inclined to wrangle vociferously over financial matters when in their normal high spirits.

Horpsby left soon afterwards for his home in St. Louis intending to remain there where he can utter disparaging remarks about the liberality of Mr. Breadon at close quarters until it is time to go to the Giants' training camp at Sarasota.

Travis Jackson, the shortstop of the Giants who was appointed captain in place of Frank Frisch, after Frisch, in a moment of recklessness, jumped the club and paid his own fare home last summer, will revert to his old status as a mere player. It is understood that Mr. McGraw found fault with his technique in delivering the slip of paper containing the lineup to the umpires and decided that he would never make a real captain for the team.

Hornsby has yet to sell his stock in the St. Louis club but this will be the subject of several major conferences later on.

Yellow Jackets and A. A. C. Cagers Are Victorious

Athletic Club Five Easily Beats Furman Basketeers, 37 to 21

After getting off to a slow start in the first half, "Pat" Stevens started the Atlanta Athletic club on a scoring spree on the club court Saturday night that gave the Bean boys a 37-to-21 victory over Furman university. This was the worse defeat the Purple Hurricane has suffered while touring Georgia. The first half ended with neither team showing any particular advantage and the Athletic club was leading by only one point, 12 to 11, but Pat Stevens cut loose in the last half and shot 18 points and almost single-handed outscored the visitors.

Coach Bean started his second string of basketeers and Johnson and Morrow soon looped a basket apiece but this was soon evened up by a field goal by Captain Brabham and Dorman. The score throughout the first period rocked along in one another's favor by one point and after 16 minutes of playing Furman for one time momentarily took a 11-to-10 lead. Bennett retained a one point lead for the club at the end of the first half by sinking a long field goal. The regulars played about half the first period for the Athletic club.

At the opening of the last half Rufus Bass rung up a long shot for the winners and then "Pat" Stevens, after missing several shots, gained his shooting eye and consistently rung the basket with unerring accuracy from almost every angle of the court. Only once did the winners work the ball down under the basket and that was on a long pass from Bass to Brewer.

The visitors showed the effects of traveling and slowed up a little. Furman had plenty of chances to score but were miserably weak in their shooting. They would work the ball down under the basket only to lose it. Furman shot only four field goals during the last half.

Pat Stevens was the most prominent star of the evening for the winners, and was the only one to be able to sink his shots. He showed remarkable accuracy in shooting and nearly all his field baskets were made from long distance. Bass, at guard for the winners, on several occasions broke up the passing of the visitors when the ball was in easy scoring position. Gibson played a good floor game for Furman, and if they were not so weak on their shooting they would have given Coach Bean's basketeers a closer battle. Many substitutes were used by both teams. The Atheletic club used 14 players and Furman nine.

The Summary.

Corbett-Fitzsimmons Bout Most Spectacular

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

There are two great fight spectacles that old-timers remember. One was the dramatic defeat of Sullivan by Corbett at New Orleans in 1892. The other was the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight at Carson, Nevada, March 17, 1897. I doubt that the ring ever will see anything more picturesque than the finish fight in which Fitzsimmons, the middleweight champion, knocked out the cleverest of heavyweight title holders. Fitzsimmons was the greatest fighter, regardless of weight, in ring history. Six feet tall, powerfully built around the arms and shoulders, with thin legs that seemed hardly big enough to carry him around a ring, he had tremendous strength and endurance and hitting power.

Spars With Corbett.

At that time I was something of a college athlete, holding a number of weight-throwing records, but knew little about boxing. I was sent to live in Corbett's camp and write up his training, and the first day Corbett looked over my 212 pounds of solid meat he suggested that I join his sparring staff for the fun and experience.

When I admitted I didn't box well enough to be of much use to a champion Corbett laughingly said: "You'll be awkward, like Fitzsimmons." Through five weeks of daily sparring I undoubtedly proved awkward enough, but hardly with the dangerous awkwardness of Lanky Bob. But from my own complete inability to lay a glove on Corbett, and from watching his workouts with his clever brother, Joe, with Billy Woods and Jim Jeffries, I learned enough to appreciate from the champion's fine skill and figure what he might do to any awkward fellow, and perhaps absorbed Corbett's notion that Fitzsimmons was too clumsy to be dangerous to such a master of defense.

"Gamblers will do anything to win their bets and there's a stack of money on the short end," said Billy Delaney, who trained Corbett. "Corbett is high strung. His nerves are on edge. Supose someone came out and threw a rock through his window or against the side of the house. It would break his sleep and might make him lose the fight. We've got to grab anybody we find sneaking around."

"Have you a gun?" I asked Billy.

"Oh, no!" he exclaimed. "No shots! That would be bad. If we catch anyone you and I can handle him."

No one appeared.

Twice during the training I hopped aboard my cow-pony and rode over to see Bob Fitzsimmons train at a ranch the other side of Carson.

On that first trip over to Bob's place I found Bob on a bit of level ground beside his cottage, amusing a crowd of miners, cattle men and ranchers by putting a 16-pound shot. Bob carried that shot on his travels. When a train stopped he'd hop out with his shot and immediately attract a crowd by getting up a heaving contest.

When I arrived Bob was looking through the crowd and making the biggest men put the shot with him. As none of them had ever seen a shot before they were easy victims and Bob was enjoying himself hugely. The moment he saw me come up he yelled: "Hey! You're a big fellow. Come 'ere and put this shot."

"I don't know how," I said, being fairly sure Bob wouldn't know that weight-throwing was my pet sport.

"I'll show you," said Bob, and proceeded to spend 10 minutes putting me into position and showing me how to hop and how to shove my arm out with the weight, which I did as awkwardly as possible while the crowd laughed at my efforts and the shot dropped about 30 feet away.

"That's good enough," said Bob. "Now we'll 'ave a contest. Six puts each. I'll put first and you do it just the way I do."

Joke on Bob.

Bob made five puts, each about 36 feet, which was his limit, while I put about 32, and the crowd marveled at Bob's ability. At fifth put Bob placed his foot on my mark and challenged me to beat it. He turned his head an instant, and I whipped the shot out 43 feet. At the roar from the crowd Bob turned, saw the hole the shot made, picked up the weight and brought it back.

"You ran ten feet over the mark—I saw you," he yelled. That don't count. You got to put fair."

"All right, put your foot on my mark again," I said, and when Bob did it I tossed the shot over his head.

Bob looked at the shot, looked at my feet, behind the mark, seemed puzzled, and then began to grin. Without picking up the shot this time he came back and said: "Let's go out in the barn and put on the gloves."

"Not today," I said.

I wouldn't have put on the gloves with Fitz just then for a lot of money. He'd have knocked my head off for a joke. Bob always thought that the best joke of all, and he never got over telling about our shot putting contest.

At that time I had saved up $200, and after much careful thought had decided to bet it on Corbett. After being neatly jabbed by Corbett for five weeks without landing more than one solid smack on him in all that time I thought he could outbox the world, and being in the Corbett camp it seemed the patriotic thing to go down on Jim, hook, line and sinker.

Fitz Tips Outcome.

A few days before the fight I received a wire from New York saying: "File half page on boxing with Corbett and half page on boxing with Fitzsimmons." I hadn't boxed with Fitzsimmons, so I rode over to his camp at Cook's ranch, showed him the telegram and asked him to box with me.

Fred Bushnell, famous sport photographer in those days, had bet $10,000 on Fitz, and was with Bob when I rode up.

"Do it, Fitz," he advised. "Edgren's been boxing with Corbett and can show you all his tricks."

Before I could open my mouth to refuse that proposition Bob jumped up from the doorstep, scowling and red-faced, and fairly yelled:

"I wouldn't 'ave it; it wouldn't be fair."

I'll say old Bob Fitzsimmons was a sportsman.

After agreeing that Bob wasn't to be shown anything we went to the boxing pavilion in an old dance hall, just Bob and I, and went in and locked the doors. We stripped and put on the gloves.

I'll never forget that boxing. Bob looked slight, skinny and awkward. His blue eyes blinked as he shifted clumsily around for four or five minutes, hitting very little and leaving me plenty of openings. I was just getting an idea that I could outbox Fitzsimmons and was enjoying my efforts very much, when Bob shuffled a little closer than usual and left me a nice wide opening for a jab. I jabbed. The punch skidded off as Fitz rolled his head a little, and at the same instant Bob's right foot slipped along the floor toward me and his left fist, starting from his hip, hooked into the pit of my stomach with an impact that curled me up like a pretzel and knocked the breath out of me completely. There was a bench just behind me. I staggered back a couple of steps and sat down, bent double, struggled vainly to draw in a breath, to get some air into my tortured lungs.

That punch ended the boxing and saved me $200. I decided not to bet my bankroll on Corbett, having sampled the goods Freckled Bob had to deliver, and my notion of sporting ethics wouldn't allow me to bet it against Corbett when I had been a guest in his training camp.

And that was exactly the way Fitzsimmons knocked Corbett out, in the fourteenth round of a great championship fight. As I saw Bob slip in, hands low and head unprotected, saw Corbett's left shoot out, graze Bob's head and go on over Bob's shoulder, and saw Bob shift his right foot forward and hook that tremendous left into Corbett's middle—as I saw Corbett crumble with mouth open in agony, and lie grovelling on the floor, I knew exactly how Corbett felt. That blow would knock out an army mule.

There was much discussion over that famous fight at Carson—claims that Corbett was "cutting Fitz to ribbons"and lost by an accident. But it was no accident. Fitz won many fights with that shift and left hook for the middle of the body, where the ribs join—the nerve center that nature has so curiously left unprotected.

Empire State Fair Gets Famed Race

Lexington, Ky., January 8.—(AP)—The New York state fair at Syracuse was awarded the 1927 running of the Hambletonian stake, premier trotting race of America at a meeting of the grand circuit stewards here. The date for the running of the stake was not set.

James I. Markey, secretary of the Hambletonian society which promotes the stake which last year was worth approximately $70,000 to Guy McKinney the victor, said that $8,000 was paid by the Syracuse officials to insure the running of the stake at their track this year. He said that all payments on eligibles for the classic had been received at the New York state fair office, and that the race would be at least $70,000 again this year.

SOLDIER BASKETEERS

PEGLER PRESENTS REVIEW OF PROMINENT PUGILISTS

"No Two Heavyweights Could Be as Bad as Monte Munn"

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, January 8.—Now that Tex Rickard has hired Gene Tunney to fight somebody under his management next summer, Mr. Rickard doubtless will hurry back to New York and get on with his search for someone fit to be fought by Gene Tunney. There are about a dozen large parties in the heavyweight class at present but some of them have round heels, some have slippery shoes, some don't know anything about prize fighting and some are suffering from more or less malignant forms of the cauliflower blight known as softening of the chin. Thus the group from which Mr. Rickard will select the party of the second part for his summer celebration is not as numerous as the sprawling, grunting and floundering that have been going on for several weeks might indicate.

The present class of heavyweights, named roughly in the order of their professional precedence and including hams, is as follows:

Jack Dempsey.
Jack Delaney.
Jack Sharkey.
Paul Berlenbach.
Jim Maloney.
Harry Persson.
Knute Hanson.
Bud Gorman.
Franz Deiner.
Paolino Uzcudon.
Monte Munn.

Lots of Hams.

All members of this list from Harry Persson southward, inclusive, may be classed as hams and of no importance in the great work of finding someone to engage in what Tunney, in his elegant way, would call a boxing contest, for the heavyweight championship. Paolino has not yet unveiled himself in the New York ring, so nothing is actually known of his fighting ability, but from the bristles on his neck it is evident that he is decidedly Westphalian, which is to say a ham on sight. In this ranking he is placed ahead of Mr. Monte Munn, the intellectual Nebraska statesman, because he cannot be any worse than Mr. Munn and it is improbable that there are two heavyweights as bad as that. In fact, unless you saw Mr. Munn boxing Hanson a few weeks ago you would not believe that there could be one heavyweight that bad.

The Messrs. Maloney and Berlenbach will figure in the rough proceedings because they are what Mr. Rickard would call great house fighters, the idea being that a fighter who can hit hard is a great aid to the house, regardless of the fragility of his chin or the buoyancy of his feet.

On Their Soles.

Maloney and Berlenbach both have spent some time on the soles of their backs, but they are so sincere in their work that they amuse the customers whether they are pitching or catching. Persson is large and strong and handsomely illustrated with etchings of the old world cathedrals, popular actresses and the fjords of his native Scandinavia, but he does not know how to fight and it is usually considered advisable to select a challenger who can fight slightly, although this qualification has been waived on some occasions.

Deiner, one of the leading frankfurters of his native Frankford, has returned home to attend to his fall and winter drinking, having spent several months in this country on a diet of very dubious brews. He and Gorman weigh a great many pounds but Deiner hits anybody and Gorman has a tendency to fall down on his back. Hanson's only achievement was to show what a terrible fist fighter Monte Munn is.

Mr. Rickard wishes to advance Jack Dempsey before all others because in three shows under his auspices Dempsey did not fail to draw $1,000,000, and once drew more than $2,000,000. However, before he can do this he will have to present Dempsey in a bout with Delaney, Sharkey, or Maloney as the customers, for all their anxiety to be convinced, are still skeptical about Dempsey's sincerity or his fitness, if not both.

Delaney Popular.

Delaney is scarcely less popular with the customers in New York, not only because he holds the light heavyweight championship, but because he is a great boxer, a vigorous puncher with the right hand, and a handsome figure, being locally known as "Bright Eyes."

Sharkey's sole qualification is the fact that he licked Harry Wills, thus performing a kindly service to all prize fighters of pallid epidermis who were afraid of Wills. Prior to that, Sharkey was not highly esteemed and the present estimate of his talents may be exaggerated as Wills was handcuffed by the referee in their bout.

A touching paragraph from the St. Louis conference tells of a reconciliation between Mr. Tunney and his step-manager, Will Gibson, indicating that there is gratitude among prize fighters or that Mr. Gibson threatened to pursue Tunney with subpoenaes and similar love letters as Jack Kearns pursued Dempsey, to the great disturbance of Dempsey's peace of mind, as it was called.

It also appears that Mr. Gibson has withdrawn his harsh characterization of Tunney's attorney, Mr. Dudley Field Malone, as Deadly Fumes Malone. It is pleasant to hear that peace and friendship have been restored in the champion's circle as it would be unfortunate if the reign of the first educated champion were marred by disharmony and cries of "you are a liar," and other inelegant expressions.

Fownes said he had been notified by Alex Pirie, president of the professional golfers' association, that Oakmont had been selected. It had been reported that the contest would be staged in the Boston district.

LOCAL CAGE TEAMS HURT BY PREP RULE

Various teams of the numerous city basketball leagues were busy Saturday night laying plans for reorganization following the passage by Prep league officials of a ruling barring all members of the city prep school teams from participating in the cage activities of other organizations.

There are any number of teams in Atlanta that will be affected by this ruling. In some instances there are only one or two members of the teams ineligible under the new prep ruling, and in some instances as many as many as four men are taken from one team.

The S. S. A. A., the "Y" church loop, the City league, the Epworth league, and others will be affected. Officials of these loops said Saturday that reorganization plans are under way.

"It is too much for a boy on one of our teams to play two games a week in the Prep league and then several games outside at night. It not only makes them grow stale but hurts them in their scholastic work," the coaches at the session agreed.

The following Prep schedule was arranged:

JANUARY 11.

Tech High vs. U. S. B. at U. S. B.
Marist vs. G. M. A. at G. M. A.
Boys' High, bye.

Charlton Smashes Swimming Record

Sydney, Australia, January 8.—Andrew Charlton, boy swimmer who won distinction at the olympic games, today amazed his most enthusiastic admirers by defeating the Japanese olympic swimmer, Takaishi, over a half-mile course and establishing a world's record for the distance.

Charlton's time was 10 minutes 32 seconds. He defeated the Japanese by 60 yards, lowering the former record by 5 and 2-5 seconds. The race was swum in the Domain baths in laps of 110 yards each.

New of Yost Will Meet Old

When Ohio Wesleyan meets Michigan in football at Ann Arbor next fall in the first game in the new Wolverine bowl, the contest will have a unique background.

It was Fielding H. Yost, for years Michigan's head gridiron coach, who coached the Wesleyan eleven of 1897 to a 0-to-0 "victory" over the Wolverines in the first of the two games Michigan and Wesleyan have played. And Yost played tackle on the team he was coaching and was paid to do it!

"In those days," says Sumner ("Doc") Welch, now famous as Wesleyan's perennial "unpaid coach," "there weren't any rules. We hadn't a paid coach until Yost came up from Morgantown. We got a little money together and sent down to get him to come up and coach and play

It is recorded that Yost tore great holes in the Michigan line and that Welch smashed his way through the Wolverines repeatedly, gaining first nation-wide notice for Ohio Wesleyan. Yost's coaching brought Wesleyan the only championship it had until 1922, when George Gauthier began turning out title-winning elevens for Wesleyan.

Georgia Tech Quint Noses Out Auburn, 22-20, in Fast Game

BY C. F. THOMPSON.

Tech ushered in the southern conference basketball year in Atlanta Saturday night by going into extra session to take a 22-20 victory from the Blue and Orange Plainsmen of Auburn, after the regular playing time limit had found the two cage outfits in a 20-20 deadlock.

It was only by inspired defense with Nick George playing the stellar role, and clumsy basket shooting with Tiny Hearn taking the lead that Tech managed to crawl through the victory. If there is anything lacking in the Mundorff stable it is a capable hoop ringer. In Tiny Hearn he has what might be considered a scoring ace, but then Saturday night Tiny averaged a basket out of approximately every four tries. And this is not so good an average.

Forwards Worked.

It was noticeable that the Tech forwards amassed a total of six points being apportioned five to Player and one to Wilder. Player muffed on any number of occasions when the only thing between him and the backboard was thin air. It was costly. He also managed to toss in one out of eight free tries. Wilder was given one free try and made it count. Hearn got seven and made four of them count. There was no other scoring recorded for the Yellow Jackets but the guarding of George and Jamison, who time after time took the Auburn tosses off the backboards and started them down the floor by the pass route only to lose the ball through stellar and triumphant interference on the part of the A. P. I's.

The James family, E. and F., provided most of this interference. This pair of brothers was a defense combination that is har to beat. Tech passes anywhere in their vicinity were always in danger, and with DpBose, who took to the air on several occasions to catch throws and turned them into points, completing the defense, there is but one descriptive word, brilliant. The game early developed into a guarding duel, as the lowness of the score partly evinces.

The Tech boys, in the phraseology of Frances Newman, evidently decided to be good and let those that would be clever, for though two Auburn boys, E. James and DuBose, got the gate for four fouls, there was only a total of 10 registered against Tech. If Auburn had managed to disburse their fouls in a even manner nobody would have been sent to the showers, for of a total of 15, including two technical ones, four were against E. James, four against DuBose and two against Mullins, who subbed for Akin.

Knots Count.

Toward the close of the second half, with Auburn trailing two points, Ellis placed a close one in the net to knot the score. Referee Glassman called a two-shot foul on DuBose, which brought him from the fray and awarded Tiny Hearn two throws. If both sank it would advance Tech two points and probably win the tilt. Let it be said to Hearn's credit that with all the calmness of an actor about to light a stogie, he put them both through.

But those that had reckoned on these two points for victory had not taken the exact measure of the astute and capable Auburn guard, F. James. When the tilt lacked less than a minute from the end, he tossed the prettiest and cleanest basket of the evening from past the center line. The score was knotted and despite desperate forays neither could score. As the timekeeper poised the gun that would end the tilt, Referee Glassman called a foul on Mullins and gave Player one toss. Player missed and after two minutes' rest, the game was resumed.

Tiny Hearn finally won the game after two desperate minutes of fighting in the playoff, by twisting a spinner over and through. Tech devoted all of its remaining time mainly to defense, and the back and forwards combined kept Auburn far enough away from the basket to make the two-point lead sufficient. Tech twice drew the entire Auburn team away with Hearn resting under the Tech backboard but as many times refused the chance of a misstep that would give Auburn a chance to score.

Eventually the playoff terminated.

65 Players Enter.

One hundred fifty-seven was the figure for 36 holes which let 65 players under the tape for the championship final flight tomorrow.

Allen Moser, Los Angeles, turned in the low amateur gross score with a card of 146. He was in the bracket with MacDonald Smith and Thomas Armour of the Congressional Country club, of Washington, D. C., winner of the Long Beach open tournament and only two strokes behind George Von Elm, national amateur champion.

Al Watrous' flashy 69 card at dusk was as follows:

AUSTRIA FILES HER DAVIS CUP NETCHALLENGE

New York, January 8.—Austria, readmitted to Davis cup playing nations two years ago, has filed a formal challenge for participation in the 1927 European zone play. The challenge received in the form of a letter from the Austrian lawn tennis verband, having been mailed from Wien under date of December reads as follows:

"Please kindly take notice of Austria's challenge for the Davis cup competition 1927 in the European zone."

Austria holds the honor of being one of the earliest competitors for the international team tennis trophy, having first participated in cup play in 1904. Prior to that year play had been confined to the United States and the British Isles. In 1904, however, Belgium, Austria and France all entered the lists. The British Isles and Belgium met in the challenge round, as the United States did not compete. Austria followed with similar challenges in 1905 and 1906. She did not play again, however, after 1906 for almost two decades, her reentry being made in 1924.

Since that date, Austria has challenged annually with the result that her play in 1927 will be the seventh participation in 24 years.

BUSY WINTER IS FORESEEN AT NITTANY

State College, Pa., January 8.—Additional honors have come to the Pennsylvania State college intercollegiate championship cross-country team in an invitation to attend the annual banquet of the Veteran Athletes' association in Philadelphia on January 29, Athletic Director Bezdek announced today. On the same day the Penn State club of Philadelphia will have team members and coaches as their luncheon guests.

Prominent among the group will be Track Coach Nate Cartwell, Captain Fouracre and Bill Cox, national intercollegiate cross-country champion, who in an unpaced trial during the holidays lowered Joie Ray's record for on mile on the Rochester Athletic club tracks by more than two seconds.

Basketball.

A combination of four veterans gives indication that there is opportunity for an excellent record to be established in Nittany cage team this season. Mike Tamas and Roepke at forwards, and Lungren and Von Nelda at guards, are experienced passers, and with Reilly at center, presented a formidable combination. Others showing form are Steve Hamas, Monahan, Baron, Page and Kent, the last three from the undefeated freshman team of last year.

Juniata and Susquehanna will be met here next Wednesday and Saturday, respectively, and then the Lions tackle Gettysburg before invading Princeton and the University of Pennsylvania the last week of the month.

Roped Arena Teams.

The new wrestling coach, Charles Speidel, arrived this week and has started working with the large squad of mat candidates. The first meet will be with LaFayette here on January 22, which means that some strenuous work will be necessary on the part of both coaches and candidates. Captain Kaiser made noteworthy progress with the grapplers prior to the holidays.

Macon Club May Withdraw From South Atlantic League

Favorable Decision In Baseball Scandal Predicted by Experts

BY HAROLD ANDREWS.

Chicago, January 8.—They've all spoken except Kenesaw Mountain Landis and he's next.

The high commissioner today began poring over the testimony taken at his $20,000 holiday party concerning the charges of Charles "Swede" Risberg and Arnold "Chick" Gandil that the Detroit Tigers "sloughed" four games to the Chicago White Sox in the pennant race of 1917. Landis expects to reach the last page in time to announce a decision next Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock Chicago time.

Although he hasn't intimated anything yet, the experts in Chicago are predicting that when his verdict comes Charles ("Swede") Risberg will return for good to his milk business in Minnesota and that Arnold ("Chick") Gandil will take back his other name and hurry to the outlaw leagues of the southwest.

The experts further insist that Gandil's story, related in the commissioner's office in the Gas building as he faced a stuffed fish on the wall, will have no effect on the personnel of the various clubs next season.

Will Return to Posts.

They say that Ray Schalk will manage the White Sox, that Donie Bush will be with the Pirates and that Eddie Collins will be seen back at his old job with the Athletics. The entire investigation, they say, was a victory for the common people.

When Gandil had ended his story Friday night and had been called a liar by Bill James, Eddie Collins and all the others, Judge Landis jumped up on his rubber heels and, banging his fist on the table, announced the date and time that he would make his decision. This was regarded as a victory for the afternoon papers.

The 38 defendants then assembled in groups and began going over the testimony that had been given by Risberg and Gandil. Occasionally some of the words they had used on the stand could be heard above the rumble.

"Chick" and Charley's story was that the series of four games played here September 2 and 3 was given to the White Sox for a consideration and that the Tigers had the favor returned to them in September, 1919.

"Chick" said that "dough" was collected by him and Charley was "paid" to the Tigers and was not, as the defendant said, given as a reward for the walloping given to the Boston Red Sox by the Detroit team.

SENIOR LOOP HURLING ACES ARE SUPERIOR

American league batters socked the delivery of Joseph Leslie Bush at a .292 rate last spring and Washington turned him loose. Joseph Leslie thereupon joined the Pittsburgh Pirates and had so complete a reversal of form that his Pittsburgh record gives him credit for being the hardest-to-hit pitcher in either league. Only 97 National league hits were made off Joe in 459 times at bat, which means that Joe held his opponents to the negligible batting average of .211. Some pitching for the veteran.

Nine other pitchers—all of them National leaguers—held opposing batsmen to averages ranging from .220 to .240, but no regular American league pitcher managed to keep hits so high-priced. Walter Beall of the Yankees, a second-string twirler, led his league with a mark of .240. Beall, however, faced only 296 opponents, and that was no real test. Lefty Grove, of the Athletics, topped American league regulars with a mark of .244.

The whole American league batted .284 in 1926 and the National hit .280. This difference of only four points does not explain the difference between pitching performances on the two circuits. Probably the resin ball helped the National leaguers. But in any event, 1926 pitching honors belong very largely to twirlers on the older circuit. Note the figures:

Pitcher, Club	Op. AB.	Op. B.H.	Op. B.Av.
J. Bush, Pittsb'gh.	459	97	.211
P. Jones, Chi. N...	703	151	.214
Greenfield, N. Y. N.	938	206	.219
Yde, Pittsburgh...	812	181	.223
Rhem, St. L. N....	1068	241	.226
G. Bush, Chi. N...	641	149	.232
Vance, Brooklyn...	713	172	.233
Rixey, Cincinnati..	993	231	.233
Alexander, Chicago- St. Louis N....	815	191	.234
R. Smith, Bost'n N.	845	199	.236
Kaufmann, Chi. N.	711	169	.239
Blake, Chicago N..	849	204	.240
Beall, N. Y. A....	296	71	.240
Grove Athletics....	930	227	.244

Lefty Grove led the pitchers of both leagues a strikeout champion, taking the honors from Dazzy Vance. Four of the leading whiff artists were American leaguers, as follows:

Pitcher, Club	OpAB	OpSO	AvSO per 100 AB
Grove, Athletics...	930	194	20.9
Vance, Brooklyn...	713	140	19.6
A. Thomas, Chi. A.	923	127	13.8
Uhle, Cleveland...	1184	159	13.4
Johnson, Wash....	986	125	12.7

Pete Donahue of the Cincinnati Reds gave only 3.29 bases on balls per 100 times at bat, and that figure leads both leagues. Grover Cleveland Alexander's record of 3.8 gifts in 100 times at bat ranks second best. No other pitcher in either league kept gifts below four per hundred. Pennock of the Yankees topped the American leaguers. The best five records were these:

Pitcher, Club	OpAB	OpBB	AvBB per 100 AB
Donohue, Cin'n'ti.	1911	39	3.29
Alexander, Chicago, St. Louis N....	815	31	3.80
Pennock, N. Y. A..	1041	43	4.13
S. Smith, Cleve'd.	734	31	4.22
Carlson, Phil. N..	1110	47	4.23

Wild men were wilder in the American league than in the National. Nine Americans gave from 95 to 118 walks, whereas only two National league pitchers gave as many as 90 bases on balls. Wildest of all was Elam VanGilder of the St. Louis Browns. His 98 gifts in 688 times at bat averaged 14.2 walks per 100. George Uhle gave 118 walks, but his average was only 9.9 per 100 at bat. Blake of the Cubs, most liberal National leaguer, passed 92 men in 849 times at bat for an average of 10.3.

The five most generous averages were these:

Player, Club	OpAB	OpBB	AvBB per 100 AB
VanGilder, St. Louis A....	688	98	14.2
Wiltse, Boston A..	737	99	13.4
P. Jones, Chi. N..	703	90	12.8
Gaston, St. L. A..	801	101	12.6
A. Thomas, Chi. N.	923	110	11.9

JACKET SQUAD WINS TECH TRACK MEET

BY JULIAN D. SAKS.

In the track and field meet Saturday between the Golden Tornado and the Yellow Jackets, two teams composed of members of the Tech track squad, the Yellow Jackets took first place by the slim margin of one point, 75 to 74. Ed Hamm, Golden Tornado sophomore from Loanoke, Ark., was high point man of the meet with 23 points gathered from four first places and one third. Percy Perkins, Yellow Jacket, was second high scorer with 12 1-2 points and Roy Brewer and Stumpy Thomason, both Tornado, tied for third with 11 each.

Due to the damp weather, slow track, and the fact that the boys have just come back from the Christmas holidays, practically all the times and distances were relatively slow.

The Tech track men will continue practice throughout the winter but will not be in strict training as the first intercollegiate meet is not scheduled until the first part of April. All Men expected back from last year have returned to school and Coach Barron hopes to put out the best track team this year that Tech has ever had.

Besides the intersquad meets between the Yellow Jackets and the Golden Tornadoes there will be an interdormitory track meet, interdormitory and interfraternity relays, with the winter season winding up with an exhibition invitation met at Emory between Emory, Oglethorpe and Tech, similar to that held last year when Charles Paddock was in Atlanta.

The Schedule.

The winter schedule is as follows:

Oklahoma Star Was Coal Miner

Bent over a black hole in the ground whacking away with his pick, an Oklahoma coal miner five years ago was thinking—thinking that some day he would be a great athlete and have an education.

The miner was P. A. ("Polly") Wallace, captain of the University of Oklahoma football team, and his dreams are coming true. He will receive his degree in geology at the end of the spring term and already flattering offers await him.

After doing his freshman work in 1915-16, at Oklahoma, Wallace went to Coalgate, Okla., and started work in the mines, for financial reasons. For five years he dug coal and acted as fire boss and pit boss. He then went into business, taught school and did a little coaching.

Polly returned to the university in the fall of 1924 and each year since then he has been the mainstay of the Sooner football line playing center.

TY'S STAUNCHEST BELIEVERS

Here is one place where the Christmas presentation of Judge Kennesaw Mountain Landis, the Santa Claus of baseball, was refused with a cold and hostile demeanor. The whole of baseball fandom expressed their belief and support of Ty Cobb in the first of the recent flurries of malicious diamond gossip, and so you can imagine just how much of it his family with whom he is shown, believed. From left ot right they are, Miss Shirley Cobb, Mrs. Cobb, Herschel, Jimmie and Beverly with Ty senior and Ty junior at the right.

MARIST GRID BANQUET SET FOR THURSDAY

Marist college's football banquet, which was to have been held before Christmas, will be held Thursday night at the Atlanta Athletic club, according to announcement Saturday. The banquet is an annual event given by Robert H Martin, prominent Atlanta sportsman. Mr. Martin is one of the most ardent supporters of the Marist eleven and the players have come to look forward to his annual entertainment.

Marist's football team really deserves any tribute that might be paid to it, as it has gone undefeated for the last two seasons and in the past three years has lost only one game. That was in 1924, when Darlington High school managed to beat the Bean forces. Since that time Marist has been consistent in beating their Rome foe.

Coach Joe Bean very probably will announce his tentative 1927 football schedule at the banquet Thursday night. It is understood that Marist is going to step out and play an even harder schedule than it has in the last three years. Gold footballs will be awarded to all members of the 1926 varsity.

Huge Turn Out Of Rowing Squad Aspirants Made

Philadelphia, January 8.—(Special.)—One of the most remarkable turnouts in athletic history at the University of Pennsylvania occurred during the last three days of the past week, when 450 oarsmen and prospective oarsmen reported to Coaches Spuhn and Luft.

Last year when close to 400 aspiring oarsmen reported to Coach Spuhn, he expected that a record for all time had been established, but he did not reckon with the growth of interest in the water sport.

More than half of the large total were freshmen, few of whom have ever handled an oar. It is with this group that the coaches will devote most of their time during the indoor workouts. Max Luft, the former Washington oarsman, who is in direct charge of the yearlings, expects to have the services of all the veterans of the varsity crew and of the junior varsity and 150-pound eights.

Five of the eight men who rowed in the varsity shell that finished fourth at Poughkeepsie are back. They include Captain Charles Hill, Gentsch, the Ogden (Utah) giant; Beauveau Borie, H. Jordan and Sebastian. Irmiger, Fayle and Elliott have graduated.

From the freshmen crew of 1926 Spuhn expects big things from Lang, Borland, Doniger, Lindelow, Lester and Cheney. Frank, the yearling coxswain, stands out as the best of the coxswains.

All eight of the junior varsity have reported. Bailey, Kelleher, Nylund, Johnson, McGean, McKinley, Penny and Sweetser, who rowed at Poughkeepsie, should wage a merry fight for places on the varsity.

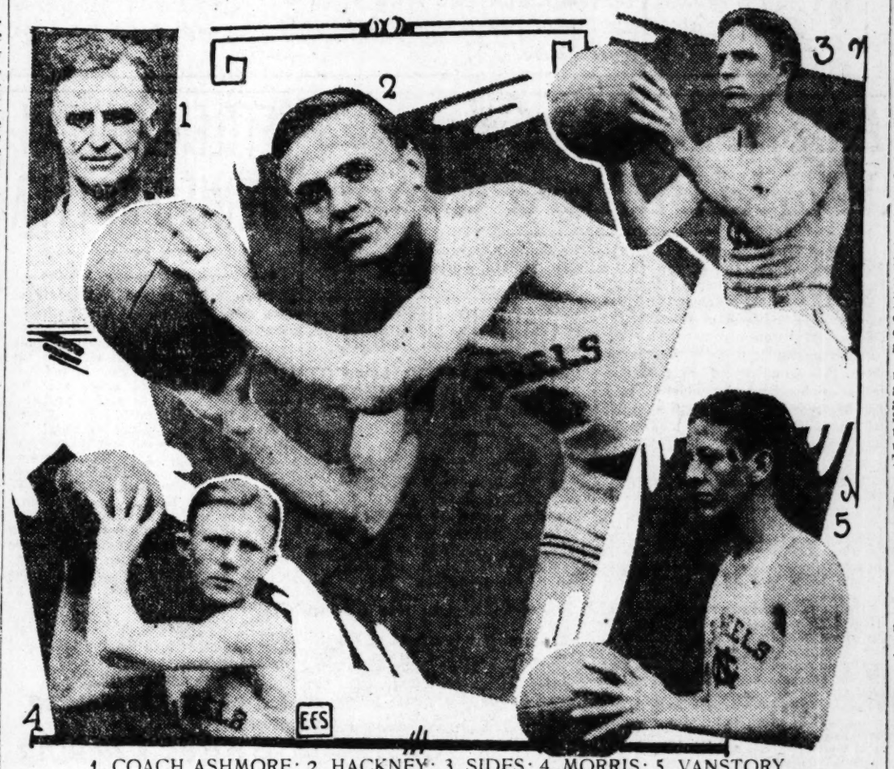

Rennie is the only absentee from the 150-pound eight. Spurdle, Mason, Adkins, Cutler, Nevius, Mitchell and W. Jordan all return. Other candidates for varsity honors who have had experience are Mallory, Coats, Schoff, Ginns, Thiergard, Kline, Swing, Ingram, Naus and Gilman.

The crew schedule includes races with all the best college crews in the east. It opens with Navy at Annapolis on April 30. On May 7 triangular regatta with Yale and Columbia on the Housatonic is listed. Then follow a triangular race with Harvard and M. I. T. on May 21, the Childs cup regatta with Princeton and Columbia on May 28, and a varsity eight in the stewards' cup race on the same day. The last race will occur at Poughkeepsie.

NORTH CAROLINA UNIVERSITY BASKETEERS

:: TARHEELS HAVE WON SOUTHERN TITLE FOUR TIMES IN FIVE YEARS ::

EYE ANOTHER SOUTHERN CONFERENCE CROWN

1, COACH ASHMORE; 2, HACKNEY; 3, SIDES; 4, MORRIS; 5, VANSTORY.

Chapel Hill, N. C., January 8.—What chance has the University of North Carolina of annexing a fifth southern conference basketball title? That question is receiving a good deal of attention in southern basketball circles as another cage season opens.

The Tar Heels have won four of the southern titles in the last five years. It would seem nothing short of miraculous that they could hope to win again. But fans said the same thing last year, and the Tar Heels won just the same. So far as is known, no college quint in the country has ever made such a record.

Considering the material on hand, it must be admitted that the Tar Heels face a super task in trying to retain their crown this year. For the dawn of the 1927 season finds Carolina greatly weakened by the loss of last year's veterans. Gone are virtually all the stars who have played on the championship quints.

"Sprat" Cobb, Billy Devin and Bill Dodderer, all-southern stars of the last three seasons, have played their final game for the university. Along with thm went Artie Newcomb, brilliant center of last year, who rose from a substitute berth to the "most valuable man in the conference tournament" in the short space of two weeks. Two other lettermen of last year are also missing. They are "Red" Barber and Abe Neiman, substitute guard and forward.

The nucleus for the 1927 team is composed of two lettermen. Bunn Hackney, mentioned on several all-southern selections last year, probably will hold his old guard post, while Billy Vanstory, sub center and forward, will likely play the pivot position. Morris, guard, and Sides, forward, are the other experienced men who will make strong bids for regular berths. Sides started 16 of the varsity games last season, but missed his letter when he failed to make the Atlanta trip.

The outstanding new men on this year's squad are Sharpe, Perkins and Harvell, from last year's scrubs; Satterfield and Rufus Hackney, of last year's freshmen outfit, and Price, from the 1925 first year squad, who was out of college last year.

The Tar Heels have a new coach, but they will probably stick to the same system that has proved so successful in the past. Major Boye installed that system in 1921. The Tar Heels won the southern championship in 1922 and the South Atlantic title in 1923 without the services of a coach. In 1924 they were coached by Norman Shepard, in 1925 by Monk McDonald, and last year by Page Sanborn.

The new coach is Jim Ashmore, who is also head baseball mentor as well as assistant in football. Coach Ashmore has had wide experience in tutoring basketball. He started basketball, along with other sports, while a student at the University of Illinois. Since then he has coached basketball, as well as other sports, at a number of institutions, including University of Iowa, James Milliken university, University of Colorado and Depauw university.

CLOSE DETAIL OF SEA DERBY TO BE RADIOED

Avalon, Santa Catalina Island, Cal., January 8.—(AP)—Radio fans throughout the country will be able to follow closely the progress of the scores of contestants in the $40,000 Wrigley ocean marathon swim as they battle their way across the Santa Catalina channel January 15.

Literally, a stroke by stroke report of the event will be broadcast from the steamer Avalon, official convoy of the race, which is being equipped with special radio sending apparatus, it was announced today by Major Lawrence Mott, United States Signal corps, who is in charge of the radio activities in connection with the swim.

Arrangements have been completed, Mott said, for rebroadcasting of the description by KSL, Salt Lake City; KOA, Denver; GMOX, St. Louis; WJAZ, Chicago; KGW, Portland, Ore., and KGO, Oakland. KFWO, the Santa Catalina Island station, will pick up the broadcast of the Aalon on a wave length of 105 meters and rebroadcast on its own wave length of 211.1 meters.

Well-Known Horseman Is Claimed by Death

Lafayette, Ind., January 8.—(AP)—Jeptha Crouch, widely known importer and exhibitor of French, German, Belgian and English bred horses, died today in his 84th year. Influenza caused his death. In addition to his stock farm here, he maintained branch farms at London, Ontario; Nashville, Tenn.; Sedalia, Mo.; Sacramento, Cal.; Portland, Ore., and Staunton, W. Va. He has exhibited horses at every state fair in the United States.

Red Sox Plan Game With Pels

Lewiston, Maine, January 8.—(AP) Training season exhibition games for the Boston American league team, announced today by Manager William F. Carrigan, include an opening series with the New Orleans club, and a barnstorming trip of seven games at Indianapolis. The dates:

At New Orleans, March 13, 19, 20, 26, 27.

At Birmingham, March 31.

Minneapolis at Decatur, Ga., April 1; at Louisville, Ky. April 2, 3 and 4; at Indianapolis, Ind., April 5 and 6.

The Red Sox originally were scheduled for games at Columbus, Ohio, April 5 and 6, but these were canceled after the sale of the Columbus franchise to the Reds, and Indianapolis was substituted.

"Unlady-Like."

The gyrations of the cheer leader are "unlady-like" in the opinion of the women's self-government association of Indiana university, which would discontinue co-ed battle-cry directors.

If the women's athletic association of the university agrees with the self-government body, next year's Hoosier football cheering section will respond only to the male exhorter. Indiana has extended equality in cheer leading to its co-eds for several years. There were two last season.

Largest Box.

Navin field, Detroit, has the largest press box in the major leagues—and the highest. The box crowns the second tier of the grandstand and can accommodate 500 sport writers and telegraphers.

The box was added to the park equipment a few years ago when it appeared that Ty Cobb would give Detroit another American league pennant. President Navin wanted to be ready to accommodate a large press representative. He is still ready.

Winder Hi Beats Gainesville Five

Winder, Ga., January 8.—(Special.)—The Winder High school basketball team defeated Gainesville here by a score of 22-13 in one of the most interesting games ever seen on the Winder court. The local boys were leading 12-4 at the close of the first half but a brilliant comeback by the Gainesville lads tied the score at 13-all late in the third quarter. It was in the fourth quarter that the scrappy little Winder team led by Captain Whitley, the only man of last year's varsity, started an attack too dazzling to be stopped. Winder scored nine points in the last three minutes of play.

Whitley was high point man but the whole Winder team performed well.

Next week Winder meets Riverside, Athens High school, and Georgia freshmen in that order.

Franchise in Sally May Be Exchanged For Southeastern

—SPORTS—SECOND EDITION—MUST— MACON CLUB

Macon, Ga., January 8.—(Special.)—Directors of the Southeastern league have been invited by Roy G. Williams, president of the Macon club of the South Atlantic league, to submit him a proposition relative to Macon disposing of its present South Atlantic league charter and entering the eight circuit, class B league, consisting of Charleston, Pensacola, Savannah, Jacksonville, St. Augustine, Albany, Montgomery and Columbus.

President Williams stated that a representative of the Southeastern league had called on him nearly a week ago to discuss the probability of a change that would place Charleston back in the Sally league, and Macon in the newer circuit. He favored such a change if a financial agreement can be reached, he said.

"In view of the fact that we have a nice surplus in the South Atlantic league," Williams said, "we would have to be reimbursed for our equity and guarantee, and then be offered a very substantial bonus before we would entertain the idea. Whether or not we will be able to get together I am unable to say."

Williams said the Macon club could operate for from four to six thousand dollars less each year, should they enter the Southeastern league.

"We cannot get around the fact, though," the president said, "that the Sally league is considered the fastest organization in class B ball. Unless we see that it will be to our financial advantage to swap charters with Charleston, we will remain in the Sally."

J. P. C. FACES TOUGH GAME WITH TERRORS

The Jewish Progressive club basketball team, winner in its last two starts, will face tough opposition in the Burk Terrors of Nashville in the week's opener at the J. P. C. court Monday night.

The Progressive club has a fast outfit, stalwart and strong, and reports from Nashville are that the Burk quint is very much the same way. That would lead one to believe that a par-excellence exhibition of basketball is to be witnessed at the J. P. C. Monday night.

BURK TERRORS SET GOOD MARK.

Nashville, Tenn., January 8.—Burk Terrors, who invade Chattanooga, Atlanta, Birmingham and other southern cities starting January 10, have one of the greatest scoring teams that has been turned out in Nashville in years.

The Terrors have averaged better than 50 points per game this season and they have met some of the best teams in middle Tennessee, including the Y. M. H. A. Peps, one of Nashville's leading title contenders. The Peps held them to their smallest score and also ran up the tallest number of points that has been made on them. The score in their game was 40 to 30 in favor of the Burk five.

Eight teams have been encountered and the Terrors are yet to meet defeat. They have piled up more than 400 points while their opponents have been held to little better than 100.

In Lallie Richter, three times all-Tennessee high selection while at Hume-Fogg, where every member of the Terror team played, the Burke quint has one of the most accurate shots in Tennessee. Bubber Quick, captain of the team; Dot Harrison, Ewell Costello and Dick Wright are all dead shots anywhere within the 17-foot zone. Bowser Chest, Forrest Wolf and Charley Lucas are also capable of pocketing shots at any angle. Then Boce Richter and Powell McWhirter, back guards, can shoot when given the opportunity.

The Terrors use a varied style of play. If they are unsuccessful with one style in the first half, they change to another in the second period. They also often use different teams in different periods. There is very little difference in the ten men and Coach McKinney Lynn is able to substitute for anyone at any time without slowing up the play the least bit.

While the team boasts a crack offensive quint, it also has a fine defensive outfit. Only one team, the Peps, has been able to score more than 16 points on the Burks this season. B. Richter and McWhirter are a pair of star back guards and Chest and Lucas are capable performers at running guard.

An example of the ability of the Terrors might be figured out with their game with the Peps and the Peps game with Ole Olson's Terrible Swedes. The Peps held the Swedes to a 3-point victory and led the Swedes until the last half minute of the game. The Terrors beat the Peps 10 points.

Machine To Test Golf Balls Tried At U. S. G. A. Meet

Pittsburgh, January 8.—(AP)—A machine designed to test the resiliency of golf balls in an effort to select a standard ball was demonstrated for the first time here today at the annual convention of the United States Golf association.

The machine, recently invented by Professor Harold A. Thomas, of the civil engineering department of Carnegie Institute of Technology, under the direction of William C. Fownes, Jr., the association's president, consists of four essential parts, "air gun," "striker," "riser" and "brake."

The weight of the striker is the same as that of the head of an average driver. The striker is shot from the air gun with a known velocity of about 130 feet per second, equivalent to that attained by the driver head in an actual drive by a first rate golfer.

After being hit by the striker, the golf ball to be tested is driven vertically upward with a velocity of about 220 feet per second, corresponding to that of the ball in an actual drive. The moving ball is caught and stopped in the "riser."

Fownes said the association perfected the machine in the hope of obtaining an accurate and reliable measure of the relative driving power of different balls. Should the experiment prove successful, a golf ball uniform in weight and size will be manufactured.

Fishing Contests.

Fishing contests are popular among the Japanese residents of Maui and of the larger Hawaiian islands. Teams of a given number of men fish an agreed number of hours, the team catching the largest number of pounds of fish winning. Silver cups sometimes are offered as trophies.

should be one of the best amateur games of the season. The Gulf Refining company's Orange Disc quintet will play the strong team of the Knights of Columbus and as both of these teams have won all of their games a real battle is predicted.

The Georgia Railway and Power club and the Southern Bell cagers should have no trouble in turning in victories over the Atlantic Steel and Terra Cotta aggregations. The Atlanta and Lowry five draws an off night. The games Thursday will be played in the following order:

Southern Bell vs. Terra Cotta.

Gulf Refining company vs. Knights of Columbus.

The first game will start at 7

Banner Year in Sports Looms for Atlanta Fans

New Boxing Board Promises Good Shows; Contos Is Praised

BY C. F. THOMPSON.

The good year 1927 looms as one of rainbow promise in squared circle activities in Atlanta, in the opinion of Claude E. Buchanan, re-elected chairman of the Atlanta boxing commission, who Friday again assumed the reins of this branch of athletics here.

The boxing commission, composed now of Al Martin, B. L. Parker and Buchanan, will begin the year with a program slightly more rigid than the one followed in the past but with the same broadness. It is Buchanan's desire, he says, to lay before Atlanta fans the best obtainable in wrestling and fighting, and at the same time he says a step has been taken that will bar irresponsible promoters from even contemplating promotion here.

The new plan is to demand a guaranty or forfeiture deposit of $1,000 from any prospective promoter now well-known or not regularly engaging in the business here. This will eliminate a repetition of one show staged in Atlanta toward the close of 1926 wherein the promoter decided to call the program off because the house was not sufficiently large and several of the fighers were not paid. There are a number of ticket-holders still seeking a refund on their tickets from this disaster and the incident has done much to damage the game in Atlanta.

Praises John Contos.

In outlining this plan, Buchanan paid a glowing tribute to the integrity of John Contos, the wrestling promoter and to Walk Miller, the manager of Tiger Flowers and a promoter of boxing.

"John has succeeded where many failed before, and he has built up a wrestling following here when I told him a year ago it was useless," Buchanan said.

"He deserves a lot of credit and he has the whole-souled support of the commission almost any move for John in addition to bringing wrestling to a popular and unusually high plane, has done it in such a manner as to create a large number of friends and establish for himself an enviable reputation for honesty and square-shooting.

"Walk Miller is another. Walk is good for everything he says he is, and he and John can get almost anything they want from the boxing commission.

"The game enjoyed its greatest season in Atlanta during the past year, and I want to say right now that the boxing commission is preparing and planning that even the figures of 1926 will be far exceeded during the present year.

"You tell the fans that the boxing commission is going to get some good matches here, both in wrestling and boxing, and is going to exert every effort to see that it is kept on the highest possible plane."

G. M. A. BEATS THOMASTON FIVE, 30 TO 19

Coach Morrow's G. M. A. basketeers added another victory to their long list Saturday night by downing the Thomaston cagers by the score of 30 to 19 on the G. M. A. court before a large crowd of basketball fans.

Although the visiting cagers could not cope with the dazzling attack of the Cadets, they put up a game battle and came close to overcoming the lead held by the Cadets several times. They threatened the home boys more than once after they got going.

The G. M. A. combination was working to perfection and proved a little too much for the Thomaston hoop ringers. Led by Mott, star forward, the Morrow boys played one of the best offensive games of the season. Mott found the basket for 16 points, to take high point honors, while Broadfield, also of G. M. A., came next with 14 counters.

The initial half ended wth the visitors on the short end of a 12-to-7 count, but after the second half got under way the Thomaston boys started to climb, gathering 12 points in this rally and threatening the Morrow cagers many times.

Hancock, stellar center of the Thomaston quintet, led his team. He played a beautiful floor game, as well as adding quite a number of points to his team's score.

TUNNEY TOOK LOWEST OFFER, GETTY FINDS

BY FRANK GETTY.

New York, January 8.—Several pertinent truths about Tex Rickard's trip to St. Louis to sign up Gene Tunney for the next heavyweight championship fight can now be told.

In the first place, despite the ballyhoo and the Rickarian gesture of the rushing half way across the continent and back, Tex did not outbid his rival, Humbert J. Fugazy, in the auction for the champion's services. On the contrary, Fugazy's offer exceeded that made by Rickard by exactly $275,000.

When Gene Tunney assured Fugazy that he was open to any proposition and that his services would go to the highest bidder, the titleholder must have spoken thoughtlessly.

For Tex said laughingly this afternoon that Tunney couldn't have thought much of Fugazy's offer, since it was much larger than the one accepted in St. Louis.

The most recent of heavyweight champions is far from being the dumbest, Gene knows right well that he has done the smart thing in tying up with Rickard rather than any of the rival promoters, even though their offers were larger.

"The offers of January are not always the purses of June," quoth erudite young Mr. Tunney.

Fugazy, of course, feels justly disappointed, because he had been assured that Tunney was interested only in the largest possible purse and wasn't tied to anyone's apron strings.

"I hope Fugazy goes ahead and sues Tunney for breach of promise," said Tex. "This next fight needs all the bally-hooing it can get."

Rickard realizes that there may be some difficulties in the way of his getting $50 for ringside seats at Yankee stadium next fall, and he wants a slogan and a lot of talk about the affair. Accordingly, he has served notice upon Jack Dempsey and Jack Delaney that if they want a chance to fight Tunney this year, they must get into the so-called heavyweight elimination contest now under way at Madison Square Garden.

He doesn't propose, of course, to make Dempsey fight indoors, but wants him in line for an outdoor fight either in July or August. The promoter figures on making enough money out of these preliminary fights to guarantee himself against possible loss on the Tunney show, in case anything goes wrong.

Rickard is giving Tunney a big guarantee, the biggest ever received by a champion. Dudley Field Malone, Tunney's legal adviser, says the sum is $525,000. Rickard says it isn't as much as that.

Either two contracts were used in St. Louis and the promoter and lawyer have gotten ahold of conflicting versions, or else Tex feels that differences of opinion being so useful in horse racing may be good for fights, as well.

As a matter of fact, the chances are that neither is telling the whole truth, nor intends to. Tunney would fight for $300,000 or $200,000 or what ever was available, if he had to.

Basketball Growing.

The popularity of basketball has doubled in France in the last five years. Twice as many teams are members of leagues playing the game in the Paris district as there were in 1921, and a similar growth has been observed in the provinces.

Although basketball was one of the first Anglo-Saxon sports adopted in France, its popularity is not nearly so widespread as that of football. It does not have the same attraction for spectators, courts surrounded by stands being rare.

New British Hope.

Jack Smith, Great Britain's longest hitter of the golf ball, has developed from a slugger into one of the hopes of that country for recovering its golfing honors from America.

In professional competition at Hindhead Smith set a new course record of 68, knocking four strokes from the previous low medal mark, held by Rex Hartley, the Cambridge university golfer.

STARS BEAT PRYOR STREET PRESBYTERIAN

Fast aggressive playing gave the edge to the Epworth League All-Stars basketball five as they downed the Pryor Street Presbyterian five in a hard contested game Saturday night at the Wesley Memorial court. The final count was 37 to 24.

All during the first half both teams played on even terms with the victors leading by a small margin. It was in the second period that the composite team began to draw ahead with a comfortable lead. Both teams were handicapped by three players of each team being out of the lineup with colds.

Pryor Street showed a fast outfit in the first period, but they began to slow up a bit in the second half, it was then that the victors began to draw away from them.

Both the composite and Pryor Street team had a tendency to be bothered with butter fingers. The ball spent quite a bit of time on the floor.

Four of the winners team were outstanding McHenry was in every scrimmage and aided materially in the victory with his splendid passing. Martin, Richardson, and Forster were very aggressive. Magee, a newcomer to the team, played a fine game.

For Pryor Street every player in the game fought hard, and kept going after they were trailing by a big margin. The team work of the outfit was not up to par. This was because they had several new players that had not played with the team and they were not accustomed to the Pryor Street type of game.

Conner, Preston and Hubert played the best ball for the losers. They fought hard to stave off the defeat but lacked something in the Tanner of holding the ball that cost them a lot of points.

South, Homer and Scogging did nice work.

SOUTHEASTERN LOOP PLANS EIGHT CLUBS

Savannah, Ga., January 8.—(AP)—Eight clubs in all probability, will form the Southeastern league next season, and Charleston will have a team supported by outside capital, it became known here in baseball circles today. Pensacola is the club expected to complete the eight club league.

According to a league official, the Charleston club will be sponsored by Marvin Wolf, owner of the Augusta baseball club and Sam Berlin, another Augustan. Negotiations are now underway for the organization of this club and within the next few weeks those who are now endeavoring to return the "overhome" city into organized baseball expect to have their plans in tangible shape.

Pensacola has expressed a desire to enter the league and the fact that there is sufficient baseball interest there to support it is seen in the guaranteeing of several thousands of dollars to the Newark baseball club to round-out their spring training in that city.

Hoppe Again Crowned World Billiard Champ

New York, January 8.—(AP)—The familiar figure of Willie Hoppe held forth at the top of the 18.2 balkline billiard world again today in the glory of a remarkable triumph.

Toppled from the pinnacle two years ago by Jake Schaefer of Chicago, the 39-year-old veteran came back with a brilliant finish to pull the mantle from the shoulders of Eric Hagenlacher, defending titleholders, in a heart-breaking final block sprint, 1,500 to 1,387. The match ended early today after three nights' play.

Spectacular Match.

For almost five hours the two players gave a masterful exhibition. It was not a battle for spectacular stroking. But for sensational runs and high lock averages, the match never had been equalled here. Hagenlacher fought to overcome the challenger's 160-point second block lead and Hoppe battled to hold on.

Only six innings were required by Hoppe to complete his triumph, but in those frames he crammed one of his greatest displays of tenacity and versatility in his 26 years as a star. Twice Hagenlacher more than wiped out the advantage which Hoppe had piled up Thursday night with marathon spurts, and twice the veteran, refusing to be shaken off, went out and won back his lead to close finally with a clinching cluster of 41 for the crown.

Hoppe regained a crown he had previously held over an almost unbroken stretch of 17 years. Schaefer, who dethroned him two years ago, lost and won back the title in the matches with Edouard Horemans, of Belgium, before finally succumbing to Hagenlacher less than a year ago.

With his first turn at the table last night as a result of an unfinished run of 43 from the second block, Hoppe was able to gather only 23 caroms. The run put Hagenlacher 183 points behind, but the former German star, gathering the spheres deftly, proceeded in his first visit at the table to amaze the gallery with a string of 282 points.

Hoppe, with the balls spread, could collect only 3 in his half, and once more Hagenlacher pushed off into a stretch of machine-like stroking, keeping the balls under masterful command for a cluster of 105.

Hoppe Opens Drive.

Here Hoppe opened his great drive against the champion. Reeling off 18 from a bad leave, he gave the champion a lone carom in the next inning, and then tore off 286 for the highest spurt of the match.

For a less courageous player than Hagenlacher, this remarkable comeback would have settled the verdict, but once more the champion responded with 136, only to have Hoppe close with 129 and 41 for his victory.

Hagenlacher turned in an average of 109 2-4 for the night's play against 83 2-6 for Hoppe, while the latter's match average read 44 4-34 against 40 27-34 for Hagenlacher.

REWARD IS OFFERED FOR GRANT'S ARREST

St. Louis, January 8.—(AP)—The St. Louis real estate exchange late today offered $1,000 reward for information leading to arrest and conviction of Edward W. Grant, youthful secretary-treasurer of the defunct Wagner-Grant-Bell Realty company, who disappeared New Year's day leaving a loss to investors and creditors estimated at more than a million dollars.

The reward was offered at the suggestion of Circuit Attorney Howard Sidener, who has broadcast an order for the arrest of Grant, self-styled "worst scoundrel who ever walked the streets of St. Louis."

The real estate exchange, in order to strengthen public confidence in real estate mortgage investments, today instituted free advisory service for holders of deeds of trust. Many of those sold by Wagner-Grant-Bell, offering returns as high as 35 per cent, were found to be fraudulent, investigators declared.

Aimee To Preach Goodbye Sermon In Hoop Skirt

Los Angeles, January 8.—(AP)—Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist, apparently only mildly interested in the outcome of conspiracy charges pending against her, made preparations today for her final sermon at Angelus temple tomorrow night before leaving on an eight weeks' nation-wide speaking tour Tuesday. She will appear before her audience garbed in a hoop skirt, taking as her sermon, "Slavery Days."

District Attorney Asa Keys, who has until 5 o'clock Monday afternoon to file an information before the superior court specifying the charges on which Mrs. McPherson will be tried, as ordered by Municipal Judge Samuel R. Blake at the conclusion of the evangelist's conspiracy hearing, would not indicate what his course would be. Keyes was expected to make some definite court move when Kenneth G. Ormiston, under indictment for his alleged part in the evangelist's disappearance, appears for arraignment Monday.

Mrs. McPherson's itinerary, not yet full worked out, she said, would include most of the country's larger cities. She will speak at Denver, Kansas City, Dayton, Philadelphia, Baltimore and perhaps New York city and Boston on the eastward trip, with probably many intermediate appearances.

The evangelist said she had received hundreds of telegrams from all sections of the country requesting her to talk in communities other than called for in present tentative plans. Negotiations are under way by telegraph for auditoriums and public buildings in many large centers.

FINGERPRINTING OF ALL CHILDREN WILL BE URGED

Washington, January 8.—(AP)—Fingerprinting of every child in the United States on reaching school age will be sought by the Federal Fingerprint association.

The purpose of the law is to have available fingerprints at all times for authorities, the association pointing out that often they are the sole means of identification in tragedies where bodies are mutilated beyond recognition.

SETTLEMENT PLAN DENIED BY LITA

Los Angeles, January 8.—(AP)—A shakeup today in the legal staff of Lita Grey Chaplin, estranged wife of Charlie Chaplin, was accompanied by the statement that she had not only had made no settlement offer to the comedian, but that she intends to make none and will bring suit for divorce at once. The action probably will be filed next week.

George Beebe, chief counsel for Mrs. Chaplin since she left the millionaire actor's Beverly Hills home several weeks ago, has withdrawn from the case and the firm of Lyndol L. Young, Milton K. Young and William K. Young will replace him.

Mrs. Chaplin would not comment on her change of legal advisers. Beebe refused to say anything except that his withdrawal was voluntary and due to a disagreement over "matters of policy."

The announcement of Mrs. Chaplin's plans for immediate divorce action was made in a lengthy statement by McMurray.

Coffee Drinking Bout, Lacking Promoter, Off

Fort Worth, Texas, January 8.—The scheduled heavyweight coffee-drinking match won't come off this month unless a reputable promoter comes along who can handle three temperamental claimants to the tile.

Just when Gus Comstock, of Fergus Falls, Minn., was enjoying the distinction of being the heavyweight champion, Perry Wilson, of Amarillo, Texas, came out with the statement that he was just about the best plain and fancy coffee drinker in all the world.

Wilson's declarations today clearly indicated that what the good old coffee drinking sport needed was a "Tex" Rickard. When Wilson's words were relayed to Comstock, he called off his match with H. A. Streety, of Dallas, Texas, scheduled for this month. Streety also claims the title.

"Both of these guys will have to fight it out before they can have a chance at the title," he said. "I am the champion. I'll give the winner a chance to take it away from me. The match with Streety is off."

Meanwhile, the controversy raged here. Streety declares that he outpointed Wilson recently by one cup, scoring a 71. Comstock used a smaller cup than Wilson or himself.

MOB MENACES NEGRO SUSPECTS AFTER KILLING

La Plata, Md., January 8.—Two negro suspects held for the murder of Edward J. Carpenter, of Marbury, were removed to Baltimore this afternoon after large crowds began to gather around the county jail and courthouse.

Carpenter, employed at Indian Head reservation, was found shot through the head yesterday by workmen on their way to the government powder mill. His pay envelope containing $91 was missing.

The two negro suspects gave their names as Oli Simmons and Arthur Swan.

DR. NORRIS' TRIAL TO BEGIN MONDAY

Austin, Texas, January 8.—(AP)—Dr. J. Frank Norris, Forth Worth Baptist minister, will go on trial here Monday for the killing of Dexter E. Chipps, with a plea of self-defense.

That the law of the gun and the west will be part of the defense was indicated today by Dayton Moses, counsel of Dr. Norris, who shot and killed Chipps, a lumberman, in the study of the First Baptist church of Fort Worth July 17 last. Discussing defense plans, Moses asked this question:

"If you were sitting in a room and a man who had threatened you suddenly appeared in your doorway, what would you do? Would you let him enter, or would you act first? The law of the west has been one of quick action."

Prosecution attorneys announced they were ready but did not reveal their plans for the trial.

More than 200 witnesses have been called, among them a member of Dr. Norris' congregation who was in the study when Chipps appeared, and a hotel clerk and a telephone operator, who are said to have overheard a telephone conversation in which Chipps is alleged to have threatened the pastor.

"We don't want a lawyer's verdict," Moses declared today. "We don't want a technical verdict. We want a verdict that will completely satisfy the public that Dr. Norris is innocent."

FIREMEN CHANGE DANCING CLOTHES FOR FIRE TOGS

Attleboro, Mass., January 8.—Attleboro firemen changed from dancing clothes to fire-fighting togs when their annual ball was interrupted early today by a $100,000 fire. Two firemen were injured before the fire was under control.

Tex Rickard Favors Dempsey as Opponent Of Heavyweight King

BY FRANK GETTY.

New York, January 8.—The heavyweight fight situation having reached the whispering stage, after the shouting and tumult of St. Louis and Tex Rickard's spectacular three-day dash half way across the continent and back, disparagement of Jack Delaney of Bridgeport is in the air.

For some reason not entirely clear, there is a concerted move on the part of those who will be interested in Gene Tunney's next fight to affirm that the present light-heavyweight champion is far from the best opponent for the ex-marine.

It started as soon as Tex Rickard's special car went swaying over the Mississippi river at the end of a crack Pennsylvania flyer Thursday evening and reached its height when the boys went to work on Pete Reilly, Delaney's taciturn manager, in New York.

Tex himself joins those who don't thing Mons. Chapdelaine the best of challengers. He prefers to defy Jack to step into the so-called heavyweight elimination contest and prove his worth. Delaney's record is held against him, instead of for him. They point out that he "failed twice" to stop Paul Berlenbach, and discount his sensational knockout victories over Mike McTigue and Bud Gorman.

One reason for this growing sentiment, which is just the reverse of that which existed before Rickard landed Tunney, hook, line and sinker, and disposed of the ambitions of Humbert J. Fugazy, may be that Reilly wants a lot of money before he will sign Delaney to meet the champion.

Reilly was overheard last night telling someone that Tunney was "not a colorful champion" and that Delaney would draw in the customers. There is a lot of truth in what he says. But it seems that with Delaney's chance to win the title with a right-hand sock to the jaw he should be glad to get into the ring for very little money.

The fact that he wants a lot indicates that Reilly is not confident of Jack's ability to whip Gene. Which puts him down among the disparagers of Delaney.

As a matter of fact, it is no secret that if Jack Dempsey can "come back," gain a little public confidence to add to the public affection he won when he lost gallantly to Tunney, and whip one or two good men, he will be chosen above all other contenders.

Rickard insists today that he thinks Tunney the greatest heavyweight that ever fought, but that does not mean that Tex believes it. Rickard thinks a lot of things without telling about them.

Tex plans to look Dempsey over carefully and give him first chance if a return bout can be "smoked up."

The promoter personally prefers Dempsey to the other contenders, and claims to rate Jack Delaney down with Paolino. As long as he can keep his "heavyweight elimination contest" going, Rickard does not want one man to stand out as obviously better than the rest.

As for Delaney's attitude towards the affair, he is willing to meet Dempsey, Tunney or any of the others, but he wants an outdoor fight and a big purse.

Meanwhile Jack Sharkey or his fellow townsman, Jimmy Maloney, will be asked by Tex to take a sock or two at Paolino, the Basque woodchopper, who claims the heavyweight champion of Europe.

This Paolino has only one crude right-hand punch, but, if it lands, his opponent is likely to go crashing down like one of the giant trees in the Pyrenees where the Basque acquired his tremendous strength by wielding an axe.

Probably Paolino's jaw is not impregnable, and his more or less speedy elimination may follow in the natural course of events.

RUNAWAY CARS DASH INTO OFFICE, 3 MEN KILLED

Johnstown, Pa., January 8.—(AP)—Three men were killed and a fourth injured today at the Ingleside mine of the Lorain Steel company, near here, when a tipple incline cable broke, causing four cars to crash into the mine office. The victims were office employees as follows:

Thomas S. Heffley, 36; David E. Williams, 20, and Daniel Wentz, 17. Heffley, the only married man, leaves a widow and small son.

Arthur Frederick 27, is at a hospital with lacerations about the head. He will recover, doctors said.

The office was wrecked by the impact of the cars, which were loaded.

OAKLAND NAMES TRACY MANAGER

A. R. Glancy, president of the Oakland Motor Car company, Pontiac, Mich., announces the appointment of

W. R. TRACY.

W. R. Tracy as general sales manager succeeding C. W. Matheson, who resigned to become vice president in charge of sales for an electric refrigerator corporation. Mr. Tracy formerly was assistant director of sales of the Oakland company.

Mr. Tracy's appointment is a fitting tribute to his outstanding sales and executive ability developed during years spent in the automotive field. He entered the industry as retail salesman when it was still in its cradle days, and exhibited a genius for organization and executive work that brought him steady advancement to his present high position.

Mr. Tracy was appointed assistant sales manager of the Oakland Motor Car company in 1920. His record in this capacity was one of exceptional merit, showing him a keen student of business conditions and a seemingly inexhaustible fount of Oakland pep and good will.

His early entry into the automotive field was as Detroit branch manager with the old Regal Motor Car company. In 1911 he resigned this position to become retail salesman with the Detroit Oakland distributor.

Eight months later he was chosen to open the Detroit branch, and remained there three years. He next was promoted to Michigan branch manager, and after two years in this position was selected to open the new Cleveland branch. From this position he was called to the Oakland home office in 1920 to become assistant sales manager, serving in that capacity until his present appointment as general sales manager.

NEW WHIPPET PRICES ANNOUNCED

The price reduction on Whippet cars announced this week by Willys-Overland places the company and its dealers in the most strategic position it has ever occupied in this classification, according to officials of the company. The new price cut which ranges from $15 to $50 is now in effect.

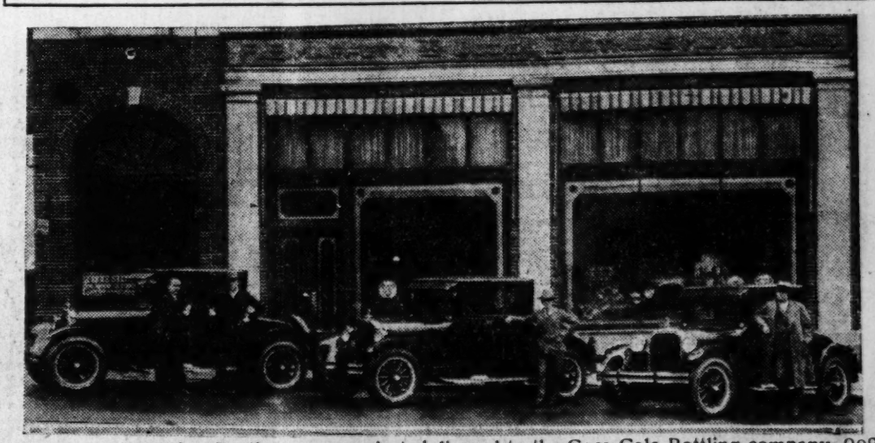

The new prices are: Chassis, $445; touring car, $625; coupe, $625; roadster, $695; coach, $625; sedan, $725; landau sedan, $755. These new prices are f. o. b. factory.

This new price range for the Whippets places a modern 4-wheel brake equipped car within the reach of every motor car buyer, company officials said in commenting on the reductions, and point out that this value strikes an unheard of note in the light four field.

The most drastic reductions were in the coupe and the coach, each being reduced from $675 to $625. The touring car is reduced from $645 to $625, a cut of $20, while the sedan is reduced $15, from $740 to $725. The chassis is cut $50.

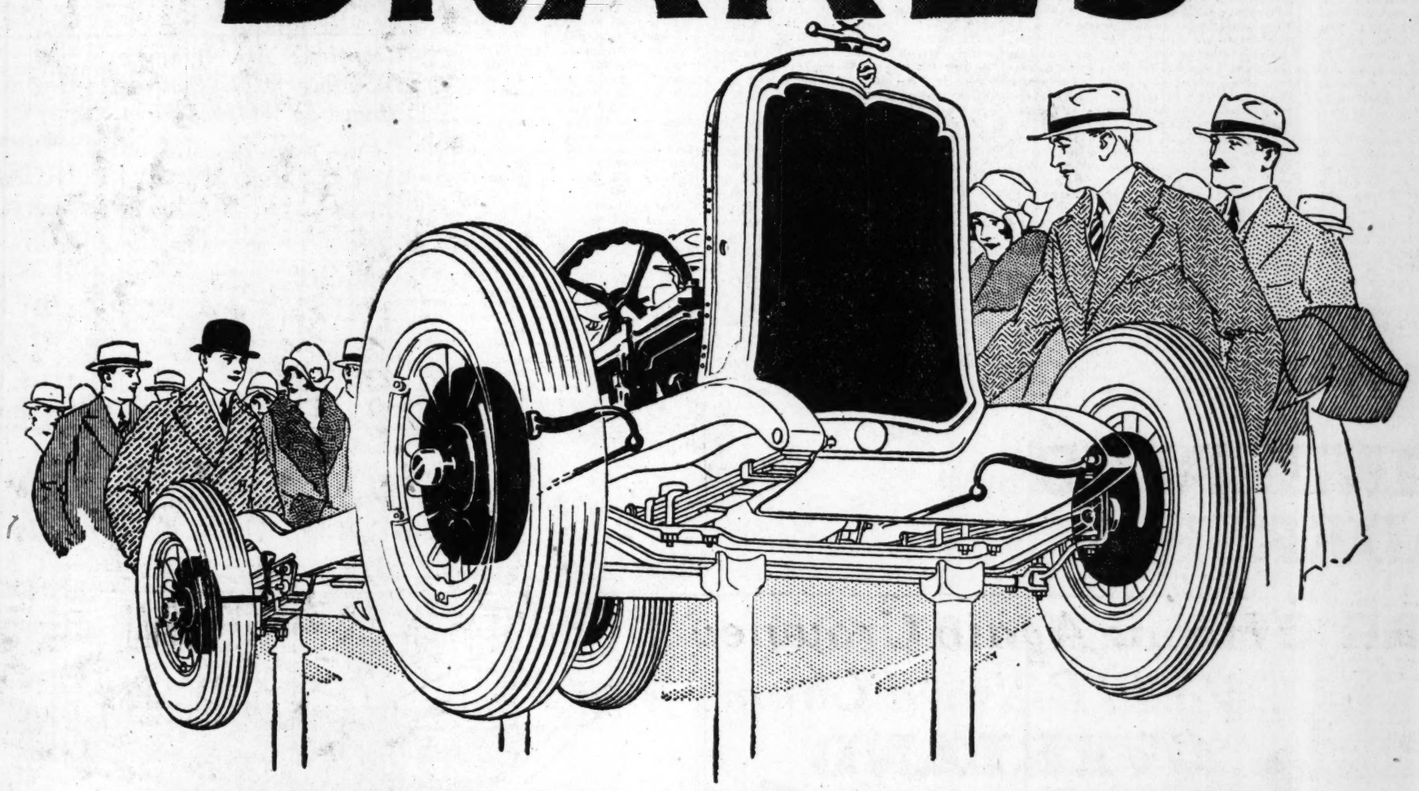

In addition to the four-wheel brakes as a safety factor not found on any other car in this field, company officials cite the low body type of construction employed in the Whippets which give it unusual stability, the oversize balloon tires and the smart lines throughout as well as the space in the interior which is roomier than many light sixes. Another feature stressed by the makers is the fuel economy advantages of the Whippet—30 miles to the gallon of fuel, low oil consumption, speed and power to meet the strictest demands of the driver, and throughout a general performance ability which places the four-cylinder Whippet in a distinct classification in the light car field.

OLDSMOBILE SIX

PRODUCT of GENERAL MOTORS

FEATURES OF KNOWN VALUE

L-Head Engine The L-Head Oldsmobile engine is of the reliable and time-tested poppet valve type. The bore of the cylinders is 2⅞ inches, stroke 4¾ inches, 185 cubic inches displacement.

The gear ratio is such that maximum power is developed within the average driving range.

Honed Cylinders The cylinders of the Oldsmobile engine are finished to a hard, glass surface by honing with fine abrasive stones. This operation is indicative of the care and precision that is evident in the quality that extends to the smallest hidden part.

Crankcase Ventilation In all internal combustion engines water is formed by condensation. Cold engines do not burn all of the fuel on starting. This water and liquid fuel pass into the crankcase and form dilution.

Excessive dilution is eliminated by crankcase ventilation. One-third of the air that passes through the carburetor is drawn through a breather port in the left side of the engine. This air, cleaned of dust and injurious material by a second air cleaner on the breather port, passes through the crankcase before entering the carburetor. It draws off with it water vapor and unburned fuel that may have passed into the crankcase—thereby eliminating excessive dilution. This air also carries with it a small amount of the oil vapor created in the crankcase, which aids in more efficient lubrication of pistons, upper cylinder walls, and valves. Crankcase ventilation improves performance and gives longer life in the engine and longer useful life to the oil. This system is simple and efficient and has no moving parts.

Dual Air Cleaning Dust and dirt from the road form an abrasive or cutting element in the working parts of an engine. In Oldsmobile a primary air cleaner eliminates the injurious particles from two-thirds of the air before it enters the carburetor direct—while the second cleaner in connection with the feature of crankcase ventilation cleans the balance of the air.

Oil Filter An oil filter prolongs still more the life of the engine and the useful life of the oil. Sediment and foreign substances are removed as the oil passes through the filter and filter bag from the rear camshaft bearing.

Only 3 to 4 Oil Changes A Year Threefold security against wear; threefold protection in the trials of miles;—crankcase ventilation, dual air cleaning and oil filter bring new thrift—only 3 to 4 oil changes in an average driving year.

Harmonic Balancer The Harmonic Balancer, developed by General Motors engineers, counteracts vibration. The large, drop-forged crankshaft is dynamic and static balanced. The grain flow of metal in the forging is held at right angles to the lines of stress. Crankshaft and large pressure-cast main bearings are rigidly mounted in crankcase in strong webs integrally cast with case.

Four-Wheel Brakes Now Oldsmobile adds—at no increase in price—four-wheel brakes to further promote assurance of safety and driving peace of mind. The front wheel brakes are self-energizing, internal, three-shoe, expanding type. The brake is entirely enclosed as protection against water, dirt and oil. The action is positive and the braking efficient. The rear wheel brakes are the efficient split-band, two-piece type in which the action is mechanical and the bands clamp the drums like jaws, assuring maximum contact and braking. The hand or parking brake acts on the rear wheels. As a safe guard against driving with the parking brake applied, the foot pedal depresses with application of the parking brake.

Larger Balloon Tires In addition to four-wheel brakes at no increase in price Oldsmobile also adds larger, 30 by 5.25, balloon tires. These tires promote even greater riding comfort.

Balloon-Geared Steering The worm, split nut type steering mechanism is specially geared for safe and easy steering control. The ratio of the balloon-geared mechanism permits easy steering even in congested traffic

Easy-Shift Transmission The transmission is built as a unit with the clutch and engine. The shifting lever is long and shifting is easy. Here is a feature of control that can be appreciated only after you have taken the wheel and enjoyed its advantages.

Three-Way Lubrication Thorough lubrication is assured by the use of "three-way" oil delivery. The accessible gear pump, operated by the forward end of the camshaft, delivers oil at equal pressure and camshaft to the main bearings. Efficient lubrication is assured, because oil is delivered through the oil filter and the oil tubes to the main bearings, and also flows through the full length of the drilled crankshaft oil passage. Passages from the main bearings deliver oil to camshaft bearings. Other parts of the engine are bathed in an oil spray from the bearings. Pressure is automatically regulated by an accessible control. There is an oil-pressure indicator on the dash and a depth gauge on the left side of the engine.

Clutch Features The single-plate, dry-disc clutch engages positively, yet gently. The design is simple, adjustment seldom required. Pedal pressure is very light. The housing is ventilated. The patented self-lubricating clutch release bearing, mounted in a self-aligning trunnion throw-out yoke is of compressed baked carbon-graphite and normally lasts the life of the car.

You Gain By The Benefits of Success All these features of value, and all those others that will impress you as you go over this Oldsmobile point by point—are yours at Oldsmobile's low prices. In these features Oldsmobile returns to you the benefits of manufacturing advantages and economies, created by the greatest year in Oldsmobile history. The economies of General Motors are passed back to you. And if you please you may drive an Oldsmobile Series "E" as you pay for it from your income—on the G.M.A.C. plan of deferred payments.

Gratify Every Taste Satisfy Every Need The Oldsmobile may be had in ten body styles: the Standard Touring, $875; the DeLuxe Touring, $980; the DeLuxe Roadster, $975; the Standard Coupe, $925; the DeLuxe Coupe, $990; the Standard Coach, $950; the DeLuxe Coach, $1050; the Standard Sedan, $1025; the DeLuxe Sedan, $1125; and the Landau, $1190; all prices f. o. b. Lansing. Standard and De Luxe types are the same, except that the latter include as steel bumpers, front and rear; snubbers all around; genuine motometer with lock bar cap; rear signal lamp and other added luxuries.

FACTORS OF PROVEN WORTH

Special Design Combustion Chambers This shape gives greater turbulence to incoming gases, producing smooth and spirited performance and is a modern development of General Motors Research Laboratories.

Two-Way Cooling Oldsmobile offers "two-way" cooling which incorporates the best features of the two accepted types—pressure and thermo-siphon cooling. At the points where greatest heat is generated—around the valves, valve seats, spark plugs and combustion chambers — pressure-circulated water is driven through a manifold type passage. Cylinder walls do not heat so rapidly. A full flow of cooling water would cool them too much. Therefore the circulation is restricted and retarded. In other words, parts at the points of greatest heat are cooled by the pressure method of circulation, while the slower thermo-siphon type of action, in which the rate of circulation is largely governed by the reaction of heat upon the water, maintains about the cylinders sufficient warmth for efficient operation. This also aids in eliminating crankcase dilution. All deluxe types are equipped with thermostat cooling control.

High Velocity Hot Section Manifold The manifold retains the high velocity given the incoming gases as they leave the carburetor and pass on into the combustion chambers. To further promote complete vaporization of the incoming fuel, jacketing of the intake manifold by the heated exhaust manifold is effected in the vertical section of the intake passage above the carburetor. The intake manifold being above the exhaust manifold, and heated by it, retains the highly explosive state of incoming gases.

Double Valve Springs The double valve springs, similar to those employed in aircraft and racing car engines, together with the "quieting-curve" contour of cams, result in positive valve action. Valve lifters rotate while in action, minimizing noise and wear.

Silent Timing Chain Camshaft and generator are driven off crankshaft by a silent chain, operating in a constant flow of oil.

Double-Offset Low Gravity Frame This design provides parallel mounting of springs for greatest roadability. The frame is 28 inches wide in front, providing short turning radius, and 42 inches wide at rear for proper mounting. There are four strong cross-members, the front member tubular for extra strength and best engine mounting, the rear 14 inches wide for strength at point of greatest stress. Cross-members are strongly welded and gusseted to frame side rails. The frame is "kicked-up" over rear axle to provide low gravity, easy riding and ability to hold the road.

Interior Features The mohair upholstery of a taupe shade in all closed body types has exceptional lustre and wearing quality. The satin nickel fittings are of rich, period design. Their beauty is but one feature, their utility another. The quick-acting window lifts, large interior door handles, ash receptacle in five-passenger closed types, VV windshield, automatic windshield cleaners on closed cars, instruments unit-grouped in walnut panel centered on instrument board, walnut steering wheel, heavy rug and rubber mat, genuine leather upholstery in open cars, deep spring-cushioned seats at angles of greatest ease and many other features.

Fisher Two-Tone Duco Bodies . . Chromium Plating The Fisher bodies are finished in lustrous two-tone Duco, polished to a finish distinctively beautiful yet in conservative good taste. They are of the reliable composite construction of steel sheathing on a strong hardwood frame with joints that are mortise-wedged, glued, screwed, bolted and given extra strength at principal points by steel braces. The radiator is finished in the new permanent-lustre chromium, exclusively Oldsmobile's.

Twin-Beam Lights Controlled from Steering Wheel Head lamps have double filament bulbs, one for "bright," one for "dim." On "dim" the light is bright and projects at a downward angle that gives ample vision to the Oldsmobile driver yet protects oncoming drivers and conforms to all state laws. Headlights are operated by a neat lever, like the hand throttle, on the steering wheel. It may be operated without removing hands from wheel, slowing down or taking eyes from road.

Instruments Indirectly Illuminated Soft indirect lighting individually illuminates each instrument without glare or reflection in driver's eyes.

Instrument Panel Fuel Gauge A reliable instrument board fuel gauge is standard on all Oldsmobiles.

Thief-Proof Car Lock A new thief-proof car lock is a feature. The engine cannot be started with key left in lock. Turning off ignition positively locks the car. This is an entirely new and exclusive method of positive locking. Thieves cannot "cut over" as on other locks, for switch and coil are built integral in a vault-like steel housing. A non-locking "temperary stop" position is provided.

Thermostatic Charging Control When on the road there is a sense of security in knowing that your electrical system is functioning properly and your generator giving an adequate charge. Oldsmobile has thermostatic control on the generator that automatically increases charging when the engine is cold and decreases it as the temperature rises. Spark control is full automatic.

CHRYSLER STARTS NEW BODY FASHIONS

With their new appearance, new smartness, new comfort, new richness of upholstery and fittings, the Chrysler "70" cars now on display at the annual automobile show, apparently will inaugurate distinctly new vogues in automobile body designing, judging from the comment of show visitors.

Innovations are evident in all the various body types shown in this model. Even the Chrysler "70" roadster, which was the leader of the revived popularity for the open car when it created a sensation on its original presentation, has its novelties this year in the form of long grained leather upholstery in striking color combinations to harmonize with body colors, the latter also setting a new style in that body color is used on the running board splash guard. Leather hinged seat backs, which move with the occupants' bodies and add much to riding ease, offer still another novelty in the roadster.

The smart brougham, with its trunk and two door roominess; the fleet new coupe and the two sedans—the graceful Royal and the Crown, "the finest of the line"—all the closed cars of the new, finer Chrysler "70" model this year present that swagger air of snappy alertness conferred by the new military front and the cadet visor which has attracted general admiration.

SERVICE MANAGERS HOLD MEETING

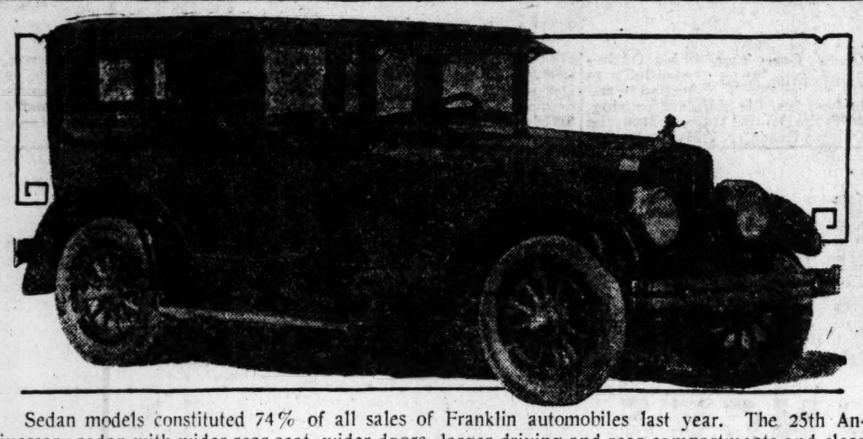

During the past week, both the Atlanta Automobile Sales Managers' association, and the Atlanta Automobile Service Managers' association, held general membership meetings, which were largely attended by their respective members, at which time plans were enthusiastically laid for the year 1927.

The sales managers were addressed by Kendall Weisiger, of the Southern Bell Telephone company, on the subject of "Some Principles Involved in the Proper Selection of Men for Business." Mr. Weisiger is an expert on this subject, having had many years practical training and experience along this line, and his message was received most enthusiastically by the sales managers.

The service managers were addressed by H. W. Robinson, on "Rear Axle Noise"; by A. W. Andrews on "Adjustment Policy on New Cars," and by J. W. Riser and C. G. Bayne on "Service Publicity," after which a round-table discussion was held by the members.

These two associations were organized about three months ago, by the Atlanta Automobile association, and the active secretarial work is being handled by the executive offices of the Atlanta Automobile association. Already these two subsidiary organizations have accomplished a great deal of good, and splendid results are expected for 1927.

Most Popular Type in 25th Anniversary Franklin Line

Sedan models constituted 74% of all sales of Franklin automobiles last year. The 25th Anniversary sedan with wider rear seat, wider doors, larger driving and rear compartments and clear vision front, bids fair to outdistance all previous records.

With a new performance in power, speed, and smoothness, together with enhanced riding ease and roominess, the series 11 Franklin reaches its climax in the twenty-fifth anniversary car now making its first bow to the public at the automobile show.

That the twenty-fifth anniversary Franklin is much roomier is apparent at a glance. Bodies are longer and wider. In the sedan for example, two inches have been added to the width of the rear seat and two inches to the length of the rear compartment. The amount of leg room and seat room is now unusually generous. The pitch of the front seats has been slightly changed to give added comfort, and the instrument board has been moved forward two inches, thus assuring ample knee-room to even the tallest passenger. Both front and rear doors have been widened 1 1-2 inches and now open at the unusually wide angle of 78 degrees, giving noticeable ease of entrance to the front and rear compartments. A widening of the distance between the gear shift lever and the seat makes access to the driver's position easier from the right hand door. Securing this increase in roominess without any appreciable increase in weight is regarded by engineers as an unusual accomplishment.

The Franklin, always noted for its riding comfort, has made even further advance in this direction in the twenty-fifth anniversary car. A notable improvement is the new 6-inch tires, which due to the Frank's very light unsprung weight, carry an inflation of only 28 pounds both front and rear. The combination of large size tires and unusually low inflation results, of course, in greater riding comfort and increased tire life. Driving fatigue is also noticeably minimized by the snubbing of road shocks before reaching the steering apparatus.

Another feature which characterizes this latest Franklin is the fact that the clear vision feature originated by Franklin and first introduced in the couple, is now incorporated in every closed body in the line, including the sedan, limousine and sport sedan as well as the coupe. The trim narrow pillars not only add to appearance, but also make driving more safe by eliminating the "blind spots" which go with the wide pillars commonly used. Franklin's pioneering of the clear vision feature has brought to the Franking company numerous letters of recommendation from public safety officials and traffic authorities in various parts of the country.

The series 11 motor, previously incorporating a formidable list of features for minimizing vibration, has been made even more smooth by the use of a new and larger crankshaft measuring 2 3-8 inches at the main bearings and 2 1-8 inches at the pins. This smoothness is noticeable throughout the entire speed range. Even when the car is being driven with wide open throttle, the same freedom from vibration is apparent as at the lower speed ranges. There is no sensation of engine strain—no head roars—no difficulty of conversation.

The advance in power of the twenty-fifth anniversary Franklin is revealed especially in increased "pick-up," which has been made possible by a new design of intake manifold and enlargement of the intake line including the fuel transformer and carburetor. Acceleration in the touring range between 35 and 50 miles an hour has been appreciably quickened. Rapid acceleration at city traffic speeds, that is, from 5 to 25 miles per hour, has been one of the salient characteristics of the series 11 since its introduction. That Franklin engineers have been able to achieve from year to year a pronounced increase in power without increasing either bore or stroke and without appreciably sacrificing gasoline economy, is considered a tribute to engineering efficiency. In the latest design, a maximum of 10 per cent has been added to developed horsepower with no charge in the size of the engine.

The twenty-fifth anniversary Franklin sets up new standards in the matter of easy steering, so necessary in these days of balloon tires. This has been accomplished in the Franklin now being exhibited by the use of counter-weighted wheels, which give extreme steadiness at high speeds. Ease of steering has been promoted also by the use of ball bearings in the front axle steering yoke a construction that provides free turning when in parking position and prevents stiff steering incident to wet road conditions.

Cold weather operation is made appreciably easier by the use of a new and improved manifold design which secures a markedly even distribution of the gasoline mixture. Even in the most severe weather, the engine will start easily by the use of the electric primer without any liquid gasoline finding its way into the cylinders. A choke is provided for emergency use. Quick warming up is further assisted by hood grille shutters.

Among the other improvements that have been incorporated in the twenty-fifth anniversary Franklin are new light-colored shadow stripe broadcloth upholstery, twin beam lenses, improved stabilator attachment, a rubber battery box, combination cigar lighter and inspection lamp, a crankcase ventilator and various changes in bearing surfaces and dimensions calculated to produce long life. In all, these improvements—nearly 100 in number—add considerably to the reputation already established for the series 11, for which reason Franklin has applied to its latest product the slogan, "A great car made greater."

The twenty-fifth anniversary Franklin affords a wide choice of bodies in regular production including sedan in three types, coupe in two types, touring, runabout, Victoria, enclosed-drive limousine and the new Tandem sport. This latter model, only 65 inches from roof to ground and with a distinctly European appearance, is the feature of the Franklin exhibit at the New York automobile show where it is being presented for the first time. A full line of custom bodies built by de Causse is also offered.

PERSIAN DECORATIONS FOR CHICAGO SHOW

Chicago, January 8.—After exhaustive research and considerable expense, decorations, Persian in motif, have been prepared for the twenty-seventh annual national automobile show to be held in the Coliseum, Chicago, January 29 to February 5, under the auspices of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, Inc.

Manager Samuel A. Miles and members of the show committee promise the most ornate setting in the history of the exposition. The decorations are in the hands of an army of scenic painters under the direction of Samuel Asch, noted exposition decorator, who provided the artistic dress for last year's show.

Persian effects were decided on after a historical examination as to the origin of practical transportation which dates back from the time of King Darius. The Persians not only developed vehicles to a practical point for war pursuits, but also in their domestic and agricultural life.

The entire dome of the Coliseum will be covered with 15,000 yards of Persian gold cloth and other fabricated materials in Persian design. At both ends of the Coliseum will be portrayed in giant figures the war and peaceful pursuits of the early Persians.

King Darius will be shown in his famous chariot at one end of the huge exposition building, while the typical chariots used and the lion hunt will be pictured at the other end.

The balconies of the Coliseum will be so reconstructed as to give the effect of the great colonnade of King Darius within the court of his palace, looking out upon the broad horizon. The outdoor motif will even be carried to the annex and adjoining buildings, making this the most luxurious decorations ever attempted for the national automobile show.

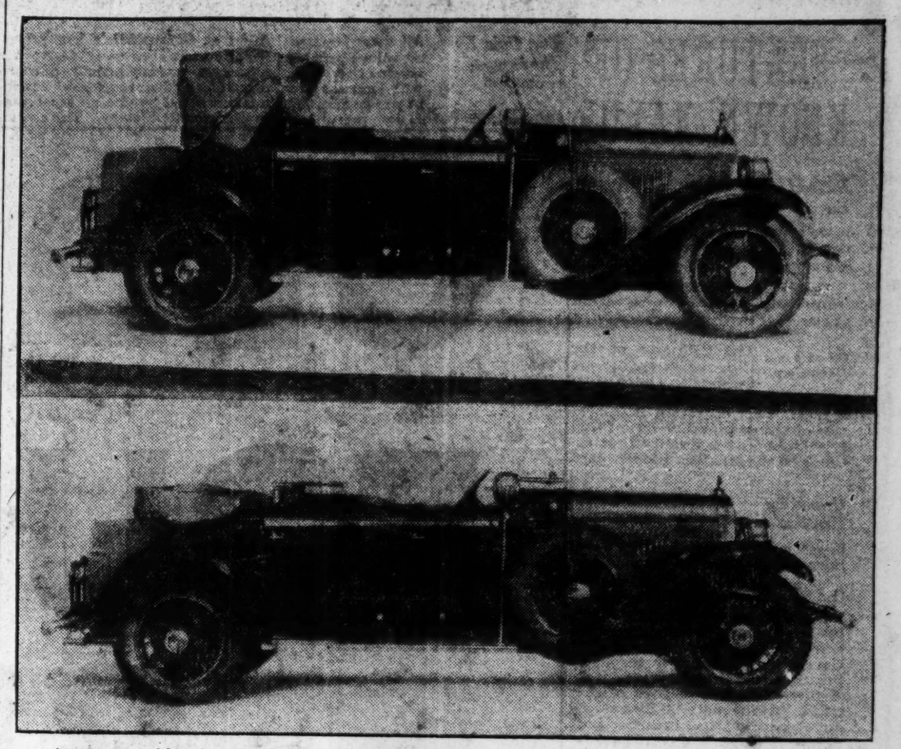

Visitors will not only see the largest automobile show in history, but also the most marvelous scenic display ever offered.

Forty-one manufacturers will show more than 300 cars, while nine makers of light commercial vehicles will display from two to four models each of their latest designs. Two exhibitors will show taxicabs.

Shop equipment and light motor trucks constitute two entirely new sections this year. In the former section will be shown modern machines, devices and materials for service shops, garages and repair shops. The accessory and parts exhibits will be a complete display, with approximately 150 manufacturers, jobbers and dealers showing the newest things in these lines.

During the week of the show, January 31 and February 1, will be known as Trade days. The sessions will last from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. each day.

Cadillac Feature at New York Show

A rare combination of daring smartness with ultra-exclusive refinement is produced in the black and silver leaf color scheme, the polished steel hood, the double cowl and tonneau windshield and the Victoria style top over the rear seat only of this Cadillac special custom-built sport phaeton. The car is creating a sensation at auomobile shows and replicas are being built for exhibition in leading cities in Europe and South America.

Georgians Are Winners In Motor Oil Contest Staged by Wofford Firm

A little thought about Woco Pep or Tiolene motor oil, written down and mailed to the Wofford Oil company, made a number of Georgia folks $5 richer this month. Checks have gone forward to the fortunate authors of the Woco-Pepgrams recently selected.

A. V. Armstrong, won one of the awards with a clever verse and a cartoon that illustrated the verse. He showed the picture of an irate individual pouring hot water over his engine to get it started and advised motorists in his verse to use Woco Pep on cold mornings to save themselves from this trouble.

J. J. Jones, of Columbus, was another winner. His offering extolled the merits of Tiolene motor oil. Other awards were made to C. R. Waller, of Atlanta, and F. I. Weed, of Decatur.

The awards will continue, says Wiley Moore, president of the Wofford Oil company, and all users of Woco Pep and Tiolene motor oil are invited to send in their epigrams.

More than 1,500,000 square feet of floor space are being added to the present plants of the Oakland Motor Car Company at Pontiac, Michigan, which will be devoted exclusively to the manufacture of Oakland and Pontiac Sixes.

$15,000,000 more
to Meet the demand for Oakland and Pontiac Sixes

Scarcely twelve months ago Oakland was only one of many manufacturers striving for preeminence. Today it ranks among the largest builders of motor cars in the world. Responsible for this tremendous growth have been a continuous series of triumphs resulting in a record-breaking 212% increase in business over 1925.

212% Increase
1925 Production . . 43,018
1926 Production . . 134,089
Oakland and Pontiac Sixes

With the advent of the past year, came the introduction of the Pontiac Six. So great was the demand it created, that in six months Pontiac Six production had exceeded the greatest full year record previously scored by a new make of car. And by the end of the year, with Pontiac production reaching 76,523 cars, that record had been surpassed by more than 100%! In July came the Greater Oakland Six with 77 refinements, featured by that epochal engineering development—the Rubber-Silenced Chassis. Again America paid a wholehearted tribute to Oakland engineering vision. And again, in every section of the land, Oakland sales leaped upward, necessitating the unprecedented production of 57,566 Oakland Sixes—nearly 15,000 more than in 1925—and surpassing any previous record in Oakland's twenty year history.

Now, with its position securely established, Oakland-Pontiac bids for new and greater heights—for over fifteen millions of dollars are being invested to provide for greater production.

This staggering sum—the combined cost of a new Pontiac Six plant, with a capacity of 1,000 cars a day and of important expansions in the facilities devoted to the manufacture of Oakland Sixes—definitely assures Oakland-Pontiac buyers of even greater value in the future. For it makes possible the employment of even more efficient methods of production—even greater precision in construction—even more exacting standards in the never-ending inspections which govern every phase of Oakland-Pontiac manufacture and which have been so instrumental in achieving worldwide good will for these two quality Sixes.

In the strictest sense, this huge investment represents more than an expression of confidence by General Motors in Oakland principles of design, manufacture and distribution.

It stands as a tangible pledge to the public at large that in fundamental goodness and fundamental value Oakland Six and Pontiac Six will continue supreme in their fields!

Pontiac Six, $825 to $975. Oakland Six, companion to Pontiac Six, $1025 to $1295. All prices at factory. Bodies by Fisher. Easy to pay on the liberal General Motors Time Payment Plan.

NEW SALES RECORD MADE BY N. Y. DEALER

Sells $1,500,000 in Hupmobile Cars in Ten Minutes.

New York, January 8.—The tremendous scope on which the automotive industry is now operating was forcibly indicated during the New York Automobile Show, when in ten minutes T. B. Van Alstyne, New York Hupmobile distributor, sold $1,500,000 worth of Hupmobile Sixes and Eights for immediate delivery to his dealer organization. This is believed to constitute a world record in the merchandising of motor cars.

Dealers under the Van Alstyne Motor corporation gathered at its building on Broadway shortly before the New York Automobile Show opened to be given a pre-viewing of the 1927 Hupmobile line of cars and to listen to a discussion of general policies and the sales and merchandising plans under which the Hupp Motor Car corporation will operate in 1927.

Speakers include Dubois Young, president and general manager of the Hupp organization; R. S. Cole, general sales manager, and Frederick Dickinson, advertising and assistant sales manager.

The entire dealer organization was so impressed when they heard the details of the sales and advertising policies that without hesitation they placed firm, definite orders for this huge amount of business.

Included in the line-up of cars shown were three new custom built bodies by Dietrich, the widely-known custom body designer, as well as the ten standard eight cylinder body models and the five six-cylinder body models.

More than 500 persons, including Hupmobile distributors and dealers from all parts of the country, joined the 75 Van Alstyne dealer representatives in the pre-viewing and reception of the Hupp factory 1927 plans.

"The enthusiasm of distributors and dealers alike over the new factory merchandizing policies and the care was one of the most impressive exhibitions I have ever seen," said Mr. Van Alstyne at the conclusion of the meeting. "The judgment of these men is that 1927 will be by far the largest and most successful year that Hupmobile has yet known and that tens of thousands of new owners will purchase Hupmobiles during the year."

WILLYS-OVERLAND PLANS GREAT YEAR

Plans for production and sales schedules as given out by Willys-Overland officials call for a total output of units in 1927 which will be considerably greater than any point hitherto reached by that organization and 295,000 Whippet and Willys-Knight cars for domestic consumption is the goal which has been set for the next 12 months.

The largest year, in total volume of cars retailed in the United States, ever reached by this manufacturer was 1925 when 220,000 cars were made and delivered.

Domestic production for 1926 was slightly below this mark, the reason, as given by the sales department, being the change from the Overland four-cylinder model to the Whippet early in the summer.

For two months, the organization was without a product in the light four-cylinder field and the average number of deliveries of the Overland during that period would more than have offset the loss in deliveries experienced during the summer.

Sales of the Overland Six, and of the Willys-Knight Great Six, have shown a satisfactory increase over 1925 and the "70" Willys-Knight Six which was introduced in 1926 has been one of the outstanding sales successes in its field this past year.

Since deliveries have been possible on the Whippet, this new type light car has gone ahead at a rate which exceeds any performance of the Overland four-cylinder model which it replaced.

With the opening of the 1927 selling year, the Whippet type has been extended into the light six field which will give Willys-Overland a position in this sales group equivalent to the one it now occupies in the light four class.

The introduction of the Whippet brought about an activity in dealer interest which is reflected in the fact that the dealer personnel of Willys-Overland is now the largest in the history of the company and the number of new dealer contracts closed in the past six months has been greater than have ever been closed in a similar period since the very start of the organization.

During the past four years, Willys-Overland has completed its entire line of cars and has stepped into sales fields where it had no representation three years ago. The present line covers all of the four great price classes with a completely modern product, attractively priced, and possessing specific sales advantages.

The concentration which has been going on in the industry during the past few years is making it advisable for the aggressive dealer to have entry into each of the general price groups.

To carry two or more different makes of cars in order to get this entry has not proved satisfactory. Differences in sales policies, the confussion of sales promotion interests and the necessity for working under two or more different names has proved a definite sales handicap.

To maintain separate sales organizations has proved too expensive.

It is upon these facts that Willys-Overland has established its expansion program for this year, according to the sales department.

Volume in light car field for 1927 promises to be on the basis of what the car offers rather than upon what it costs regardless of what it offers.

Export sales for Willys-Overland hold promise of marked increase according to Sir William Letts managing director of Willys-Overland-Crossley, Ltd., of England, who has recently spent several weeks in this country in preparation for 1927.

The Willys-Knight line has always been a popular favorite abroad and the Whippet has been received with great enthusiasm according to his statement.

At Studebaker's Proving Ground

Twelve miles west of South Bend on the Lincoln highway a picturesque ridge rises above fertile farm lands—reminder of early glaciers. Densely wooded with stately oaks and maples, it might seem to be a natural playground, yet it is, in effect, a veritable galley rack where modern automotive science plies its whip of strain and stress to test the mettle of its products. It is the Studebaker proving ground, in which $1,000,000 has been invested.

There skilled engineers subject Studebaker cars to strenuous and searching tests. Here in endless session they prove Studebaker design and stamina under actual driving conditions, pursuing the Studebaker tradition of making good with the public by continually making better in the plant.

NEW RECORD YEAR FOR MOTOR INDUSTRY

For the 29th time in its history, the automobile business has established a new record year.

Figures made public today in the annual statistical sheet of the National Automobile chamber of commerce give a total production of 4,480,000 motor vehicles for 1926, with the wholesale value of $3,056,950,000.

The totals are slightly in advance of 1925 when production was 4,336,754 and the wholesale value was $2,977,904,833.

Only three times in its history has the motor industry failed to reach a new high total. One of these periods was in the war year of 1918, another in 1921, and the third in 1924.

The increase of 3 per cent over the total export figure of last year, the volume being 550,000 vehicles for 1927, is regarded by the motor industry as one of the most significant figures of the year. This total represents 12 per cent of the business of the automobile factories, and it is predicted that 25 per cent of production will be sold abroad within a few years.

Closed cars continue to increase in popularity, amounting to 74 per cent of the total, despite the fact that there was an excellent trade in roadsters and other open models during the year.

Motor Paying Highway Bill.

The volume of motor vehicle taxes was $735,226,000. This is close to the total expenditure for highway construction and maintenance during the year, since a part of the billion dollars spent for this purpose was financed by bond issues.

Shipment of motor products over the railroads likewise reached a new high total during the year. The number of freight carloads of automotive goods was 3,160,000.

Registration of the vehicles in the United States has reached a new high figure of 22,330,000 according to a compilation based on reports from the various states.

INDIANA TRUCK EXPANSION PROGRAM

J. W. Stephenson, president of Indiana Truck corporation, Marion, Indiana, announces A. S. Moore as vice president and general manager effective December 15, 1926. This appointment is in line with the recently adopted expansion program of the Indiana Truck corporation.

Mr. Moore is well and favorably known in the automotive industry, particularly in the truck division, having been president of the Selden Truck corporation, Rochester, N. Y., until joining the Indiana organization. Previously he had been president of the Denby Motor Truck company at Detroit and before then production manager at the Hudson Motor Car company, Detroit. After graduating from Boston Tech in general engineering and business management, Mr. Moore entered the railroad field in engineering and construction work, becoming assistant superintendent of the C. C. C. & St. L. railroad (New York Central Lines), then being connected with manufacturing and milling companies until entering the automotive field in 1919.

The Indiana Truck corporation is one of the pioneer and well-established truck companies. It has been continuously engaged in the manufacture of high grade motor trucks for 17 years and is the outgrowth of a company long engaged in business prior to that time with a continued successful record of 30 years.

J. W. Stephenson, president of the Indiana Truck corporation, will continue his active personal endeavors in connection with the corporation's business. With the appointment of Mr. Moore, it is understood that Mr. Stephenson will devote more of his time and attention to his varied business and financial interests.

The Indiana Truck corporation is offering a complete line of new trucks in both four and six cylinder models, with many changes and improvements in engineering detail and on which great attention has been paid to appearance and finish. The "Big Steve" heavy duty five tonner, which has been marketed during the past year, is an outstanding contribution to advanced engineering in heavy duty trucks.

BRIGHT BUSINESS OUTLOOK FOR 1927

BY ROY C. HAYES.

Increasing good business for the first half of 1927 is forecast by R. H. Grant, general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor company, who declared today that there is every reason to believe that the country will continue to enjoy the even prosperity that has attended general business in the last 12 months.

"There is no evidence on the industrial horizon that would indicate anything but a promising outlook for the early months of the new year," Mr. Grant declared. "Labor continues to be well employed, the national per capita wealth is the greatest on record, the agricultural outlook is improving and banks are acknowledging more cash than ever.

"The motor industry is preparing for an unusually active year. The recognized advantages of automobile ownership and the fact that today's motor car offers the greatest dollar value in the history of the industry, are giving a constant impetus to sales. As a result, production this year should compare favorably with the output of 1926.

"Replacements of old cars in the United States will require approximately 2,000,000 units in 1927. Export markets bid fair to take close to one million cars and trucks of American manufacture. New owners coming into the market in this country during the next 12 months will require a million cars or more. The addition, there is a rapidly growing tendency toward the ownership of two or more cars in the same family.

"Reports from the Chevrolet dealer and field organizations from all quarters of the United States, reflect the optimism, which we at home hold for the early new year. Acting on the belief that the year will be a highly profitable one for American business, the Chevrolet Motor company is planning a further increase over the record production of 1926, which exceeded the company's best previous performance by more than 40 per cent.

"Extended plans, which the organization has arranged for the year, are based not on enthusiasm alone, but on the well-founded conviction that the new Chevrolet car will make a very strong appeal to the public and that conditions will remain stabilized and show a steady upward movement in the first six months of 1927."

NEW BOOK BY M'MANUS RELEASED

Close-ups of the principles and policies of many of the leading producers in the automotive industry, extending over a period of 20 years, and his intimate association with those companies as adviser and advertising counsellor are given by Theodore F. MacManus in a book picturesquely called "The Sword-Arm of Business," which is just coming off the press of the Devin-Adair company, of New York.

Mr. McManus has enjoyed a broader experience and a closer contact with the leading personalities and the leading companies of the automotive industry than perhaps any other single individual. These associations have made him known to tens of thousands of motor car men throughout the country, though he has seldom been seen or heard by the general public.

A story similar to this, indicating why the principles and policies of such great organizations as Hupmobile, Cadillac, Dodge Brothers, Maxwell and Chrysler, and the Fisher Body corporation, were deliberately and definitely laid down and developed as they have been, has never been told.

Coursing through "The Sword-Arm of Business" is an underlying exposition of the ways and means through which these industrial leaders formulated business principles which have built up organizations transacting hundreds of millions of dollars of business annually, extending to every civilized country in the world.

Mr. McManus credits the motor car industry with granting to advertising "for the first time in its queer, semi-hysterical history, the opportunity to strike down to the very roots of a gigantic business—to sit beside the cradle and prescribe the nursing diet and hygiene" of the business of merchandising automobiles from their earliest day. The result, he points out, has been startling and certain in its positiveness and definiteness, and in the rapidity and soundness with which expansion has come to those business organizations subscribing to the doctrines of advertising.

It is pointed out that "The Sword-Arm of Business" is not an advertising treatise or textbook, but rather a narrative outline of the results that a certain type advertising has wrought for business organizations. As such, it is expected to appeal not only to those associated with the various phases of the merchandising of motor cars, but to men engaged in all the widely diversified phases of business.

World's Most Beautiful Ship Names New Flying Cloud Car

The racy, adventurous past, when iron men sailed the seven seas in wooden ships and the quickest way to California was the shortest road to fortune, comes to life the name of Reo's new passenger car—the "Flying Cloud."

A twentieth century romance is this tale of a group of American business men who went back to an age of thrilling deeds to find ideals for the construction of that most modern thing, a motor car.

For the American clipper ship, "Flying Cloud," launched in 1851, was the most beautiful of all the slim, white-winged vessels of her period, a new development in design. She was the fastest long-distance sailing ship under the American flag, and established record after record in repeated 16,000-mile journeys "around the Horn."

Essentially American.

The clipper ships—of which the "Flying Cloud" is the most famous—were essentially American. They were built to satisfy the demand for faster sea transportation to California when the discovery of gold in the west set men to dreaming of easy wealth. Before the clipper ships came into being, heavy, bluff-bowed, wallowing old craft had consumed 300 days in making the trip from New York to San Francisco, around Cape Horn. The Flying Cloud made this trip in 80 days, establishing a sailing record that stands today!

Clipper ships were the first major improvement in the ship design for centuries. "To clip" is an obsolete verb which means "to run or fly swiftly." Instead of ploughing through the waves, the clippers "clipped" over them. Sharp, graceful bows which cut the water, long, slim lines and new-type sails enabled the American clippers to take command of the world's commerce.

Built By Famous Shipwright.

The Flying Cloud was built by Donald McKay, famous American shipwright whose name was once the symbol of fine craftsmanship and keen judgment. The ship was 225 feet long and 40 feet, 8 inches in breadth. Her main mast was 88 feet high, and she carried skysails yards on all her masts, and lower, topmat, topgallant and royal studding sails—sails which made the Flying Cloud a marvel of fleetness, and which were later copied by English vessels.

In order to attract the attention of shippers and to secure the highest rates of freight, the clipper ships had to be handsome as well as swift. The Flying Cloud possessed her own special type of beauty and today the model of this ship is cherished as being the most beautiful type of sailing vessel ever created.

First Captain a Winner.

During her record-breaking days, the Flying Cloud was commanded by Josiah Perkins Creesy, born at Marblehead in 1814. A boyhood spent about romantic old wharves of Massachusetts bay, where the East Indiamen discharge their fragrant cargoes, gave Creesy a longing for the sea, and he became a captain at the age of 23.

Captain Creesy was in command of the Flying Cloud when she made her celebrated 89-day trip from New York to San Francisco. It was during this passage that the Flying Cloud made the fastest day's run ever recorded up to that time—463 nautical miles, which surpassed by 131 miles the best day's run ever made by an Atlantic mail steamship.

Why a New Flying Cloud?

Motor cars have received many curious names, some of which are already forgotten. The Reo Motor Car company, officials decided that, in order to live, the model name of their new motor car must express definite quality and achievement. Turning the pages of history, they came inevitably to the world's most beautiful means of travel, the clipper ships, and to the fleetest and finest of these, the Flying Cloud.

Flying Cloud symbolizes beauty, speed and endurance, superior design, repeated record performance and the best American craftsmanship. For this season, the name and image of the famous vessel were chosen for the new sedan.

INDUSTRY STRIVING FOR SAFETY DEVICES

Smaller autos and perfected safety devices have characterized the automotive development of 1926, experts say in analyzing what the dying year has brought to America's greatest industry. Of these two different lines of progress, one, the trend to smaller cars, was well established a year ago and has developed further during the past 12 months. Shorter wheel-bases and greater flexibility and engine economy are now recognized and desired characteristics. The other trend is towards safety.

The trend toward safety has included perfection of brakes, better bumpers, running boards that are in reality side bumpers, and safety glass. The last named innovation is, according to insurance men, the most significant. Investigation by a Massachusetts insurance association during the year has shown that 65 per cent of all injuries are caused by flying glass, and has called attention to the need for abolishing this condition. Manufacture in America of a long tried European type of triplex safety glass has brought about the use of this material in many passenger cars, and automobile accident insurance men predict that the day is in sight when every car will carry it as standard equipment.

A STATEMENT

By the President of Dodge Brothers, Inc.

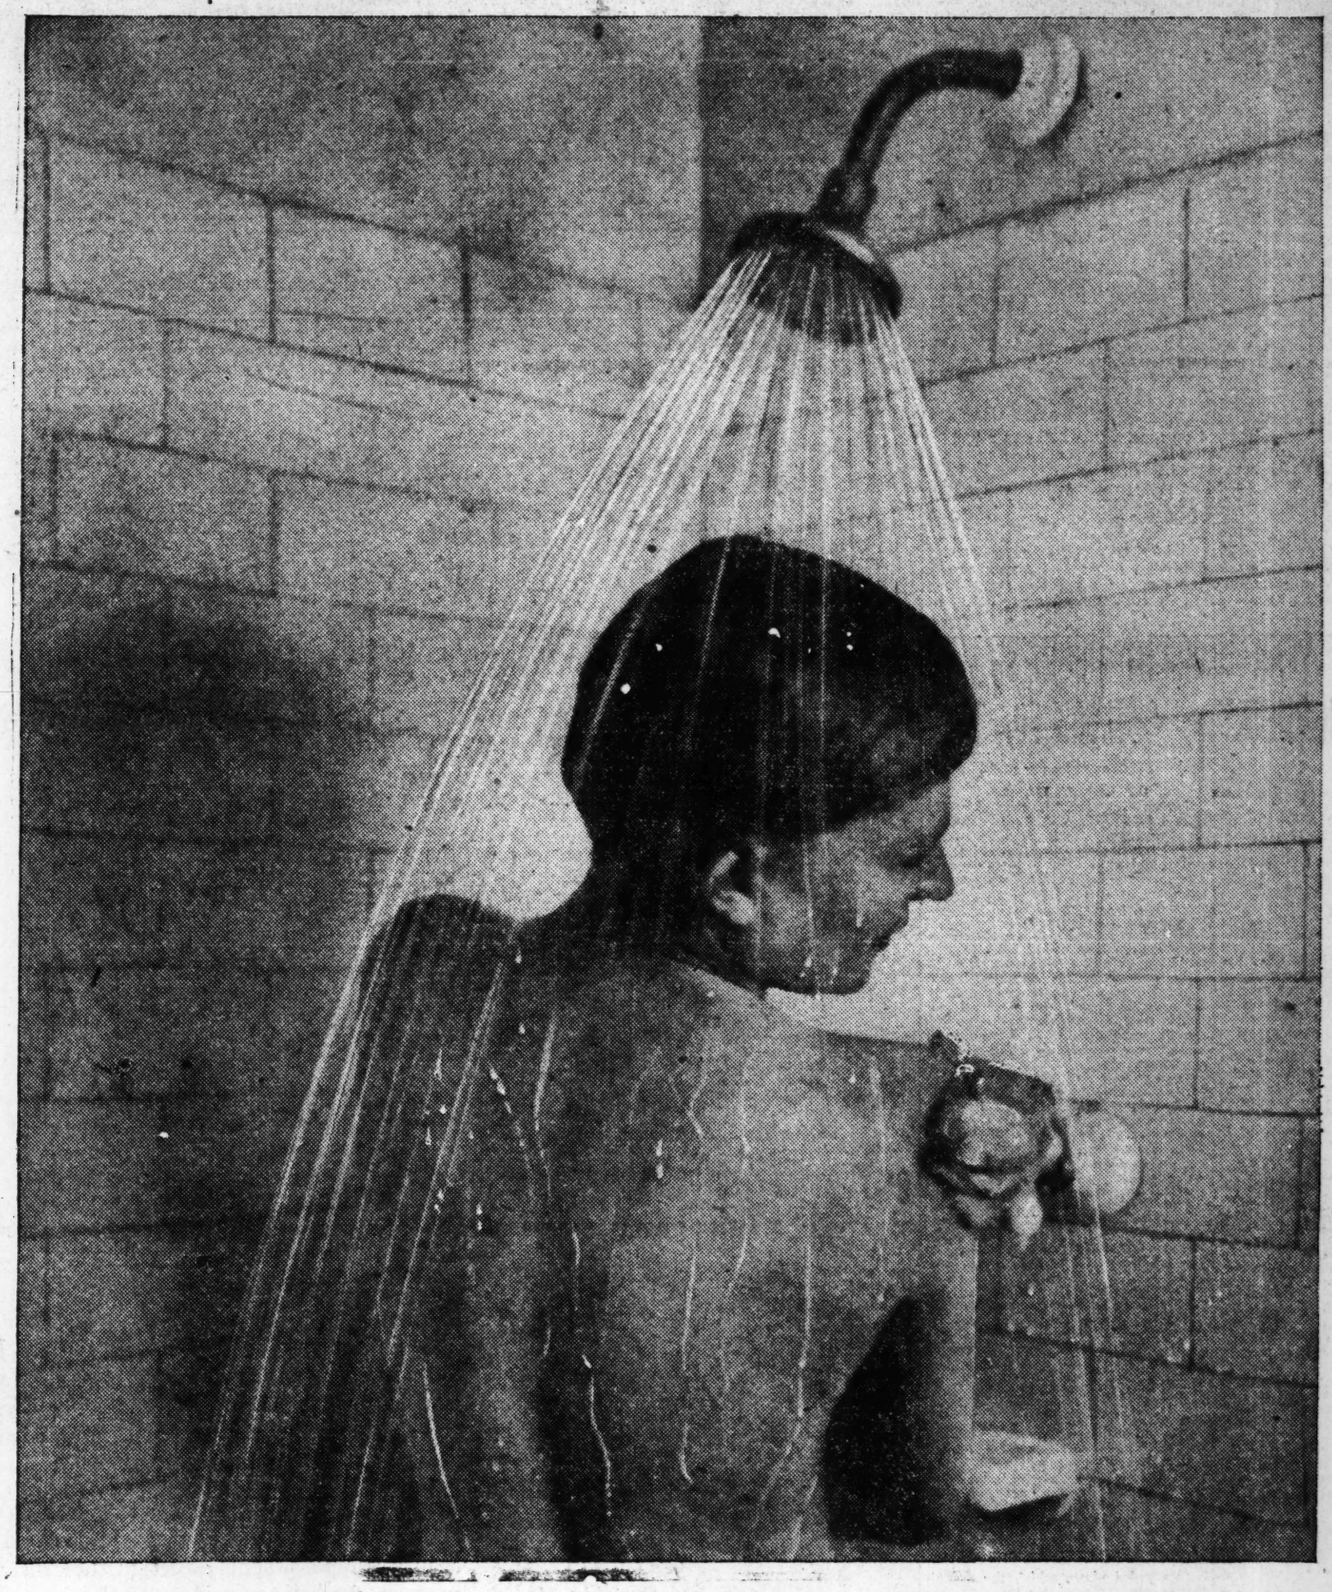

Within a few months, Dodge Brothers, Inc., will introduce a new line of motor cars, in no way conflicting with the market for Dodge Brothers present types, but occupying a considerably higher price field and produced in limited quantities.

Combining Dodge Brothers well known dependability with exceptional performance and striking beauty of appointment and design, these distinguished vehicles, we believe, will instantly set a new and higher standard in fine car practice.

Dodge Brothers will continue to produce their present line in maximum quantities to meet a demand which, during the year just ended, was very much the largest in their history, reaching the record total of 330,000 cars.

44 Years of Faithful Service and Value-giving

Who's Who in Real Estate

BY MIKE BREEN.

J. B. (Jimmie) Waddell, of the B. M. Grant company, starts the new year off in a business-like way. This action picture of Mr. Waddell catches him in the act of proffering a lease to a satisfied customer and at the same time wishing the world a happy new year, with particular reference to all in the real estate and renting circle.

Mr. Waddell is an able member of B. M. Grant's rent department, having been in the service of that widely known company three years. He came here three years ago from Arkansas with his family and became affiliated with the Grant company.

The cares of a world are on the youthful but sturdy shoulders of Jimmie Waddell. He is the man who catches the dickens on those rare occasions when some tenant becomes dissatisfied with the way the roof does or does not hold water, and other complaints, which, regardless, are familiar to the ears of all who rent places to live.

There are many things of an interesting nature about Mr. Waddell that could be revealed in these columns, but the aim of this story is not to recite his life's history nor ambitions, but merely to introduce to you one of the most popular and able young men connected with any of Atlanta's many great real estate and renting concerns.

Elliott W. Brooks, native Georgian of thorough familiarity with Atlanta real estate, recently announced the opening of a general brokerage office at 1129 Candler building under the firm name of Elliott W. Brooks company.

Prior to his opening an office for himself, Mr. Brooks was associated with Carrington and Brooks company, in the Peachtree Arcade building. He sold his interest in that concern to Mr. Carrington to build up a following under his own name. The move was made through bright prospects in Atlanta as an active real estate center, Mr. Brooks stated.

Mr. Brooks came to Atlanta in 1903 from Athens, his birthplace. Until 1923 he followed the trade of grocer, keeping an eye on real estate activities throughout that period and engaging in a considerable number of transactions. "My natural interest since coming to Atlanta has been in the realty field," Mr. Brooks remarked, adding that "the rapid developments and opportunities in Atlanta property have always served as an attraction."

Will Specialize.

While conducting a general real estate business, the new firm will specialize in the sale of homes and homesites. To render efficient service in this branch of the profession, Mr. Brooks has built up a sales force of experienced men including J. N. Cheek, T. K. Porterfield and T. C. Dean, who will supplement Mr. Brooks' wide knowledge of the business.

T. C. Dean was born close to Atlanta. His observation of Atlanta conditions from his early youth was an important factor in his successful entrance into the realty profession a year ago.

Between Mr. Porterfield and Mr. Brooks there has been a close business association for many years. Both men were formerly connected with the Morris company here, and when Mr. Brooks left to go into partnership with Mr. Carrington, Mr. Porterfield joined the organization. Mr. Brooks anticipates a prosperous future for Atlanta's development and is confident his success will be linked with it.

Forsyth and Poplar Corner Shows Growth of Atlanta

Atlanta's growth and property value enhancement is suggested in tracing the history of the northeast Forsyth and Poplar street corner, the most recent sale of which, from the Massell Realty company to the James W. English estate, was announced in The Constitution some time ago.

The property has changed hands only ten times since it was granted to Jane Doss, the original owner, in 1825. The parcel, measuring 50 feet on Forsyth street and 80 feet deep to an alley, was sold to the Atlanta Brewing and Ice company in 1905 for a consideration of $24,000. Before that time it had been in the possession of W. R. Jackson and Mrs. Sally J. Simms.

In 1922 the Atlanta Brewing and Ice company sold the property to William Candler for $200,000. Mr. Candler kept the parcel until October, 1924, when he sold it to the Massell Realty company for $300,000, having improved it with the present structure, a two-story and basement brick building. The last transaction brought a consideration of $350,000 for the property, the Massell company selling it to the English estate for the sum, and taking as part consideration property at 32-36 South Forsyth street.

DRUG STORE SOLD BY CARRINGTON FIRM

Sale of Coursey's drug business and the store lease at the Pershing Point apartments on Peachtree street, from Dr. J. L. Coursey to L. L. and A. J. Lyon was announced recently by K. W. Carrington, of Carrington & Son, who handled the transaction.

While the cash consideration in the transaction was not disclosed, it was understood it amounted to a considerable sum for this field. The Lyon brothers will continue the drug business, it was stated.

JUST A MOMENT, PLEASE

You People on the North Side—Let's get acquainted. Let me introduce you to a HOPKINS CALIFORNIA COLONIAL BUNGALOW. We are completing three on Glen Iris Drive between Angier Avenue and Wabash Avenue. Just a glance at a HOPKINS CALIFORNIA COLONIAL BUNGALOW is invariably turned to a look of prolonged admiration; with their roof of the OLD ENGLISH type and wide overhanging eaves, the well-handled brick work make our Bungalows graceful in structural lines, picturesque and substantial in appearance; they are artistic, cozy, neat and home-like. A glance at a HOPKINS CALIFORNIA COLONIAL BUNGALOW readily reveals the good taste and common sense displayed everywhere. The wise man builds for comfort and convenience, but never loses sight of economy. Every purchaser of a HOPKINS CALIFORNIA COLONIAL BUNGALOW gets the benefit of our 20 years of expert designing, planning and close study of material and construction. Every purchaser of a HOPKINS CALIFORNIA COLONIAL BUNGALOW gets the benefit of our travels all through the West, and especially California. We have spent many months in Los Angeles and vicinity; spent thousands of dollars selecting plans of bungalows erected in Hollywood, Glendale, Los Angeles and San Diego, California.

IF THIS IS BOASTING

You must excuse us. It may not sound elegant to boast of one's own work, but we can't see the philosophy in building a BETTER BUNGALOW and keeping it a SECRET. Besides, we can quote you Biblical authority against hiding one's light under a bushel. We expect to build 12 or 15 bungalows in the vicinity of Glen Iris Drive this year. Call us up and let's talk it over. Our plans are best by test. You make us a reasonable cash payment and pay us what they will rent for each month, or in other words rent one for a few years and we will give it to you. Or we will sell you a lot and build your bungalow and arrange terms. If you die in a rented house you can't blame us.

SIXTY THOUSAND SQUARE FEET

THIS is quite a large ground area; it is a corner lot, both street fronts being important thoroughfares. The price is so reasonable that we thought this large piece of ground would be useful to someone for some purpose requiring considerable area. The price averages about 22c a square foot. This will enable buyers to make a comparative value analysis. Very little land on a prominent north side street can be bought at this figure. Price includes over $2,000 worth of street paving, water, sewer and gas all laid in front of the property.

Cotton Market Is Quiet, Prices Generally Steady

New York, January 8.—(AP)—The cotton market was quiet, but generally steady today, March sold off from 12.95 to 12.88 in early trading, but recovered, closing at 12.94. The general market closed steady, at net advance of two to seven points in response to favorable reports from the English goods market and fairly steady Liverpool cables. Some southern selling and realizing was encountered on this initial upturn, and prices eased off a few points in early trading, selling down from 12.82 to 12.76 for January and from 13.14 to 13.08 for May. Offerings were light, however, and the market stiffened up again on renewed covering, while there also appeared to be a little buying on possibility that the rather unsettled weather outlook for the southwest might develop into rains over the week-end.

January sold up to 12.85, while later months rallied to about the early high price and the close was within a point or two of the best on most positions.

Private cables attributed the steadiness of Liverpool to covering and trade calling and reported an extensive inquiry for cotton cloths from India, with more business from South America, although many offers received for goods were unquotable.

The holiday in New Orleans and the usual Saturday lack of arbitrage opportunity, with Liverpool closed before the local opening, probably had a restricting effect on business here during the day.

Reviews of the domestic goods market indicated improvement in business with a continued favorable outlook for spring trade. It was considered that if textile trade developed as anticipated, spinners might soon re-enter the raw material markets.

Very little trade buying was in evidence here, however, and the bulk of the small business was attributed to the evening up of small accounts for over the week-end.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 178,000 bales against 128,000 last year.

Bradstreet's index number of commodity prices, as of January 1, 1927, seems to point to a continuance of the very small changes in monthly prices, for which the latter months of the year 1926 were notable. These minor changes in the general level may be said to have become marked in the last four or five months following the general downward trend, which, starting in December, 1925, seemed to have about run its course by August 1. Certainly, since the latter date the price level has varied very slightly up or down, and the net rise from August 1, 1926, to January 1, 1927, was only 1.3 per cent, whereas between December 1, 1925, and August 1, 1926, the price level had sunk by 12.2 per cent.

The general commodity price index, as of January 1, 1927, was $12.8195, two-tenths of 1 per cent, above the number ruling on December 1, 1926, and 1.3 per cent as already shown above, August 1, 1926, but 8.4 per cent below the level ruling on January 1, 1926. It will be seen from this that the entire decrease occurred practically in the first half of 1926, since that time prices, speaking of them as a whole, have tended slightly upward.

Compared with the low point since deflation, touched on June 1, 1921, the level of prices on January 1, this year shows an increase of 20 per cent, whereas the decrease from the peak of all recorded time, touched on February 1, 1920, is 38.5 per cent. The rise from August 1, 1914, at the outset of the great war to the present date, is 47.2 per cent.

	Feb. 1, 1920	Jan. 1, 1926	Dec. 1, 1926	Jan. 1, 1927

Market Gossip

News From Wall Street and New York Editorial Comment

(By Fenner & Beane Leased Wire to The Constitution)

BROKERS' STOCK OPINIONS.

Fenner & Beane—Indications point to better prices in a more regular market for the next few days at least.

F. B. Keech—Do not see any reason for pessimistic feeling which seems to pervade the street at present and expect higher prices.

Prince & Whitley—Indications that a definite improvement is close at hand.

Hentz—Believe extreme caution is necessary in stock commitments at this level.

Munds & Windslow—Feel confident that the sound dividend paying stocks will hold their ground and in many cases advance substantially from these levels.

CURB MARKET.

Trading on the curb exchange today was unusually active for a Saturday session and prices were generally buoyant. The feature again was Victor Talking Machine. The shares made a new record high coincident with the introduction of new "when issued" common and prior preference stock. The new common began at $38 and the prior preference shares opened 98½, subsequently crossing 97. Another favorite was Continental Oil, which was unusually active at a new high record price. Texas Pacific Land Trust sub shares introduced yesterday were less active and fractionally lower.

DOW JONES REPORT.

Continental Can Co. has purchased Seattle Can Co., thus securing a second plant on the Pacific coast. The Los Angeles Can company was purchased late last year. Continental Can's earnings in 1926 are estimated at about $7 on common. This compares with $10.81 a share in 1925. Decline in earnings was due principally to two factors —reduction in prices early in the year and a short crop of tomatoes, corn and peas.

The effect of the new Studebaker models has been decisive. Sales of the seven-passenger sedan since July have outrun all expectations.

Dealers' stocks at this time of year are lowest in history of corporation. They are 17 per cent less than a year ago, as contrasted with an estimated increase of 20 per cent for industry as a whole.

Studebaker's net profits, after all charges, including taxes for 1926, were approximately $13,000,000. This is equivalent after preferred dividends, to $6.63 a share on 1,875,000 common shares, against $8.53 a share and $7.03 a share in 1925 and 1924.

The corporation ended year in more than usual strong financial condition.

Cash on hand was approximately $15,000,000, against $11,000,000 the year before, and inventories were about one-third less than the $29,182,000 prevailing at end of 1925.

With 31 new wells completed in the Panhandle district of Texas the past week, daily average crude oil production was 137,391 barrels, decrease 7,738 barrels daily, according to field reports.

WALL STREET JOURNAL.

Scrapage of investment funds into seasoned dividend rails and industrials, which has been strikingly in evidence the last several sessions, had its logical sequel at the week-end in a spread of the buying movement to shares with greater speculative attraction. In the wake of further brisk advances in stocks like American Telephone and Atchison, urgent demand sprang up for Southern Railway, Reading, International Telephone, General Motors, Allied Chemical, National Biscuit and many other stocks with good earnings and well established dividends.

Buoyancy in stocks of this kind imparted a confident tone to price movements throughout the two hours' trading. Traders were in a better mood as a result of indications that their investment movement had some distance to go. Moreover, the weekly reviews of conditions in the business world called attention to increasing activity in many basic lines during the opening week of the year which normally appeared in marked hesitation. Consequently the atmosphere in the speculative community was more cheerful than it had been for nearly two weeks, and the stock market's improved action was well maintained to the close.

NEW YORK SUN.

Taking its cue again from the bond market, as it seemed, the stock market moved still higher in an active short session today. Profit-taking came into the bond list in the early trading and stocks marked time. Then when the selling of fixed interest securities was absorbed and the undertone grew stronger stocks also began to climb. Whether this was coincidence or simultaneously no one can say. But it is a fact that traders in common stocks have been watching bond prices more closely in the last few days than they have for many months.

Substantial gains were made by U. S. Cast Iron Pipe, Allied Chemical, Commercial Solvents, Texas Gulf, International Nickel and National Biscuit. Some profit-taking appeared in the railroad and sugar groups. American Telegraph & Telephone stocks, which professional traders almost never touch, was even more active than it was yesterday, rising 3 points to the highest price since 1903. As a grade "A" investment security, it profits perhaps more than any other issue on the list.

NEW YORK TELEGRAM.

This year is likely to witness a number of conversions of preferred stocks into debenture bonds. Large corporations wherever possible will seek to reduce share capital outstanding by that method. The idea, of course, is the saving of taxes. It is estimated that the Standard Oil of New Jersey in its recent conversion of preferred stock into debentures has saved about $750,000 annually on capital. In that connection more mergers may be effected, with underlying companies taking debentures in exchange for stock.

Rock Island was again in good demand, strength being explained by the prevailing belief that dividends will be inaugurated at the next meeting of the board.

NEW YORK EVENING POST.

Not a little mystery attaches to the current wave of buying in International Nickel, which has carried that stock upward rather sharply in the market for the week. Approximately 100,000 shares have changed ownership in the period, and while the demand heretofore had been regarded as based on the improving outlook for the company's business there are now some who believe that it holds considerably more significance. Report has been around for a day or two that one of the biggest of the steel companies is acquiring the stock with a view of absorbing the properties. Inquiry, however, fails to divulge anything of a concrete character.

REALTY FIRM TAKES NEW COMPANY NAME

Bowie Martin, Inc., is the style under which the former Guaranty Realty corporation will continue its large volume of business, it was announced Saturday by J. Bowie Martin, who has been president of the concern during its years of activity.

The concern is agent for all the property of the Whitehead Realty company and has exclusive management and renting privileges of the new Norris building on Peachtree street, which is owned and operated by the Whitehead Realty company. Mr. Martin is recognized as one of the leading real estate men of Atlanta and it is believed that the change in the concern's title is to make the association of Mr. Martin as head of it clearer, the former title not carrying any particular significance.

Accompanying the change of the firm's style is the announcement of the completion of its permanent offices on the second floor of the Norris building. During the construction of the Norris building the concern had offices in the Candler building, later moving to temporary quarters in the Norris structure. The permanent location is in a specially arranged suite, the furnishings of which has just been completed in attractive walnut finish. The suite includes a large general office with lobby and adjoining private offices. Provision has been made to take care of the steady expansion of the organization.

No alteration in the policy of the concern has been put into effect with the new title except for the general enlarging of the company's scope. During the erection of the Norris building much of the time and energy of Mr. Martin and his organization were devoted to the renting and other details connected with a new office building. With the Norris building now nearly 100 per cent filled the greater part of the efforts of the Martin organization will be turned to general real estate activity, including business and apartment house leases and insurance and loan services.

George W. Ware Company Adds to Brokerage Staff

Join George W. Ware & Co. organization. O. S. Morton, on left, and A. S. Thompson, on right, who will head business brokerage department.

A. S. Thompson and O. S. Morton, popular real estate men, have been secured for the business brokerage department of George W. Ware & Co., it was announced Saturday by George Ware, in line with the general expansion of that business.

Both men were formerly in the real estate business in Atlanta and are well acquainted with that field. Mr. Thompson, who has been put in charge of the business brokerage department as sales manager, was commercial agent for the Central of Georgia railway up to a few years ago when he entered the real estate field here. For the past two years he has followed the same trade in Tampa, Fla., coming here to join the Ware organization.

Mr. Morton was with Mr. Thompson in Tampa and brought here by Mr. Thompson to assist him in the new work. Mr. Morton is widely known to the real estate profession here, having been connected with a prominent Atlanta realty firm before going to Tampa.

Both men are well enough acquainted with Atlanta's real estate market to be confident of the encouraging activity and opportunity available, they declared. Mr. Ware, who is optimistic over the outlook for 1927, expressed keen satisfaction in having secured two able men for his steadily growing business brokerage department.

"Everything prospers in a growing city," Mr. Ware remarked, "and no city is growing faster than Atlanta is today. Those who have been here before and then return to the city can recognize that better than we who are constantly present with the growth, but it is nevertheless evident to all."

for two hours, leaving for Augusta, Ga., at 5 o'clock.

Dana Belser, president of the Atlanta board, announced that arrangements have been made to carry the entire party for a ride over Atlanta and to view Stone mountain. A reception committee of 20 of the members of the Atlanta real estate board has been appointed to meet the Louisville delegation at Union station and see that they are properly escorted. The Louisville special train will receive its party again at Stone Mountain, Ga., and will continue to Augusta, then to Charleston and Savannah and will arrive in Miami Tuesday morning, January 11.

According to advance notices received from Maurice Dunn, who has the Louisville party in charge, there will be 140 people in the crowd, 56 of these being ladies. Those of the Atlanta board who have this tour of Atlanta and Stone Mountain in charge plan to see that they are given the proper reception, every consideration, and that they enjoy their visit to Atlanta.

Mr. Hieatt will assume office at the Miami meeting and will succeed Robert Jamison, Jr., who was president for 1926.

All members of the real estate board who have been duly notified that they are members of the reception committee are requested to be at the Union station this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

W. F. STARK JOINS MORRIS COMPANY

Weldon F. Stark, well-known real estate executive, has joined the organization of F. P. and George J. Morris, it was recently announced.

WELDON F. STARK.

Mr. Stark's genial personality and business ability has gained him marked favor in real estate circles here to which he has devoted his energies for many years. Prior to his connection with the Morris organization, which began with the new year, Mr. Stark managed the real estate department of Weyman & Connors.

During his youth, Mr. Stark practiced law in Commerce, Ga., but was forced by poor health to give that up and follow the less sedentary field of traveling. Later he went into the sales end of the automobile business, coming to Atlanta to enter the wholesale distribution of Packard cars when the agency was owned by S. A. Lynch.

The opportunities of the Atlanta real estate market had attracted Mr. Stark's interests while here and when the proper opening came he determined to try his hand at it. This took him to Orlando, Fla., where he was put in charge of one of the large real estate offices.

When the S. A. Lynch Finance corporation bought Daytona Highlands, of Daytona Beach, Fla., he rejoined that organization as sales manager. There he remained until, with the opening of Weyman & Connors' new real estate department, he was brought here to manage it.

January 1, 1927, he joined the growing organization of F. P. & George J. Morris at its enlarged offices at 104-106 North Pryor street. In discussing plans for the new year, Mr. Stark stated that the Morris company will construct at least 75 medium-priced homes during the seasons. The outlined activities of the construction department are based on Atlanta's rapid growth in industries and population due to the general development of the south and Atlanta's particular wide-awake efforts.

"The Store of Dependability"

The Secret of the Perfect Table Is Correct Silver

THE attractiveness of any table depends very largely upon the arrangement of the table appointments, especially the silver. Replacing odds and ends of silver with a few pieces of solid silver of standard design and then adding additional pieces of the same pattern at convenient times will soon enable you to set your table correctly and in perfect harmony.

Kirkwood Civic League Holds January Meeting

The Kirkwood Civic league met last Tuesday with an unusually good attendance. Mrs. A. I. Branham, the president, opened the meeting with prayer and the singing of club songs. The December minutes were read and adopted and the treasurer's report filed as given. Report of the four sectional vice presidents were inspiring and reported civic improvements under way in all parts of Kirkwood and new residents moving into the city.

The department chairmen, through reports of the division chairmen, showed that the league's routine of club work is moving smoothly and in accord with the same divisions of the district and state federations. Especially were the reports from the public welfare, forestry and civic committees encouraging, showing the interest being taken in beautifying the community by converting unsightly spots into places really pleasant to look upon, and the report of nearly 200 trees, many shrubs, over 1,000 bulbs, many roses and other flowers being planted. Substantial aid to needy families was reported by Mrs. R. H. Bell. Mrs. Hess reported that the Atlanta Federation of Women's clubs, through its executive board, had unanimously indorsed the efforts of Kirkwood Civic league in trying to get the city to purchase "Sutherland" as a memorial to General John B. Gordon; also that many prominent business men were adding their names to the indorsement of clubwomen in this movement.

Miss Zula Foster, chairman of music, sponsored a musical program. She was assisted by Rev. Barnard Owen, whose contribution was a splendid rendition of Military Polonaise, by Mozart, and a double number, "The Spinning Girl," by Raff, and "The Spinning Wheel," by Zon Wilm.

Mrs. Branham announced that the league's midwinter tea would be given in connection with the regular February meeting. Mrs. Blanton Weds Capt. Dozier At Ceremony in Clayton, Ga.

One of the largest audiences ever assembled in Rabun county gathered Thursday evening, January 6, 80th birthday anniversary of the groom at 8 o'clock, in the Methodist church, to witness the wedding of Mrs. Mary Francess Blanton, of Plant City, Fla., and Captain W. T. Dozier, of Clayton. The ceremony was performed jointly by Rev. Spence, pastor of the Methodist church, and Rev. G. Briggs, pastor of the Baptist church.

A large pink wedding bell was suspended from a picturesque arched bower of vines entwined with white and pink roses, palms and greenery flanking the altar and background. Baskets of pink roses and fern were placed at intervals and the scene was overcast with a rosy glow from the pink-shaded lights.

Preceding the ceremony a program of music was rendered, Miss Helen Dover presiding at the piano, "I Love You" (Grieg), a solo by Mrs. W. S. Bearden, Schubert's "Serenade," a duet by Mrs. Bearden and Mrs. T. L. Bynum, and "I Love You Truly" (Carrie Jacobs Bond), a solo by Mrs. Bynum, comprised the delightful program. The "Bridal Chorus" from "Lohengrin," was played as the wedding party entered, and Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" was used as recessional.

Bridal Party.

Groomsmen and bride's matrons were Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Nicholson, Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Dover, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Holden, Mr. and Mrs. V. A. Green, who entered in twos from opposite aisles. Mrs. Katie Colson, matron of honor and daughter of the groom, entered next, followed by the flower maid, Miss Faye Long, who scattered rose petals in the bridal path from a pink basket adorned with white tulle. Little Miss Norine Holden, ringbearer, wore a frock of white silk chiffon and a silver band on her hair, and carried the ring in the heart of a large white lily. The bride's attendants were attired in gowns of rainbow shades, and carried corsages of varicolored flowers, tied with tulle.

The bride entered on the arm of Dozier Colson, grandson of the groom, and was met at the altar by the groom, who entered from the oppisite side with his best man, Will Smith. The bride wore a lovely silk-embroidered model of gray crepe satin, with long sleeves, gray crepe romaine finishing the collar and forming a scarf to complete the outfit. With this she wore matching accessories and carried an arm bounquet of pink rosebuds and fern, tied with pink tulle.

Informal Reception.

Immediately following the ceremony an informal reception was held at the Clayton hotel, members of the Eastern Star, Masonic order and others participating in the entertainment. Refreshments of cake and hot chocolate topped with marshmallow were served, the guests seated at a long table prettily decorated with yellow roses and ivy on a long cross formed by yellow and pink crepe paper. Streamers of yellow and pink were draped from the ceiling and the chadeliers were shaded with pink and yellow crepe fringe. Dr. J. C. Dover was master of ceremonies and called for speeches from a number of gentlemen. High tribute was paid to Captain and Mrs. Dozier, who are widely known and loved throughout the south. Captain Dozier responded with a few words of appreciation.

Mrs. Dozier comes from one of the oldest and best known families of south Florida, being the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins Wilder, who were pioneer settlers of that section. For the past few years she has made her home in Clayton during the summer months.

Captain Dozier, well known throughout Georgia, is a Confederate veteran, having joined the southern army during the civil war at the age of 15 and later being made captain. He is popularly known as a progressive and active resident of Clayton, where he has made his home since moving from Atlanta 20 years ago. He is the oldest living member of division No. 207, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and 50 years a member of Improved Order of Red Men, 20 years a Mason, 21 years an Odd Fellow. For the past 20 years he has been head of the Rabun County U. C. V.

Captain Dozier and Mrs. Dozier will make their home in Clayton, where they have many friends.

Among the out-of-town guests present at the wedding were Mrs. Katie Colson, of Atlanta; Mrs. John L. Branch and daughter, Mrs. Gerald R. Patten, of Plant City, Fla., niece and grandniece of the bride. Many other guests from surrounding counties attended.

Miss Hardman Weds Myron Reed Leard.

Athens, Ga., January 8.—The marriage of Miss Virginia Pearl Hardman and Myron Reed Leard, was solemnized at the First Methodist church on Monday, January 3, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Rev. George E. Stone performed the ceremony and the guest list was confined to close friends and relatives.

The bride is the youngest daughter of Mrs. J. W. Hardman. She is an accomplished and charming young woman, having received excellent musical training at the Lucy Cobb. She was gowned in a French model of poudre blue, beautifully embroidered, her hat and all accessories in shades to harmonize. Her corsage was made up of sweet peas and bride's roses.

Mr. Leard is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Leard, of Bowersville, and is a young man of splendid traits. He is in business in St. Petersburg, Fla., where he has a wide circle of friends to whom he will introduce his bride.

Civics Committee To Sponsor Woman's Club Meeting Monday

Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, president of the Atlanta Woman's club, makes this statement in regard to the regular meeting of the Atlanta Woman's club to be held Monday afternoon, January 10, at 3 o'clock: "The policy of the Atlanta Woman's club has always been to cooperate with any movement which is for the good of our city and the welfare of our citizens. It is our purpose this year to extend that policy by cooperating with the Atlanta advertising commission in helping to advertise our city to the world, by making it one of the most beautiful, one of the most sanitary cities in the south. The object of the meeting for Monday afternoon is to stimulate more interest in civic affairs and to discuss the means of promoting this interest; to cooperate with the authorities of our city for better parks, schools, cleaner streets and helping to make Atlanta one of the most healthful and beautiful cities —a place desirable to live in."

The work of the civic committee, of which Mrs. J. R. Little is chairman, has been an outstanding feature of the club's work for the past four months. Mrs. Little remarked that the civic department of the Atlanta Woman's club has always been considered one of the most important departments of the slub since its organization in 1895. The housewives have a great deal of responsibility because theirs is from the property line in the back to the curbing on the streets.

Mrs. Little stated that the sanitary department had just published 40,000 copies of the sanitary ordinances, the object being to reach every home and business with these ordinances, that everyone may know the law. The week following the civic week inspectors are asked to make cases against those not observing these laws, which cover the original four points the civic committee started out to accomplish—that is, first, that all garbage wagons should be covered (this has been accomplished); second, that all vacant lots should be cleared of all weeds and debris; third, that all homes and business places should be provided with the required five-gallon cans (metal and with covers); fourth, is section 1 of city ordinances, which covers loose papers, trash, trees or anything being placed on the streets. These ordinances will be available through the ward chairmen and different organizations.

The meeting Monday is an open meeting. Anyone interested in furthering this civic movement or to give reports of any objectionable conditions is invited to attend. The civic department of the Atlanta Woman's club is working with the sanitary department to assist them in securing city-wide cooperation.

Mrs. Little will be in charge of the meeting and has invited some of the most prominent men and women of our city to speak, including Mayor I. N. Ragsdale, Chief Jentzen, Chief Beavers, George West, new president of chamber of commerce, Superintendent Sutton, Mrs. R. K. Rambo and Mrs. Charles J. Foster. The honor guests will be representatives of the real estate board and the finance committee of city council.

Mrs. Mary Griffith Dobbs, chairman of music, will present Miss Dorothy Waldman, a noted musician, who will play Mendelssohn's concerto, first movement in G minor. She has had wide experience in concert work, having played in concert in ten states of the union for the past six years. She is a graduate of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music and studies music with Marcian Thalberg; theory with Dr. George Leighton; history, music, opera and composition with Ralph Lyford; composition with Edgar Stillman Kelby; repertoire with Dubhiebevitch. She has given 165 radio concerts in the north and was actively engaged during the war in orchestral and community work.

President-General's Speech As Delivered at Richmond

To the United Daughters of the Confederacy:

Some wise man hath said: "He who is firmly seated in authority, soon learns to think security and not progress, the highest lesson of statecraft." So it has been with us in the past year. Recognized as the head of this great and vital organization, it soon became evident that to think security and stability were requisite to the general welfare. Only by becoming fixed in our purpose could we hope for a healthy progress.

It soon became apparent that the value of the name of our organization, with its great influence, its power, its strength of numbers was realized by many, other than ourselves. Numbers of invitations came to us to join in the work of other organizations. In many cases we feel and do know that the thought which prompted the invitation was one of sincerity and honest admiration and was a fraternal desire for our cooperation. In the case of others it is feared that there was a thought of exploitation with nothing for the U. D. C. to gain and much to lose.

Early in the year there came a call, or it should be more properly termed a demand, that we assist with the work of a society whose structure was of so flimsy a nature, and whose use of the name Confederate was so obviously for its value, that it was discerned even by a newly elected president-general. It was exploitation pure and simple.

This was hardly declined before another of similar nature was presented; followed by a third of that type of society which has for its motto: "All receive and nothing give." Then came invitations which were more difficult to decline because as has been stated in the foregoing, they were extended with fraternal good-will, from organized bodies sincere in purpose.

Turns Down Offer.

From the Thomas Jefferson Memorial foundation with which we had cooperated and to whose work we had made a substantial contribution came the invitation to the president-general that she accept the position of honorary vice chairman of the association. In the judgment of the president-general it is unwise for her in her official capacity to serve on governing boards of other organizations or to accept appointments as honorary president or vice president or honorary vice chairman of other bodies or associations. She, therefore, declined this appointment but assured the president of the association of the interest and cooperation of the U. D. C.

In a few days was received a communication from George Allan England, of New York, stating the part he was taking in a national movement to give George Washington's boyhood home to the Boy Scouts of America as their national headquarters. Requesting that as president-general we give our approval and later requesting that we serve on the governing board.

Realizing that as president-general it was unwise and improper to indorse a movement which had not been presented to the organization for its consideration, the following letter was sent Mr. England:

"Mr. George Allan England, 135 West Seventy-Second Street, New York, N. Y.

"My Dear Mr. England: Your letter of December 22, and your request for the indorsement of your project by me as president-general has been earnestly considered by me.

"It is a matter of greatest regret to me, but I feel that as president-general, it is impossible for me to indorse anything, however pleasing it is to me, or would be, probably to the organization, until the matter has been brought before the organization. This is my view, and I have taken this stand in other matters.

"However, your project is most pleasing to me, and as an individual, if my name means anything of any value to you, you are perfectly welcome to use the following:

"There are few objects of patriotism of greater importance at this time than that of enshrining George Washington in the hearts of his countrymen, especially in the hearts of the splendid young Americans, the Boy Scouts.

"A plan to present Washington's boyhood home to these boys for their national headquarters, and, through this undertaking, to teach lessons of patriotism, would seem to appeal to all Americans. It would, indeed, be desirable for Americans to think for a while of the life and services of this great character, a man whom all sections alike, north, south, east and west, should love to honor and proclaim 'first in the hearts of his countrymen.'"

Declines Membership.

Following this came a most courteous letter from Mr. Roger Winter, secretary of the Stone Mountain Confederate Monumental association, notifying the president-general that she had been elected a member of the board of directors. For reasons above stated, it was found impossible to accept, therefore, the invitation was declined with thanks and appreciation.

There were other requests for our representation on boards of societies which purported to be of so patriotic a nature that to decline would seem to indicate to a superficial observer a lack of proper patriotism on our part. The fundamental reason for our declining being sound, we were compelled to take this stand and to take the consequences.

Should we accept these invitations from organizations, many of which we consider most worthy, and whose objects are decidedly appealing to us, we would have little, if any, time to devote to the affairs of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Should the general organization accede to all requests which are presented for cooperation with various projects, it would soon become "An Auxiliary to All Worthy Undertakings" attending to everybody's business except it's own.

It was David Starr Jordan who said that "the world stands aside to let any one pass who seems to know where he is going."

So with us, if we have our eyes fixed upon the goal, which is the attainment of those objects for which we are organized, and press toward the mark with no uncertain step, but with a purpose firm and determined our world will stand aside and let us pass, instead of placing in our way obstacles which it takes strength to remove.

Let us resolve to concentrate upon our work as defined in our articles of incorporation and let us give to all worthy objects our sympathy and friendly good will—but let us avoid all entangling alliances.

Our objects as listed are historical, benevolent, educational and social. Notwithstanding which all realize that our first consideration is the loving care of the veterans and women of the sixties.

The Confederate veteran is sacred to us. All that we do is done for his sake and to honor him and the cause he espoused.

One of the greatest pleasures left these comrades of our fathers is to meet in their annual reunions; to recount those deeds of daring fading now into the past;

"To drink a cup of kindness yet,
For the sake of auld lang syne."

When they ask us, their daughters, to help them to meet with their old comrades, let us not turn a deaf ear and point with pride at great monuments and memorials; let them not have cause to say, "My daughters, we asked for bread and you gave us a stone."

There are lonely hearts to cherish among these veterans, as the days are going by. Let us not be so busy raising funds with which to buy laurel wreaths for their biers that we fail to go around the corner and take them a rose and ask if the old wound is hurting any less today. Let us not lay up for ourselves days of anguish when we think "Inasmuch as you did it not for one of the least of these you did it not for Me."

(To Be Continued Next Sunday.)

Un Mot Ici, Est Bien

BY MRS. J. J. HARRIS, Editor Georgia Division, U. D. C.

The president-general, Mrs. St. John Lawton's report, appears in part on the page today as she gave it at Richmond. In this splendid presentation of ideas and ideals Mrs. Lawton demonstrates that our stability as to the fundamentals of our great organization is the touchstone of our progress. While the president-general has made quite clear her plans for the development of patriotic enterprise and advancement, one has really to see this wonderful woman to be able to appreciate her magnetism, her efficiency as a leader, and the undeniable charm of her personality. We are sure that the members of the Georgia division, United Daughters of the Confederacy will peruse with pleasure this interesting report from their inimitable leader.

Elberton has thrown wide the gates of hospitality and has invited the Children of the Confederacy to hold their conference in that place in April. This charming invitation was hailed with great delight for the fame of Elberton's cordiality has gone far abroad, and this event is anticipated with great enthusiasm.

Captain J. G. Cooley, of Sandersville, has had the honor of being appointed to the command of the southern brigade of Confederate Veterans. This designation confers the rank of brigadier-general of the southern brigade upon Captain Cooley, who served as a private in company G, 27th North Carolina regiment, General John R. Cook's brigade, near Petersburg, Va., during the war between the states. This well-deserved honor is quite in keeping with General Cooley's qualifications, and much gratification has been expressed over the appointment.

The O. C. Horne chapter, U. D. C., had as its guest on Thursday, Mrs. Ellison Gilmore, chairman of essays. At the afternoon meeting Mrs. Gilmore delivered a most instructive and interesting address on the new south, which was most charmingly illustrated by costumes of various periods of history. The speaker of the occasion, who is most brilliant and talented, made a round of the schools before her visit terminated in the interest of the essay work. Miss Lillie Martin, the efficient and charming president of this chapter, has carried it far toward constructive achievement and is to be commended for her outstanding talent of keeping the interest of her members ever at the highest pitch of patriotic endeavor.

Fulton County Chapter, U. D. C., Reviews Work

Fulton county chapter, U. D. C., met Thursday afternoon in the palm room of the Piedmont hotel. Mrs. C. L. Anderson, president, presided. Mrs. William M. Gordy, treasurer, made a splendid report, showing the chapter to be in a good financial condition. Mrs. H. Grady Andrews, chairman of ways and means committee, made an interesting report of her activities. The card party given recently at Mrs. Andrews' home, was quite a success. Mrs. Lomax, vice chairman of the Soldiers' Home committee, made the report on the Christmas party at the Soldiers' home, owing to the absence of the chairman, Mrs. Kendley, who is ill. A bountiful box containing fruits, candy, handkerchiefs and ties was given every veteran present. An entertaining program, arranged by Mrs. J. W. Hollingsworth, including songs and instrumental music, was given by Captain and Mrs. Williamson and their able assistants.

Complete arrangements for the exercises for Lee's birthday, January 19, at Base Hospital No. 48, were announced. One cross of honor will be presented a Confederate veteran. Nine crosses of service will be given world war veterans, some of whom are ill. Arrangements have been made with the Georgia Railway and Power company to convey all Confederate veterans to and from these exercises free. Mrs. E. B. Williams, custodian of crosses, has made all arrangements. Miss Martha Anderson, program chairman, and Miss Clestelle McNeal, chairman of entertainment, will prepare a program and refreshments.

A motion was made that a letter of congratulation and of the appreciation of his valuable assistance in every way possible to aid the chapter in the work for the Confederate veterans be sent to the new mayor, I. N. Ragsdale, and the chapter voted to do so.

Mrs. J. A. Wise, historian, spoke on the work for this year, and planned much historical work. Mrs. L. D. T. Quimby told of the progress of work on Stone Mountain memorial, which is progressing rapidly. A resolution introduced for an amendment to the constitution and by-laws of the chapter, changing the date of election of officers from December to September, was passed.

Three new names were presented for membership: Miss Susie Rosser, Mrs. C. A. Vaughn and Mrs. T. T. Weaver.

Chapter Reports

O. C. HORNE.

The December meeting of the O. C. Horne chapter proved most interesting to the large number of members who were present.

The president, Miss Lillie Martin, presided over the business session. Fine reports were given by officers and chairmen of committees, showing that splendid work had been done during the month.

Mrs. A. M. Duggan paid a beautiful tribute to Mrs. Mollie Beane, a beloved member, who has recently "crossed the bar."

After the business session, the following interesting program which was in charge of Mrs. S. M. Philips and Mrs. Alex Rice was rendered. The subject of the program was "Vivid Reminiscences of Old Plantation Life," and proved to be a real treat to all present:

"Life on the Plantation"—Mrs. N. A. Jelks.

Piano Duet—"Poet and Peasant Overture"—Misses Josephine and Caroline Fountain.

"Christmas on the Old Plantation"—Mrs. F. H. Bridges.

Quartette—"When You and I Were Young, Maggie"—Misses Effie Caldwell and Faustine Smith and Mesdames Mell Smith Knowles and J. L. Mims.

Reading—"Gone Is the Old South"—Mrs. J. J. Harvard.

Quartette—"Carry Me Back to Old Virginia"—Misses Effie Caldwell and Faustine Smith and Mesdames Mell Smith Knowles and J. L. Mims.

Mrs. Walker Jordan told in a most interesting way of incidents in her father's home during ante-bellum days and of visits at Christmas time to relatives in Virginia and of their chartering the Hotel Lanier to entertain the Virginia relatives the next Christmas.

Quite a few real "Belles of the Sixties" were present dressed in ante-bellum costumes, which added genuine pleasure to the meeting.

BRUNSWICK.

Mrs. R. E. L. Burford, Miss Lila Stallings and the Misses Ferguson were hostesses to Clement A. Evans chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy recently at the Y. W. C. A. hall. The president, Mrs. C. H. Leavy, presided.

Clement A. Evans chapter unanimously concurred in the action of the local D. A. R. chapter, in requesting the city authorities to rename the boulevard "Lanier's boulevard," and the secretary will memorialize the city commissioners to that effect. Sidney Lanier was a gallant Confederate soldier, and the U. D. C. is intensely interested in so honoring this famous poet's name.

The resignation of Mrs. W. L. Hammons as treasurer was accepted with regret and Mrs. J. H. Gilmore was unanimously elected to again fill this important post.

Mrs. C. D. Terrell, delegate to the state convention, gave a most complete report of the state meeting.

Davis Highway Arouses Interest Throughout State

Madame President and Members of the Georgia Division, U. D. C.:

During the past year a marked interest and greater activity has been demonstrated in the Jefferson Davis highway. Many chapters have contributed funds, and expressed a desire to erect permanent markers as soon as sufficient funds can be raised.

In March letters urging the permanent marking and beautifying of the highway were sent to each chapter president, and twice letters have been published in the U. D. C. department of The Atlanta Constitution.

At the request of our general chairman I secured for her a picture of the boulder erected by the chapter at Abbeville, to be used in a leaflet for the promotion of interest in the highway.

I have endeavored to cooperate with the Jefferson Davis Highway association whenever called upon, and have written a number of letters in behalf of the highway at their request.

The following chapters have contributed: Ellaville, $5; Thomaston, $5; Montezuma, $1; College Park, $5; Fort Valley, $14; Cartersville, $2.50; Quitman, $2; Jackson, $1; Dawson, $1; Dublin, $3; Monroe, 1, Douglas, $1; Decatur, $2; Marietta, $1; Elberton, $5; Madison, $1; Millen, $2; Hawkinsville, $2; Shellman, $2; Waynesboro, $1; Dalton, $14. Total $73.50.

The following is the report submitted by Mr. Gelders:

The current year has seen perhaps more activity in the promotion of the historic route through Georgia of the Jefferson Davis highway, for the reason that the allocation of extra mileage for the state and federal aid roads through Georgia, was the special program of the state highway department. Secretary I. Gelders of the Jefferson Davis Highway association presented the claims for this historic route at a meeting of the highway department at Albany and Colonel Hal Roberts, of Eastman, was the spokesman for the route at a meeting of the department at Louisville at a later date.

It is confidently expected that the members of the state highway department will add the remaining miles not now in the state system, to the same, thus completing this memorial route from Richmond to Montgomery in the highways, sharing in the federal aid projects.

Temporary markers from Augusta to Abbeville and thence to Fitzgerald and Irwinville on to the Alabama line have been put up and boulders have been placed at conspicuous points, made memorable by the temporary sojourn of Mr. Davis and his party on his journey from Richmond to the gulf, interrupted by his capture at Irwinville by federal troops. At Dublin, the Oconee chapter has placed such a boulder, the Fannie Gordon chapter of Eastman has done likewise, and at Abbeville, on the campus ground of the party, prior to its capture, the Martha McLeod chapter has also erected a boulder on the courthouse groups, facing the Jefferson Davis highway.

At Irwinville, on the land where Mr. Davis was taken in custody, the land has been deeded to the state of Georgia by its former owner, Judge J. B. Clements, and will be made an attractive park, for which the chapters in Ben Hill, Irwin and Turner counties are now cooperating. At Ashburn the Turner county chapter has placed a boulder at the intersection of the National and Davis highways, to be seen by the untold thousands of northern tourists passing this point. The entire mileage from Augusta to the Alabama line is approximately 353 miles, of which about 90 miles are not yet a part of the federal aid system.

Respectfully submitted.

CLAUDIA CULPEPPER.

Miss Delia Page Johnston Weds Dr. Hinds Roberts

The marriage of Miss Delia Page Johnston and Dr. Hinds Roberts was solemnized Saturday at high noon at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Houston Johnston, on Peachtree place. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. R. N. H. Moor, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal church, in the presence of immediate relatives and close friends.

An improvised altar of palms and ferns, starred with white pedestal baskets holding white roses and chrysanthemums was arranged at one end of the living room.

The attendants formed a tableau before the altar, the matron of honor, Mrs. George Griffin, sister of the bride, entering first. She was gowned in pink chiffon, made over a foundation of pink satin and carried a Dresden bouquet. Miss Elma Harwell, maid of honor, was gowned in green chiffon, veiling green satin, and carried a Dresden bouquet made of varicolored flowers.

Mrs. Johnston, mother of the bride, was gowned in black velvet.

After a wedding journey in Florida Dr. and Mrs. Roberts will make their home at 121 East Eighth street.

Out-of-Town Guests.

Brilliant Weddings Will Center Society's Interest

Society will renew something of the pre-holiday gayety this week in a round of brilliant weddings which will assemble large and representative gatherings of southern society. These weddings will unite some of the most prominent families of Georgia—families that have long been identified with the state's development and progress.

Tuesday evening, society will assemble in the name of lovely Miss Anne Nash Stringfellow and Preston S. Arkwright, Jr., who will plight their troth at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart P. Stringfellow, on West Fourteenth street. The ceremony will be witnessed by only the immediate relatives, and a brilliant reception, to which several hundred guests have been invited, will be given at Pinebloom, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Preston S. Arkwright.

Wednesday hosts of Atlantans will motor to Macon to be present at the marriage of Miss Eva Hall, beautiful young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pliny Hall, to Norris Broyles, of Atlanta, the wedding to be one of the most brilliant events of Macon's social season, taking place at 8 o'clock at the Christ Episcopal church. Immediately following the ceremony, the parents of the bride-elect will entertain at a large reception at their home on Georgia avenue. The lovely bride-elect will be one of the most delightful acquisitions to Atlanta society of recent years.

Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock Miss Marion Gaines, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Marion Gaines, will become the bride of William Persons Brown, of Memphis, Tenn. The ceremony will be solemnized at the Druid Hills Methodist church, after which Mr. Brown and his bride will leave for New Orleans for a wedding trip. They will be at home in Memphis after February.

Miss Richardson will return Tuesday to St. Timothy's school at Catorsville, Md., after spending the Christmas holidays with her parents.

The table was beautifully appointed. A green venetian glass set formed a central decoration. The green bowl was filled with lovely spring flowers and pink roses. Pink tapers burned in green glass candleholders.

Thirty-five guests, members of the school girl set, were invited.

Miss Martha Stanley To Wed Mr. Waggoner in February

Wide social importance is attached to the announcement made today of the engagement of Miss Martha Stanley to Thomas Reuben Waggoner, of Macon, Ga.

Miss Stanley is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lawrence Stanley, of this city, who are identified with the highest cultural and social circles in the south. Mrs. Stanley was before her marriage Miss Allison, of Virginia, whose family are among the prominent pioneers in that state. The bride-elect's father is an outstanding figure in railroad circles and one of the city's leading citizens.

Miss Stanley is the sister of Mrs. Charles Brock Hughes, of Norfolk, Va., and Bolling Stanley. The lovely young bride-elect is a graduate of Washington seminary and though she never made a formal debut she has enjoyed wide popularity and has been a popular member of the younger social contingent.

Mr. Waggoner is the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Waggoner, of Walkertown, N. C. Mrs. Waggoner was formerly Miss Barnwell, of South Carolina. Both the Waggoner and Barnwell families have been prominently identified with the development of the south and the upbuilding of the Carolinas.

The groom-elect is a graduate of the 1922 class at Duke university of North Carolina, where he was a popular member of the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity. Mr. Waggoner holds a responsible position with the Trust Company of Georgia and is located at Macon.

The marriage of Miss Stanley and Mr. Waggoner will be quietly solemnized sometime in February.

Mrs. Joseph Billups Calls Meeting Of Club Department

The regular meeting of the citizenship department of the Atlanta Woman's club will be held Wednesday morning, January 12, at 10:30 o'clock at the club. Mrs. J. P. Billups, chairman, presiding.

Mrs. R. L. Turman, class instructor, will take up lessons four, five and eight in the booklet which the class has adopted as chart or guide, which includes lessons on departments of government, executive, legislative and judiciary. Limited powers of the governor will be taken up also, as a sort of a climax to the lesson. Mrs. Turman is noted for her piquant style of address and her subtle humor, and there "is a world of fun" as well as information in store for those who attend this meeting.

Citizenship meetings are a regular feature of the club activities, and occur semi-monthly on the second and fourth Wednesdays, and are open to the entire membership. Those members who desire to do so may upon this occasion bring outside friends with them as guests.

There are general discussions at all these meetings of recent events of interest, and at this meeting a roundtable discussion of the message of the new mayor and the personnel of the committees of council will be held. As this is a question of paramount interest to all citizens, a general invitation to the public is extended.

Mrs. Billups requested every member of the committee to be in her place Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock sharp, and answer roll call by telling in her own words some recent happening with political significance. She desires to make it plain that this is not compulsory in any way, but merely adds to the interest of the occasion. New members are enrolled at each meeting, and all members of the club are invited to attend.

Calvary Epworth League Gives Party.

An enjoyable event of the past week was the Calvary Epworth League New Year watch party, which took place Friday evening, December 31, at the home of Edwin D. Eubanks, 714 Cascade avenue. The house was artistically decorated, the Christmas colors predominating. Bells, red festoons, mistletoe and holly made the home an attractive New Year scene.

The matching of the Cinderella slippers and magazine advertisements was a feature of the evening's entertainment. Various skits, stunts and contests were used as entertainment. The March of Thyme, choosing of the belle of the ball and new year resolutions, attractively arranged in holly leaves, proved interesting to the guests.

Punch and sandwiches were served during the evening.

The guests included the members of the Calvary Epworth League and their friends, numbering about 45.

'To Every Man His Work.'

No doubt appropriate New Year messages were given by pastors from many Atlanta pulpits last Sunday, and it is to be devoutly hoped that such words of cheer, encouragement and gentle counsel will prove an impetus to larger responsibility, for service and likewise devotion to duty on the part of church members.

Intensely practical as well as beautiful, was the message of Dr. Carter Helm Jones, pastor of the Second Baptist church, of this city, as it appeared on the "Pastor's page" of the church calendar. It has seemed worth while to quote here and pass on a brief paragraph from his message, which if universally observed, would so enlarge and strengthen the program of the church, that none of the strongholds of the Evil One could ever prevail against it.

Under the heading "As to Your Church Life," Dr. Jones makes a pertinent and forceful suggestion that as "The Great Captain plans the campaigns, issues the orders and leads the charges, so it is also that every man makes himself either a soldier or a shirker." Then the pastor adds, "The church vitally needs the personal cooperation of every member. Let the 'shut-in' ones think of us, love us and pray for us. Let all the others, old or young, veterans or new recruits, resolve to attend all the public meetings of the church and each find his place in the various departments of activity. Please do not wait for the pastor to 'put you to work.' Is a commander expected to interview each soldier personally before he goes into battle? The campaign is on, and God says, "Say to the people—Go forward!' "

Which are you, church member, a soldier or a shirker?

Delta Alpha Class Meets.

The Delta Alpha class of the Peachtree Christian church, founded many years ago by the late F. M. Robinson, has been growing apace these many years. John W. Crenshaw is now its teacher and a better one, when it comes to sustaining interest and presenting a clean-cut, well-prepared lesson, cannot be found anywhere. The Sunday after Christmas this class held its quarterly meeting at the Southern Christian home, maintained by the Disciples of Christ (Christians), at 1911 Cleburne avenue, Atlanta.

The writer was privileged to eat dinner at the home previous to the meeting as the guest of Miss Sue Steiner Hook, the beloved and competent superintendent of the home, and never could so many children anywhere else move so silently, eat so peacefully, say such a beautiful blessing in concert, and at the conclusion of their meal remove most unostentatiously their own dishes from the table and carry them into the kitchen.

But to revert to the meeting of the class. Delta Alpha translated means "In Friendship Serve One Another" and this is literally what this splendid organization tries to do in every possible way. The nominating committee brought in their report, electing for another year its present officers: Mrs. Edgar Craighead, president; Miss Viola Wilson, vice president; Mrs. John Kerksis, secretary, and Mrs. I. L. Lemming, treasurer. Mr. Crenshaw presented Bibles to those of the class who had not missed a single Sunday the quarter previous and who brought with them each Sunday their lesson quarterlies. Those who were so honored were Mrs. Cecil Stockard, Mrs. Elizabeth Robinson, Mrs. I. L. Lemming, Mrs. Norris C. Weems, Mrs. John Kerksis and Miss Lora B. Cunningham.

This class again voted to continue the good work begun last year of paying the board and spending money of a young theological student of Atlanta, from whom they are expecting big things in later years. This is merely in the nature of a loan and when fully returned will be expended in some good way to give someone else a helping hand who richly deserves it.

School Bag Gospel League.

What appears to be an excellent method of placing portions of the Scriptures in the hands of young people with an encouragement to read them, is being accomplished through a comparatively new organization, the School Bag Gospel League, which has its headquarters at 113 Fulton street, New York city.

The origin of "The School Bag Gospel League" furnishes a most interesting story, all of which gives proof to the fact that children are hungry for the Word of God. This brings to mind our Lord's admonition to those who might cause one of His little ones to stumble, as recorded in the sixth verse of the 18th chapter of St. Mathew's Gospel.

Should there not be a branch of the School Bag Gospel League in Atlanta? It might be introduced with good results.

National Officer To Speak to Local Episcopal Women

Episcopal church women in the diocese of Atlanta are looking forward with keen interest to a visit from Miss Laura Boyer, national educational secretary of the woman's auxiliary to the national council.

Word has been received through Miss Theo Tinsley, Macon diocesan educational secretary, that Miss Boyer will be in Atlanta January 31 and February 1, during which time she will give several talks to the Episcopal women and their friends.

The work of this educational secretary is of outstanding value, for through her creative ability both as a writer and a constructive worker, Miss Boyer has proved herself to be a real asset in the national organization of the Episcopal church in America.

It is needless to say that from this visit members of the woman's auxiliary and the junior auxiliary, only recently organized, will gather knowledge as well as inspiration; so the Episcopal editor of the federated church page would urge a large attendance at these meetings, announcement of which will be made later.

All Saints' Church Woman's Auxiliary.

The annual meeting of All Saints' church branch of the Woman's Auxiliary to the national council was held in All Saints' chapel Monday, January 3, with the president, Mrs. John Gilmore, in the chair.

As is its custom the meeting was opened with a devotional service led by the rector, Rev. W. W. Memminger.

Reports of the year's work covering a vast field of service were most gratifying.

Through the generosity of Mrs. John F. MacDonald in giving the auxiliary the Nellie Peters Black scholarship to the Sewanee Summer school, the president, Mrs. Gilmore, was enabled to add to her knowledge of auxiliary work. Her enthusiasm and wise leadership guided the auxiliary to bigger and better work than ever before accomplished.

This branch has been most fortunte in bringing to Atlanta Miss Laura F. Boyer, of the national board, who will speak to the women of the diocese January 31 and February 1.

Mrs. A. H. Sterne, chairman of the nominating committee, presented the recommendations of her committee, which resulted in the unanimous election of the following officers for 1927: President, Mrs. Frank L. Woodruff; vice president, Mrs. John F. Macdougald; secretary, Mrs. W. S. Thompson; treasurer, Mrs. Rupert Horton; custodian of the united thank offering, Mrs. Dunbar Roy.

(Signed) MRS. LE ROY HATFIELD, Secretary.

Young Matron's Circle Is Entertained.

Mrs. George C. Edmondson, Mrs. John C. Lane and Mrs. Olivia P. Black were hostesses to the Young Matron's circle No. 8 of the Peachtree Christian church at the home of Mrs. Edmondson on Briarcliff place, Tuesday at a spend-the-day party. Luncheon was served at individual tables at 12:30 o'clock, at the conclusion of which the chairman, Mrs. Frank Rosier, presided at the business session.

The guests included Mrs. J. H. Alexander, Mrs. J. A. Bloodworth, Mrs. Fred Cotton, Mrs. Victor B. Clarke, Mrs. Roy A. Ford, Mrs. Carroll Hicks, Mrs. Tom M. Johnson, Mrs. David C. Kelly, Mrs. John Kerksis, Mrs. Paul McCash, Mrs. John L. McDougal, Mrs. Raymond H. O'Kelley, Mrs. A. C. Rawlins, Mrs. Frank H. Rosier, Mrs. J. Lloyd Sanders, Mrs. Albert H. Summers, Mrs. J. F. Welch, Mrs. D. A. H. Walker, Mrs. F. C. Groover, Mrs. Lyman L. Smith, Mrs. H. Douglas Couts, Mrs. W. G. Griffin, Mrs. Raymond Rutledge, Miss Carolyn Montgomery, Mrs. Lane, Mrs. Black and Mrs. Edmondson.

Interests Children In Mission Study.

Mrs. W. P. Dozier, superintendent of the Junior Missionary society, of the Shiloh Methodist church, near Thomson, Ga., has a most original and unique way of making mission study attractive to the children of her society.

Recently Mrs. Dozier had all the girls of the group to spend the week-end in her home and during their stay mission study was one feature of the entertainment. At another time, some time later, she entertained the boys of the group in the same manner. As a result of this interesting way of presenting the required study, the attendance and payment of dues was increased to an amount that enables this society to be on the honor roll for the year.

Safety Council Asks Cooperation.

May we not ask the women of the federated page to cooperate with the safety council in appealing to the public to be more considerate of life, of right to others, however humble their sphere?

A little of the milk of human kindness would make the new year brighter and happier for all. Below is an extract from a letter from the safety council that points to what end Atlanta is racing.

MRS. T. L. LEWIS.

"Accidents in 1926 cost Atlanta about $2,000,000, untold pain and suffering and heartache. We know that 90 per cent of all accidents can be prevented—that the socalled 'unavoidable' accident is an excuse for carelessness and inefficiency. Is 90 per cent of $2,000,000 worth saving? Are pain and suffering and heartache worth preventing?

"We wish you a safe new year!

"ATLANTA SAFETY COUNCIL."

New Methodist Editor

MRS. ARTHUR HALE.

Mrs. Arthur Hale, who has been nominated to succeed Mrs. Wallace Rogers as Methodist editor for the Federated Church Women of Georgia, is well known to many for her efficiency as a leader in church work and is lovd by a large circle of friends in old Walker Street church and Park Street church, where she was worked since early girlhood.

She is president of the old Walker Street club, is vice president of the Park Street Missionary society, which she served as president formerly in a most acceptable manner. She is teacher of the mothers' class of her Sunday school, one of the most active organizations of its kind in the city, and is vice chairman of her missionary circle.

Her position as hostess at the Wren's Nest gives her a touch with persons from all parts of the city and state and many who visit the city beside the members of the Uncle Remus association.

Mrs. Hale takes charge of the Methodist news for the page this week and all publicity chairmen of Methodist organizations are urged to get in touch with her as early as possible. She has been a member of the board for the past year and is already familiar with the work, and all who know her have reason to expect the page to carry a new interest during her term of office as the Methodist editor.

After Dorothy's trousseau was completed and her passport arranged for, she was given a reception just as a real girl would have had. Mrs. H. C. Chatham gave a reading, "Christmas Welcome."

Briefly Told

Mrs. James D. Rhodes, of the Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church, was the principal speaker at the meeting of the Woman's society of the Peachtree Christian church last Monday. It was indeed a treat for the women of this fine organization to have with them such a well-known, spiritually minded woman of another large church in the city and another opportunity to know and love members of fellow communions better and more understandingly.

On the night of Monday, January 10, a buffet supper, served by Mrs. John A. Perdue and a capable committee will be given the newly-elected members of the official board of the Peachtree Christian church and their wives. Seventy-three of the best the church affords compose the board and this will give everyone a fine opportunity to learn to know each other and to enjoy an evening of good fellowship and good cheer together.

Mrs. Myra Haygood Boynton has been placed on the Book of Remembrance in the Bennett Memorial building of Scarritt college, the honor having been paid her by her daughter, Mrs. Fred Cole, Sr. Mrs. Boynton is the sister of Miss Laura Haygood, a pioneer missionary to China, and is one of the charter members of Trinity Methodist church where she still teaches in the Sunday school and is active in the missionary society.

Cards have been received from Miss Lois Maddux, of Kobe, Japan, bringing Christmas greetings to friends in Georgia. Miss Maddux is a Madison, Ga., girl who is working in Japan as the personal representative of the young people of north Georgia who support her.

Park Street Missionary society held the first meeting of the new year Monday, January 3, at the church. An unprecedented attendance forced the meeting to be held in the main auditorium of the church. Mrs. D. M. Therrell, reelected for the year, presided in a most gracious manner and the meeting was full of interest and enthusiasm. All the obligations for 1926 have been met and we enter into a new year with a good spirit and God-speed in the service of our King.

The Home for Incurables was assigned by the personal service chairman as personal service for the month of January. Our personal service work for the month of December was for the Immanuel mission. A large donation of fruit was carried to the mission for Christmas. The society will hold a prayer meeting each Wednesday during the month at the Home for Incurables. Visitors will be welcome.

Interesting contests were in charge of Mrs. Peeples. Prizes were awarded to the winners and refreshments were served. Each one present received a gift.

Rutledge Society Elects Officers.

The last meeting of the year 1926 for the Rutledge Methodist Missionary society was held in the home of Mrs. J. J. Davis with almost 100 per cent attendance.

An interesting number of the program was the tribute paid Mrs. Ray Wallace, the retiring president, and the presentation of a piece of silver in appreciation of her services in this office.

MRS. A. C. GIBSON, Superintendent Publicity.

Executive Board, B. W. M. U., Holds All-Day Session

There was a record attendance at the meeting of the executive board of the Georgia Baptist Woman's Missionary union, which was held at First Baptist church on Tuesday, January 4. Every member was present with the exception of Mrs. Taul White, superintendent of mission study, who was kept away by illness. It was truly a spiritual feast of Christian fellowship and inspiration.

Mrs. Paul Jones, vice president of N. C. division, led the morning devotional. The president, Mrs. W. J. Neel, brought a message on "Follow Me," stressing that we are to follow as children—not as slaves. That we are to follow in our thoughts and conduct—our interests and our prayers—this being expressed in our lives and conversation. She called to mind that last year we emphasized Bible reading; that while we wish to continue with that emphasis, and the keynote this year is "Prayer." It was suggested that each member of the board bring a copy of her favorite book on prayer for a prayer-shelf at headquarters that all might have the benefit of them. She also gave an interesting account of the annual meeting in Valdosta.

Mrs. McMahon's report for December showed a fine increase over that of last year. Total receipts for missions December, 1925, were $10,133.62. Total for December, 1926, were $19,320.40. The complete Christmas love offering last year was $16,000. So far this year it amounts to $10,076.80, but it is still coming in every day. The board all seemed to think that while the change of date of the week of prayer for foreign missions and Christmas love offering from January to December was a little disconcerting this first time, that the change was really desirable, this letting our gift to the Christ precede all other gifts or preparation for Christmas.

Bible Reading.

Mrs. Paul Etheridge, chairman of Bible reading, reported 1,177 readers with names registered and at least 150 more who have the book-marks and are reading, although not registered. She told, too, of the plan to make a "Who's Who" in B. W. M. U., the idea being to get a list of names from local presidents, through associational superintendents and divisional vice presidents, of women who are capable of filling offices, giving reasons and qualifications. This list would be most valuable to nominating committees or others seeking leaders.

Helpful messages were given by each of the divisional vice presidents, all agreeing that the change of W. M. U. year, January to January, to coincide with the Southern Baptist convention year would prove very satisfactory and is a forward step.

Mrs. Cater, of Quitman, told of an interesting recruit to our mission ranks in the person of little Anne Louise Barrs, of Quitman, who, like Samuel of old, was a child of prayer and promise. Mrs. Barr, Anne's mother, was formerly Miss Eva Bridges, of Quitman, and served for a number of years as a missionary in Persia.

The resignation of Mrs. W. S. Lawson as personal service superintendent was regretfully accepted.

Miss Julia Allen spoke enthusiastically of the young people's work, stating that just as other years had placed emphasis on Y. W. A. or G. A., this year the biggest thing would be the Royal Ambassadors. It was recommended that each association secure a man to act as athletic director for its R. A. camp.

Mrs. Frank Burney brought news of our boys and girls of the Margaret fund and asked all to contribute to the tenth anniversary fund.

Mrs. J. C. Lanier brought a message from our training school at Louisville, Ky., which made us very proud of our girls there.

It was a great pleasure to have Mrs. W. W. Stark with us again and hear her stirring appeal for a real consecration of time, talents and means that we may have a consecrated, Christian leadership.

White Cross Work.

Mrs. T. B. Smith spoke of the White Cross work, asking especially that the women of south Georgia remember the hospital in Harbin, Manchuria.

Mrs. Taul White sent her report in which she asked that especial stress be placed this year on the church school of missions and mission institutes.

Mrs. A. G. Sullivan and Mrs. J. H. Zachry, members of the publicity committee, were asked to serve alternately until the new publicity superintendent should be secured to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of Mrs. L. O. Freeman.

At the noon hour the ladies of the First church served a delightful luncheon.

Those present were: Mrs. W. J. Neel, Mrs. George Westmoreland, Mrs. J. C. Lanier, Mrs. G. S. Borders, Mrs. W. C. Tribble, Mrs. Idus Robertson, Mrs. Paul Jones, Mrs. W. G. King, Mrs. C. F. Cater, Mrs. A. F. McMahon, Mrs. Ben Thompson, Miss Julia Allen, Mrs. E. C. Laird, Mrs. R. B. Adair, Mrs. B. L. Bugg, Mrs. W. W. Stark, Mrs. T. B. Smith, Mrs. S. L. Taylor, Mrs. A. L. Cumming, Mrs. J. WHEN Miss Frances Brown sailed on a de luxe trip around the world last year, the moon greeted her at every port. She saw the bay of Naples, Jerusalem and the Taj Mahal all by moonlight!

Now it occurs to us that the moon was in league with fate! For at every port Miss Brown was also greeted by letters, cables, books and flowers, which were responsible for the beginning of a romance, culminating last Tuesday evening when the lovely recipient became Mrs. George Bache Du Bois, of Washington, and who can say that the moon did not follow the palatial liner for the express purpose of influencing the tides of love.

Just before she sailed, the lovely bride of Tuesday, visited her friends, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Watson, at their home in Washington. Mr. Du Bois, whom she had previously met at the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Watson, three years before, at the Latimer home in Abbeville, S. C., called to see her, little realizing that his interest would assume such proportions, until he knew the seven seas would separate them.

When they return to Washington from their wedding journey to New York and other eastern points, they will go direct to their own home, the bridal gift of the groom to his bride. Located at 1239 Thirtieth street, the charming house stands on the unbelievably small width of 11 feet and already it is pointed out to tourists as one of the interesting places in which the national capitol abounds. It is called Spite House!

The story runs that over a hundred years ago there was a dispute concerning the ownership of the 11-foot alley where the house stands. To prove his claim the gentleman who held the title built the house—for spite, so to speak. It is three stories high and built around a miniature rotunda with a spiral stairway, from which one can look to the top floor. A dining room and kitchen make up the first floor, while the entire second floor is given over to a long living room, with two bed rooms and a sleeping porch on the third floor. What could be more absorbingly interesting than beginning a house wifely career in such historic quarters?

With a decided appreciation for the old and valuable in furniture, Mr. Du Bois purchased with the house its entire furnishings which form a notable collection of antiques, all of which are over a hundred years old. To the rear of the house is a formal garden and by summer an inviting swimming pool will form an additional attraction.

A subtle charm, fraught with memories of historic names and faces, hangs over the neighborhood in which the house stands. Still residing nearby is Abraham Lincoln's granddaughter and his son, the late Robert Lincoln, was until his recent death a resident of that section.

Conspicuous among the elaborate and costly array of wedding gifts which attested the popularity of this young couple was a bride's book, handsomely bound in white morocco, a gift of their cousin, Miss Sally Eugenia Brown, who presents each bride in her wide and distinguished family connection with a similar gift. Contained in its pages are pictures and newspaper clippings galore, giving detailed accounts of their engagement announcement, the parties given in their honor with space reserved for the wedding. Among the pictures is one of "Cherokee," the donor's home on Peachtree road, where the marriage ceremony took place uniting these popular young people. There are also samples of material from which the bride's handsome trousseau gowns were fashioned with tiny pen sketches of the style in which each was made.

Believing implicitly in the old custom that a bride should wear something borrowed, Mrs. DuBois carried an exquisite French handkerchief beautifully embroidered in valley lilies and belonging to a close friend, Miss Jane Wilhoit, of LaGrange, who was among the out-of-town guests at the wedding. This dainty handkerchief is the handiwork of a pretty little French bride who carried it at her own wedding and later presented it to Miss Wilhoit as a parting gift when she returned to this country after several months of relief work in France following the late world war.

FIFTY years ago, in the colonial home where five generations of the bride's family had resided in the Pacolet valley in North Carolina, Thomas Theodore Ballenger married Miss Anna Garrison, considered the prettiest girl in that section.

Her wedding gown of light blue satin was fashioned with a long train, the skirt ruffled to the waist with a tight bodice and flowing sleeves completing the ensemble. There must have been a great deal of romance attached to those two who met attending school in Gowansville, N. C., when she was 13, for at 18 he claimed her as his sweetheart, declaring he would wed the lovely dark-eyed girl, whom he led to the altar eight years later.

Mrs. Ballenger was the only child of Mr. and Mrs. John Garrison, who could not bear the thought of their daughter moving far away from the family fireside so the young people went to Tryon, which was close by, and founded that little city. Mr. Ballenger engaging in the mercantile business, which he operates to this day, going up to North Carolina every month to check up on the financial end. From 1869 through 1872 the great honor of serving as state senator was bestowed upon Mr. Ballenger.

They will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary at a reception given at the very hour their marriage took place 50 golden years ago by their son, Dr. Edgar Garrison Ballenger, an eminent Atlanta physician, at the Piedmont Driving club Saturday afternoon, January 22. The invitations, lettered in gold, bear the stamp of elegant detail, and even the envelopes are addressed in gold. Receiving with these distinguished Atlantans will be their children, Dr. Ballenger, Mrs. Juliet Ballenger Moseley, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ballenger, of Hickory, N. C., and their grandchildren, Misses Mary Ballenger, Mary Moseley and Garrison Ballenger.

IF YOU KNOW your social calendar you know how important it is that society takes its flight further southward and bask in Florida sunlight before the Lenten days beginning on the 6th of March.

Down at Palm Beach Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Lynch are installed in their turreted mansion, "Casa-Linda," on North Ocean Boulevard, next to that of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Dillman (the former Mrs. Dodge), who bought the Josh Cosden estate last winter.

A perfect retiune of servants and several handsome motor cars were shipped to Palm Beach for Mr. and Mrs. Lynch, who are entertaining quite a few guests this season. Mr. and Mrs. Gus Dodd, Mrs. Annie Adair Foster, Mrs. Oscar Pappenheimer, Misses Mai O'Brien, Ruth and Dorothy Dodd and Evelyn Branch have received invitations to visit them, whilst Howard McNair and Herman Riddell went down from New York for the week-end.

Thrice weekly Mr. and Mrs. Lynch pick up an orchestra by appointment on the pier and go aboard their elegantly appointed yacht, the "Lucerne," to enjoy a concert while cruising in the crystal waters of Lake Worth. They belong to the bridge playing coterie and whether on land or sea, prefer this method of amusement above all others, provided the players are top-notchers.

WHEN the steamship Franconia weighs anchor at midnight in New York harbor next Wednesday, Mrs. C. L. Stoney, of Atlanta, will be among the passengers bound for a southern hemisphere cruise which will not bring her back to America until next June. Cold weather will be left behind and the warmer climate of the island of Jamaica in the West Indies, discovered by Christopher Columbus in 1494, and meaning the Isle of Springs, with Kingston the first port of call. Mrs. Stoney will touch her own country after passing through the canal zone at Los Angeles, proceeding therefrom to the Hawaiian Islands and visiting Honolulu, where the air is fresh as a May morning and flowers bloom the year round. The Samoan and Fiji Islands, New Zealand are next on the program, and then she will proceed to Australia, attracted by the wonderful sights afforded in Melbourne and Sydney.

Zanzibar, the largest city of South Africa, where as the old proverb says, "When you play the flute in Zanzibar all Africa, as far as the Lakes dances," and Mozambique, lying off the tiny coral island off the coast of East Africa, are the places which intrigue her most, for these remote towns seem only a part of an American's geography rather than flourishing settlements. On to Victoria Falls, where the mighty Zambesi river plunges 400 feet down into a vast chasm rent in earth's surface, an eighth wonder of the world, and over a mile wide, will claim her attention in northern Rhodesia.

Homeward bound the Franconia touches at Buenos Aires, Rio de Janerio, with Martinique, in the Windward islands of the West Indies, as the last port of call, bespeaking memories of the Empress Josephine with its touch of France and tropical setting.

MISS LINDA DONALSON, of Bainbridge, is trying out her debutante wings in Philadelphia society under the chaperonage of no less personage than her aunt, Mrs. "Beau" Thomson, the former Lute Gordon, of Atlanta. She gave an enormous dinner last week at her town house on Spruce street, in which honors were shared by Jane Snowden, another debutante, daughter of Mrs. George G. Snowden, whose home at Rosemont is something worth while for a collector of memories of the house beautiful.

The fair Miss Donalson, who is having such a gay winter in the Quaker City, is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Donalson, the latter having been Linda Gordon, Mrs. Thomson's sister, and she is a granddaughter of her father's step-mother, Mrs. John B. Donalson, who is also her mother's mother, and the former Mrs. Loulie McLendon Gordon, of Atlanta.

Now figure that out if you can!

Mrs. Thomson married into one of the oldest families in Philadelphia. She met Mr. Thomson when, as Lute Gordon, she was traveling over Europe, and their marriage took place at "Southerland," the Kirkwood home of her uncle, the late General John B. Gordon, before she was 16.

Many Atlantans have met Linda Donalson on her frequent visits to her aunt, Mrs. Ben Lee Crew, and declare she possesses all the charms which characterize the women of her family.

Biltmore Dance Will Feature 'The Greatest Show on Earth'

The circus, "The Greatest Show on Earth," will be at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel, on Friday evening, January 28, from 9 until 2 o'clock. The handsome Georgian ballroom will be the interior of the big tent with the various flags and gaily colored canopy, the sawdust on the floor and the rows of wooden circus seats on one side while on the other side there will be on display the world famous animal show of caged beasts from the jungles, a fortune teller and a magician.

There will be many special features during the evening, including a Hula Hula dance by one of Atlanta's most talented young girls, and, by the way, she is also one of the most popular members of the younger social set. Then another, a young man, known in two countries for his famous dancing will be a feature on the program, while a young Emory student known to everyone will do the black bottom.

Everyone who attends is expected to participate in any form of entertainment that may be given during the evening and the ball will be strictly a costume affair. For at a circus are there not the clowns, the fat and thin lady and man, the strong man, the bearded lady, acrobats, Siamese twins, Indians, cowboys and vendors of circus delicacies? Handsome prizes will be given for the best boy and girl costume, so put your thinking cap on now.

In the Pompeiian grill room there will be served pink lemonade, peanuts, popcorn, hot dogs, cold drinks, ice cream cones and balloons. The room will represent the outside of the tent and there will be on exhibition more of the wild jungle animals.

The ring master for all ceremonies will be a well-known college man of Georgia. Think hard now of all the college men you know at Tech, Georgia, Emory, Oglethorpe, Mercer, and guess who he is, as his identity will be kept a secret until the night of the circus.

Atlanta will have to thank the members of the 1926-27 Debutante club for bringing this to us and express their thanks by attending the ball which is their annual charity affair to be held in the Atlanta Biltmore hotel. The tickets are $3.50 a couple or stag and may be obtained from any member of the club. Proceeds from the dance will be given to the Atlanta Child's Home, which the club sponsors.

Miss Stocker and Mr. Peeples To Wed at January Ceremony

The announcement made today of the engagement of Miss Dorothy Alberta Stocker and Francis Hernandez Peeples is of outstanding social importance, the marriage to be solemnized January 15, at the home of the bride-elect's grandmother, Mrs. Gabriel Ruth Stocker, on West Peachtree street.

Miss Stocker is a daughter of the late James Madison Stocker, of Augusta, a well-known inventor and mechanical engineer. She is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. John de la Lande Stocker. Mr. Stocker, Sr., a native of Charleston, S. C., and as a member of Company B, Washington Light infantry entered the civil war at a very early age as one of the famous "Minute Men." With his family he moved to Atlanta in the early seventies and resided here until his death. In 1894 he was appointed surveyor of customs at Atlanta, by President Cleveland. Mrs. Gabrielle Ruth Stocker, his widow, who still survives him, is today one of the pioneer citizens of Atlanta, possessing brilliant intellectual qualities and universally beloved and respected.

The Stocker family lived in Charleston for four generations and was of distinguished Philadelphia and English ancestry. Miss Stocker is also a descendant of General Mansfield, of Maine, one of the early colonial commanders, and is related to many distinguished New England families.

Through her paternal grandmother she was descended from General Hans Henry Felder, who with a group of colonists from the Palatanate, settled at Orangeburg, S. C., and was later a martyr of the revolution.

Paternal Grandmother.

Mrs. Gabrielle Ruth Stocker, her paternal grandmother, was the granddaughter of George Norris, of Sycamore Hill plantation, lower St. Matthews Parish, S. C., and the daughter of James A. Parler, of Dale Hall plantation, Orangeburg district, whose forefathers together with General Hans Felder were the founders, of Orangeburg, the name of Parler being one of the most distinguished in the Palatanate extending back into the 13th century. She is a niece of the late Daniel Keating Norris, of Pendleton, S. C., founder of the famous Norris cotton mills, one of the great reform planters of South Carolina, for several terms president of the South Carolina state senate and candidate for United States senate in the early nineties. She is also a niece of George Manley Norris, present president of the Norris cotton mills, who still resides at the old family estate, Sycamore Hill, on the Camden road, leading from Charleston.

Miss Stocker's mother was Miss Ada Treadwell, daughter of John T. Treadwell, of Ashland, Ala., of a widely known and highly respected family there. Through her maternal grandmother she is a great niece of Robert Bonner, the famous writer and journalist, editor and owner of the New York Ledger, the author of "Short Sixes" and one of the greatest sportsman of his day. She is a sister of Mrs. John W. Jefferies and Miss Marguerite Stocker, Miss Carol Stocker, and the niece of Mrs. Chauncey Smith and Z. O. Stocker, of Cajeme, Mexico.

Groom's Family.

Mr. Peeples is the third son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cabaniss Peeples and a brother of Mrs. Andrew Miller Fairlie, Henry Edwin Peeples and Duncan Peeples. On both his maternal and paternal sides, the groom-elect is a representative of distinguished and aristocratic southern families. His father is one of Atlanta's leading lawyers and is a former president of the Atlanta Bar association. His mother is one of Atlanta's most beloved matrons and holds an enviable position in the city's social and cultural spheres. The late General W. S. Walker and Mrs. Walker were the maternal grandparents of the groom-to-be. General Walker graduated from the United States Military academy at West Point. In both the Mexican and Confederate wars, General Walker won recognition for his bravery and he is counted among the south's greatest heroes. The maternal grandmother of the groom-elect was a Miss Hernandez before her marriage to General Walker. She was a member of the old Spanish family by that name, who were among Florida's pioneers.

Paternal Grandfather.

The late Judge Cincinnatus Peeples, who was a noted judge in the early history of Georgia, was the paternal grandfather of the groom-elect. The late Gerry Elbridge Cabaniss was his great grandfather and was also recognized as an able juror, being member of one of the oldest Huguenot families in America.

The groom-to-be is a nephew of Mrs. Mary Peeples Cooledge, Thomas J. Peeples and Edwin Peeples, all of Atlanta; Howell Peeples, of Washington, D. C.; William Walker, of Atlanta; Mrs. Edward Anderson, of Florida. He attended school at the Randolph-Macon Military school at Bedford City, Va. During the world war he served with the 17th engineers. He is now connected with the Sear-Roebuck company in Atlanta.

World War Dead Of Laurens Co. Are Remembered

Mrs. Herbert M. Franklin, state regent, D. A. R., was the main speaker on an elaborate program given under the auspices of the John Laurens chapter, D. A. R., of Dublin at the dedication of McCalls Point on Wednesday, January 5. McCall's Point is a triangular park, a donation of Mrs. G. M. Burney, of Dublin, to the D. A. R. The park has been made most attractive with trees and shrubs, and a marble bench has been placed in the park with this inscription: "Dedicated to the boys of Laurens county who lost their lives in the world war." Mrs. M. J. Guyton, a sister of Hon. Carl Vinson, member of congress from the tenth district, is regent of the John Laurens chapter, and some of the most distinguished women of the stat are among the members.

Mrs. Franklin's address, in part, follows:

"Only a few short years ago, little boys played upon your streets, with their tops, marbles, toy guns and pistols. Then the thunders of war resounded over our land, and in a night, it seemed, these boys developed into men. Here, and everywhere, we saw them lined up at the station, awaiting the trains to bear them to camp.

Merry, laughing childhood, had disappeared from their faces, and each countenance wore the light of courage which bespeaks the soldier. Few mothers shed tears in public, though their hearts were torn with anquish. Many were like the brave woman who said to her son: 'You are not a coward, and I am not a coward,' so she bade him good-bye with no sign of fear or dread of danger, then turned away to enter heart and soul into Red Cross work.

With recollections of such loyal, true-hearted mothers, the boys gave splendid service to our country and the roar of cannon, the frightful carnage of war could not dispel the memory of mothers' courage and mothers' smile of cheer. To loved ones there comes ever—'His face of budding manhood, as he touched his flag, and sworé to bear it stainless, though he died.'

"They are not dead, those soldiers who sleep on Flanders Field, and in our own 'cities of silence.' They have only pitched their tents upon the higher plains of the Eternal Camping Ground. The Laurens county soldiers are forever alive in your hearts, the fires of patriotism which they have lighted will ever glow.

"This attractive little park is dedicated as a memorial to them, and they will live in the song of every bird as he warbles his anthems of joy and cheer. They live in the brightness of the sunshine, live in the laughter of little children as they play about the park, live in the breeze which fans the cheek of the maiden and her lover, or cools the brow of the wayfarer who may rest on this beautiful seat. Its marble speaks of the strength of character, the nobility of soul which lives on and on forever!

"With this same dauntless spirit let us keep the fires of patriotism lighted as we stand together under the great flag of our nation.

When ended all life's battles,
We're still to colors true,
On our own soil we'll sleep then,
Midst red and white and blue.
With red hills and white cloudlets,
With skies of azure hue,
The grand old face of nature
Wears red and white and blue!

"We dedicate this memorial to the soldiers of the red, white and blue, who rest in peace, at home with God, and keep the stars of Heaven alight with their patriotism!"

Attention, Chapters

With all chapters planning to offer D. A. R. and S. A. R. citizenship medals this year, please order them from the state chairman before February 15 if possible, so that she may report them at this year's conference. The price is only $1 this year and should be sent to the state treasurer with instructions to forward it as soon as possible. Even if the medals are not to be awarded till May or June, ordering them now will make a fuller report for both the committee and the state treasurer and enable all of this year's work to appear in this year's proceedings.

Reminiscences of Wilkes County

Today is published the first instalment of a most interesting article by Miss Annie M. Lane, of Washington, on "Reminiscences of Wilkes County, Georgia," in which she gives many sidelights on the early history of that part of the state and its pioneer citizens.

The remainder of the contribution will appear each week in short instalments until completed. It follows:

Seated on the front veranda of my home in Washington, Ga., surrounded by trees that have changed from the green hues of summer to the brightest colors of brown and yellow of autumn; the rustling of the falling leaves and the warmth of the sunshine lull me into a dreamy revery, and the thought comes to me: "Was our little town as pretty as it is today 100 years ago? Were the people who lived here then as carelessly happy as these who are passing along the street today?" It is a pity that the ruthless hand of time and progress should wipe out the old landmarks and make legends of authentic history.

From where I am seated I can plainly see the outlines of the brick inclosure around the grave of Mrs. Jesse Mercer, which is in a corner of the Baptist churchyard.

Years ago it was overshadowed by the dark and graceful boughs of ancient cedars, which in my childhood I have watched from the old church window, and it seemed to me that these old trees mourned when the wind mourned, and sighed when the hush of night fell upon them to shelter the lone one mocking bird which always made its home there. Now, as I turn and look westward I see upon the summit of a hill overlooking our town "The Convent of St. Joseph," once the home of Jesse Mercer. Between here and the convent, just two blocks from this imposing structure, is where the Christian Index was published. I don't think any spot in Georgia is so full of buried romance as the good old county of Wilkes. The money with which Mercer university was endowed and sustained for many years came from Wilkes county, and was donated by the woman who quietly sleeps in yonder churchyard. The Christian Index was also kept alive from the same source.

I have written a series of articles for the "The American Journal of History" on old times in Wilkes county, and with their permission I will take a few facts from these and bind them together in a somewhat condensed form.

"I beg the reader to bear in mind that I do not project my memory over the dusty stretch of two centuries, for I am not a Methusalah, nor an Ananias, but the facts which I give the reliable—authenticated history, taken from "Mallary's History," "Sherwood's Story of Mercer's Life," as well as from personal letters written by Jesse Mercer and records of deeds in our courthouse.

The dates are true. Silas Mercer, the father of Jesse Mercer, was of Scotch descent, and moved to Georgia from North Carolina during the Revolutionary war, but when Wilkes county was so overrun by the tories and red coats he fled to Halifax county in his own native state for safety.

It was here that Jesse Mercer was born in December, 1769. At the close of the war Silas Mercer returned to his farm seven miles south of Washington, Ga., bringing with him Jesse Mercer, a lad of 13—it was here his early manhood days were spent, and it is on this plantation that Silas Mercer is buried; the place is known as the Ficklen plantation, as it was later owned by Dr. Fielding Ficklen.

(To Be Continued.)

New Year Message From Editor

The editor wishes all a most happy, prosperous and useful New Year, with an abundance of success in all lines of D. A. R. endeavor. May 1927 be an outstanding milestone in the history of the work in Georgia!

While this is the beginning of the calendar year, the D. A. R. fiscal year does not begin till after conference in the spring, and in this ad interim much work may be accomplished.

May I not ask that every chapter in the state comply with the resolution adopted at the last state board meeting, providing for a chapter publicity chairman who really functions? Comparatively, there are very few chapters which send in news to the editor, and we are sure their activities would be of much interest and inspiration to the remainder of the state. And the state chairmen of committees. Reports from this group would be welcomed and read with helpful interest by all Georgia Daughters. Some weeks ago the editor sent out special requests to the state chairmen for interesting articles concerning the work of their respective committees with only a scant few complying.

Publicity is the very backbone of most enterprises, without which they soon enter into oblivion, and the D. A. R. of Georgia is no exception to the rule. The esteemed Atlanta Constitution is now and has always been ready to extend every courtesy to the D. A. R. by printing news of the organization each Sunday; the D. A. R. editor is most anxious to have the news from the chapters; so in common parlance, "It is up to the Georgia D. A. R." whether the D. A. R. page will be filled with interesting news or not.

Please give the state regent and the state editor your hearty cooperation, for the good of the society, by remembering to send in all news of chapters, state committees and other articles of general D. A. R. interest.

Five Important Meetings Mark Girl Scout Organization

Five meetings of paramount importance take place this week in the local Girl Scout organization. The groups meeting are the advisory board, of which Colonel F. J. Paxon is chairman, Tuesday, January 11, at headquarters, 614 Chamber of Commerce building, at 12:30 o'clock; the council, of which Mrs. Frank Holland is the commissioner, at the Biltmore hotel, Monday, January 10, at 3:30 o'clock; the court of awards on Saturday, January 15, at 10:30 o'clock at headquarters; the Patrol Leaders' association at the same place and date at 9:30 o'clock, and the Leaders' association on Thursday, January 13, at headquarters, at 3:30 o'clock.

The meeting of the advisory board on Tuesday will mark the first quarterly gathering of the organization for the new year. Reports will be made of work done in 1926 and plans made for the coming season. The most outstanding of the reports will be the first public statement that Camp Civitania acquired two years ago by the scout organization and improved since that time to the amount of a $10,000 investment, has been paid completely out of debt within the past 10 days.

The growth of this camp with 15 permanent buildings, Thornton hall, the staff cottage, a hospital, a nature museum, craft house, dwelling huts and servants' quarters is considered quite remarkable. Water has been piped to all the huts and electric lights installed in the larger buildings. The road has been graded and repaired, a swimming pool built and an out-door theater constructed.

Mrs. Holland Director.

The camp is under the personal supervision of Mrs. Frank Holland, local Girl Scout commissioner; Mrs. J. G. Thrower, secretary of the organization, and Mrs. Malcolm Fleming, chairman of the camp committee. It has proved self-sustaining and its finances for the coming season are in excellent condition. The next objective of the camp will be the making of a 10-acre lake for boating and water sports in addition to the swimming.

Two tennis courts will be built on top of the knoll just over the bridge approaching the camp. The Druid Hills Presbyterian Church troop will finance the building of the courts. Helen Bauer, of this troop, has already received a donation of $50 toward the courts. The troop recently built and donated the out-door museum to the camp. The troop is under the direction of Miss Adelaide Nelson.

Another unit will be built at the camp during this year. This consists of a group of buildings erected according to the plan issued by the national Scout organization for the primitive camping. There will be four permanent lean-tos with built-in bunks, and an out-door fireplace with a fly over it to shield it from rain. The furniture will be rustic, built by the girls themselves.

Building rustic furniture will be featured in the crafts classes at camp next summer, and the girls will go in extensively for archery, making their own equipment, as is the scout custom. The vegetable garden at the camp has been largely made by girls qualifying for their gardener's badge and last summer it supplied all the green vegetables for the unit. A significant fact about the camp is that it is run for the cost of $1 a day to the girls and is open to all Atlanta Scouts.

Annual Meeting.

The gathering on Monday at the Atlanta Biltmore will be the annual meeting of the Girl Scout council, at which the election of officers will take place. At this time four new members will be introduced, Mrs. J. J. Goodrum, Jr., Mrs. Henry Dunwoody, Mrs. Joe Hillsman and Mrs. George Traylor. The advisory board to the council consists of Colonel F. J. Paxon, H. B. Judkins, Frank Adair, Malcolm Fleming, Alfred Newell, Howard Muse, J. L. Dicky, Rev. W. M. Memmenger, Louis Moss, J. J. Goodrum, Jr., J. S. McLeondon, Professor W. A. Sutton, Miss Myra Graves, Miss Emma Wesley, Miss Isabelle Randolph and Miss Jessie Muse.

Those desiring to qualify for merit badges in the following subjects are asked to present themselves before the court of awards Saturday for examination: Journalist, scribe, artist, bugler, folk dancer, musician, drummer, signaller, craftsman, photographer, interpreter, business woman and scholarship. Mrs. J. F. Heard, chairman of the court, will preside and the following members will assist her in giving the examination: Miss Frances Woodberry, Miss Myra Graves, Miss Maude Ashmore, Miss Lillian Alexander, Mrs. Malcolm Fleming, Mrs. Catherine Culberson, Miss Rosemary Stevenson, Mrs. William Arnaud, Miss Mary Holder, Mrs. A. E. Williams, Miss Sara Lee Hogan, Mrs. S. E. Crichton and Mrs. Tom Miller.

Center Hill Chapter 235 Installs Officers.

An interesting event in the Center Hill chapter was the installation of officers for 1927, which took place Friday, December 31, 1926, at the Masonic temple in Center Hill. E. W. Dozier, past worthy patron, was the installing officer, assisted by Mrs. Annie Bell Capes, marshal; Mrs. Beulah Redd, chaplain, and Miss Ida Landon, organist.

The officers installed were: Mrs. Zelma Torrance, worthy matron; Mrs. Alton Bartlett, worthy patron; Mrs. Ruby Steerman, associate matron; Mrs. Elinor Smith, conductress; Mrs. Mary Wessel, associate conductress; Mrs. Jewell Clark, secretary; Mrs. Paul Blevins, treasurer; Mrs. Louise Sanders, chaplain; Mrs. Esther Medlin, marshal; Mrs. Clara Fulton, Adah; Mrs. Lucile Hall, Ruth; Mrs. Ethel Crouch, Esther; Mrs. Audrey Robbins, Martha; Mrs. Myrtle Milligin, Electa.

Mrs. Edna Cantrell, past worthy matron, was presented with a beautiful past worthy matron's jewel and flowers in the appreciation of the efficinet work during the year for her chapter. The installing officers were also presented with gifts. The secretary, Mrs. Annie Bell Clay, was given an Eastern Star ring.

On account of the serious illness of the little daughter of Mrs. Emma Lou Baker, organist, and her mother, Mrs. Mae Sturman, our warden, were unable to attend and be installed.

Shows Importance Of Preserving Historic Records

Dear Madam Regent: A work of vital importance to the D. A. R. is that of historic research and preservation of records, and the need is now. In a few years age and decay will make the work much harder, or a devastating fire will make it impossible. Every chapter is urged to help in this undertaking.

First, for your benefit locally we would suggest that you see that all your old county records in the courthouse are bound, indexed and stored in a safe place; that you see that your local newspapers, old and current copies, are safely filed away, that you spend a few years in compiling a small pamphlet to be taught in your city and county schools giving the main historic facts about your county, its people and its resources; that the child's historic education may proceed from within to the larger world without; that you compile a scrap-book history of your chapter giving photographs of your regents and others, with a brief biographical sketch. Family trees should also be preserved by your chapter. The D. A. R. lineage books are a valuable acquisition, and can be secured from headquarters in Washington city.

For the state D. A. R. my committee is asking for unpublished records, such as abstracts of wills from your first county will books (copy of names carefully giving witnesses, etc., and the book and page); marriage records from the very earliest to 1860, list of revolutionary soldiers who have lived or died in your county, and soldiers of the war of 1812. Inscriptions from very old monuments in cemeteries and especially records from old family Bibles. Very important also are church records of marriages, christenings and deaths, and old diaries when many names are mentioned from time to time, and also letters written by early settlers.

We would suggest that you appoint a small committee of sympathetic and painstaking workers and get the work in your county done during the shut-in days of this winter. When it is in book form hundreds of men and women of our generation and generations to come, with a new found pride in their ancestors will be grateful for the information you have preserved for them.

A fresh stimulus to do this important work can be found in the volume issued by the Georgia D. A. R. in 1926. "Historical Collections of Ga. D. A. R." as a memorial to Mrs. W. L. Peel. If you have not seen a copy write for it now and after a careful examination present it to your local library or keep it on your chapter's bookshelves for future reference. It can be secured by writing to Mrs. W. L. Dykes, 570 Ridgecrest road, Atlanta, Ga., and inclosing $3.

The published records of Franklin county in this volume are a fine example of the kind of records wanted by this committee for publication, the form in which they are to be put, and the wealth of material stored in our county courthouses. Your records may not be of so large a quantity but they are equally as important, and in turn they will be published in a future volume. Now we are really working for a definite purpose.

Remember you are preparing material for publication, so be careful of names and dates. Make three certified copies of records on one side of paper 8 1-2 by 11 inches, with one inch margin at the top and one and a half inch at the left side. Keep one copy for your chapter and send two copies to my address before March 1.

If you have done any one or more of these tasks already report that also, that a record may be kept of each county.

Let us make this year's work for records one to be proud of.

Couple Celebrate 25th Anniversary.

One of the loveliest of recent events of the season was the 25th anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. James Robert Hardman at their home on Woodland avenue. The impressive ceremony was performed by Rev. T. T. Davis.

The home was most artistically decorated throughout with cut flowers, palms, ferns and southern smilax.

Preceding the entrance of the bridal party Miss Helen Schaid played several selections. Mrs. Joe M. Floyd sang "When You and I Were Young, Maggie," and "I Love You Truly." "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms" was played softly during the ceremony.

The bridal party entered to the strains of Wagner's "Lohengrin." The four children of the bride and groom were the attendants. First to enter was Miss Sarah Hardman with Robert Hardman. Next came Mrs. John R. Milner with Raymond Hardman. The bride entered on the arm of the groom.

The bride was lovely in her gown of gray satin back crepe. She wore a corsage of orchids and valley lilies tied with silver ribbon. Mrs. Milner was becomingly gowned in rose frost crepe and she wore a shoulder corsage of pink roses and valley lilies. Miss Hardman wore a beautiful creation of green frost crepe. Her flowers were pink roses and valley lilies.

The guests were received by Mrs. W. D. Pierce, Joe M. Floyd and Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Bennett.

Miss Jessie McLeod, Mrs. F. L. Bennett, Miss Marion McLeod and Miss Alene Rutledge presided at the punch bowls.

Mr. and Mrs. Hardman were the recipients of many handsome gifts of silver.

There were 150 invited guests.

On or about February first Keely's will present to the parents of Atlanta and Georgia one of the most complete and comprehensive displays of boys' wear to be found anywhere in the state. This new department, marking a decidedly forward step in the progress of this institution, will occupy the conveniently accessible space on our first floor now devoted to Wool Dress Goods and Coating.

In order that we may give this innovation the attention and display room that it deserves, we are forced to clear approximately 17,263 yards of woolens from our Dress Goods Department. The clearance must be definite. It must be complete. It must be accomplished quickly. We realize it will necessitate drastic measures, and to this end have sweepingly slashed pre-inventory prices to half and less than half. Nothing is reserved. An exigency has developed that instantly becomes your greatest opportunity. They are the season's best and most wanted woolens—every yard—the grade and quality you would rightly expect to find at Keely's.

The sale starts Monday morning at 9 o'clock, and if you have even the merest idea of woolen qualities and values you will let nothing prevent your being here when the doors open in order that you may get your share!

She gives many talks over radio to the children, one of her latest being the Christmas story. For the past two years she has been instructor at Mrs. Harvey Harry's summer Camp Paradise in Highlands, N. C. Following the supper, there will be a grand march of the mothers and daughters, at which time all girls who bring their mothers will receive the leather mother and daughter honor. To the group having the largest per cent of mothers and daughters present, the grand prize will be awarded.

N. A. P. Group Represent Magazine.

The Camp Fire group of North Avenue Presbyterian school with their guardian, Miss Wylene Reynolds, will represent the Everygirl's Magazine, the national publication of Camp Fire (regular price $1, special price now on and until January 15, 75c). Tuesday afternoon a business meeting of the Swannanoa Camp Fire group was held at the school. Ten girls are planning to take their fire maker's rank before the committee of awards the first Wednesday in February. After the meeting, Mrs. J. Howell Green, the guardian, accompanied the group to the opening of the new home of the Decatur library in the city hall of Decatur. The Camp Fire groups of Decatur contributed a comfortable arm chair to the library.

At the meeting of Sadahee Camp Fire of Ponce de Leon school, the guardian, Miss Carswell, gave a talk on "Plans for the Coming Year."

Home Park School Group.

The Chanyata Camp Fire Girls of Home Park school are sorry to report that their guardian, Miss Alice Thompson, has been very ill at her home on Greenwood avenue, and has not been able to attend the meetings of the Camp Fire Girls. At the meeting held Tuesday, each girl wrote a note of cheer to Miss Thompson expressing their desire that she might soon be back with them.

The Kirkwood Camp Fire Girls held a very interesting meeting Thursday, led by Ruby Hitchcock, the program committee chairman. A citizenship play was presented, and a talk on "What Camp Fire Life Means" was given by Julia Wharton. Alys Goulden gave the report of the council meeting after which she gave her resignation as council representative as she leaves Kirkwood in February to attend the Bass Junior High school. Julia Wharton was elected in her place. The meeting next week will be devoted to health.

The Blue Birds held its first meeting of the new year Friday afternoon, January 7, at 3 o'clock, at the clubhouse. Mrs. J. B. Carter is chairman of this group.

The art classes, under the able instruction of Miss Lillian Williamson, are a valuable addition to the club's activities. Daughters of 1812 Entertain Visiting Officers of Order

An interesting event among the social affairs of the week honoring the Daughters of 1812 was the luncheon Saturday at the Piedmont Driving club when Mrs. C. D. Tebo, state registrar, and Miss Marianne McClellan, state registrar, were official hostesses for the Georgia society.

The tables, seating 65 guests, were arranged in E shape and decorated in green and gold. Crystal colonial candelabra with tapers in pastel shades were interspersed with baskets of killarney roses. The souvenirs and place cards were marked with the insignia of the order.

Mrs. Charles A. Rice, president of the Georgia society, was toastmistress, presiding with characteristic tact and dignity. Responding to toasts were Mrs. Samuel Preston Davis, national president, "Aims and Achievements of the Daughters of 1812;" Mrs. Frank D. Callan, first vice president, "The Army of the War of 1812;" Mrs. Alvin V. Lane, second vice president, "What Constitutes Leadership;" Mrs. Clarence J. Chandler, third vice president, "Reminiscences;" Mrs. Samuel Z. Shope, fourth vice president, "Andrew Jackson;" Mrs. Frederick W. Milsbaugh, corresponding secretary, "The Navy of the War of 1812;" Mrs. Martin J. Sigmon, corresponding secretary, "Absent Members;" Mrs. Julius F. F. Cassell, curator, "Relics;" Miss Nina Hornady, honorary national vice president and honorary state president, "Incidents Since Last We Met."

Those present were:

Interesting relics from "Old Ironsides" were displayed. These were loaned by Governor Max B. Wellborn of the federal reserve bank and Walter Wellborn, grandsons of Commodore Dent of the ship. The chest of Commodore Dent, containing trinkets from Tripoli and other relics, is the valued possession of Governor Wellborn. An oil portrait of Commodore Dent, painted by his great-granddaughter, daughter of Walter Wellborn, was shown. "Old Ironsides" was built of timbers from Georgia furnished by the Couper family of St. Simons and therefore has particular historical significance to Georgians.

During the luncheon music was furnished by an orchestra.

In the receiving line Saturday afternoon when the Joseph Habersham chapter, D. A. R., kept open house for visitors and members of the Daughters of 1812 were Governor Max B. Wellborn, Walter Wellborn, grandsons, and Miss Wellborn and Marshall Wellborn, great-grandchildren of the commodore.

Miss McAfee Weds Robert P. Carson, Jr.

A wedding of interest to the many friends was that of Miss Catharine Loucille McAfee to Robert Patty Carson, Jr. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Henry Mays at the Inman Park Methodist church, December 11, at 5:30 o'clock.

The church was decorated with ferns, trailing smilax, and chrysanthemums. Mrs. Fannie Jenkins rendered a program of wedding music. Miss Jeanie Fincher playing the violin and Miss Lula Bates at the piano played McDowell's "To a Wild Rose," preceding the ceremony.

The bride and groom entered together to the strains of the wedding march from "Lohengrin." The bride was beautiful in her wedding dress of blue satin back crepe with coat to match and hat of blue and silver. She wore a corsage bouquet of pink rose buds showered with valley lilies.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wiley McAfee entertained at a wedding supper for the immediate families of the bride and groom. The bride's table was beautiful with a three-tiered white wedding cake for the central decoration surrounded by candlesticks holding white burning tapers.

Atlanta Chapter, D. A. R. Honors Daughters of 1812

The Atlanta chapter D. A. R. was hostess Saturday afternoon at an elaborate tea complimenting Mrs. Samuel Preston Davis, president national and members of the national board United Daughters of 1812.

Mrs. William George and members of the house committee of the Atlanta chapter decorated the large assembly hall which formed a picturesque background for the lovely hostesses and visitors.

The flag of America, the flag of Georgia, the flag of the national D. A. R. and of the 13 original states and the handsome banners bearing the names of ten patriotic organizations were in standards along the side walls.

A close degree of personal relationship and cordiality exists between the local, state and national officers. Their sympathetic understanding of each other's problems is an important contributory factor toward the unity of all societies.

Mrs. Lucius McConnell regent, was assisted in receiving by the national officers of the U. S. D. 1812 who are Miss Samuel Preston Davis, president national; Mrs. Frank D. Callan, first vice president; Mrs. Alvin V. Lane, second vice president; Mrs. Clarence J. Atlanta P.-T. A. Council Makes Extensive Plans for Spring

With nearly every association represented and most of the chairmen present and reporting, the Atlanta council of P.-T. A. at its meeting Thursday mapped out a busy season's work. It was a chairmen's meeting, and no special program was provided by Mrs. C. D. Tebo, program chairman for the meeting. The time was taken up by reports of constructive work under way or with plans for the spring.

Mrs. Paul West, new member of the board of education from the eleventh ward, was introduced. Miss Mann, of the faculty of the Girls' High school, was introduced and stated that her associate teachers were caring for her classes that she might come and gather inspiration from the meeting.

Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, chairman Georgia children's code commission, was introduced by Mrs. C. C. Whittaker, chairman of juvenile welfare, and told the members how they could assist in getting the bills of the children's code adopted.

Reports of Chairmen.

Mrs. J. W. Lloyd, chairman of better films, reported the work done at Christmas by the better films committee and expressed the thanks of that body to the P.-T. A. presidents who gave cash donations; the Red Cross, for dressing dolls; the Boy Scouts, for mending toys; the ungraded classes of Calhoun Street school, for painting doll heads, and to the teachers and others who assisted. Mrs. W. D. Farnham, chairman recreation, asked the cooperation of all members in getting the necessary appropriation through council for year-round playground work. Mrs. Raymond Wolfe, safety chairman, asked mothers to learn and observe traffic laws and set an example, and she called particular attention to the dangers of violating the law concerning skating. Mrs. C. C. Whittaker, juvenile protection chairman, stated that much could be accomplished in enforcing the law regarding the sale of salacious publications by the members taking up the matter personally with the newsstands near their homes.

A letter from Mrs. DeLos Hill, asking the cooperation of the body in fostering the Minneapolis symphony matinee concert which is to be given February 2 at the auditorium, was read. Mrs. Charles J. Foster, president of the council, thanked the members of the P.-T. A. who assisted in the Forward Atlanta parade. Miss Mae Walker gave figures showing the decrease in illiteracy in Georgia. Twenty-three Atlanta parent-teacher associations are contributing to the scholarship for fighting illiteracy in Fulton county. Mrs. J. H. Price, chairman children's reading, urged an individual bookshelf for every grammar grade and a library in every high school. She outlined the plans of the district chairman. Mrs. C. P. Luckie St. P.-T. A. Features Thrift Program

The P.-T. A. of Luckie Street school held a meeting Wednesday afternoon. It was a thrift program and was unique and original. Each class composed and sang a song, on banking and thrift. A prize was offered the class winning the most votes, the mothers being asked to vote for the song they liked best and the prize was won by Miss Tally's class, low 5.

Miss Mary W. Postell, assistant superintendent of the elementary department of Atlanta public schools, spoke on the changes that had been made in the public schools in the past few years. She said that it was very important to know reading, writing and arithmetic, but that it was more important to live right and be a good citizen in the community than to know. She said that habits formed in babyhood, still clung in later years and she urged that the child be trained in the right habits while young.

The count of mothers gave the first prize to Miss Tally's class, low 5, and the second prize to Miss Martin's class, low 1.

Weak and Restless

"MY HEALTH had been bad for some time and I had become very much discouraged," says Mrs. Alice Jones, of near Benton, Ill., whose picture is printed above. "At times," she explains, "I was so weak I could not attend to my household duties.

"For months, I did not have a good night's sleep. I was restless and nervous. I was tired all day long. This was not natural, and caused me much concern. Occasionally my back and limbs ached so bad I wanted to cry.

"I had often heard Cardui spoken of by some of my friends who had taken it, so I thought it might be of some help to me. It proved to be very helpful to me, indeed.

"I began to get stronger in a short time, and with returning strength my nerves ceased to trouble me, and I soon got so I slept fine. My appetite improved, and I began to feel like a different woman. I continued the medicine for some time, as I was delighted with the way I was getting on.

"When I quit taking Cardui, I felt better than I had in years, and I am thankful to say that my good health has continued."

CARDUI

Pre-School Age Notes Interest Georgia P.-T. A.

The following pre-school items will be of interest to the P.-T. associations throughout Georgia:

Alabama.

Mrs. J. C. Malone attended the Alabama State P.-T. A. convention in Ensley, in November. She made a most delightful impression upon the people and did some good work in explaining the organization of the pre-school department. Alabama and Arizona have both only recently appointed state pre-school chairmen.

Arizona.

Dr. Jessie C. Fenton, of the Arizona Normal college, was one of the main speakers at the Southern California conference on "Modern Parenthood," in Los Angeles, her topic being "Habit Formation in Babyhood." It always bodes good for pre-school work in any state when a faculty member of the state university system is interested enough to be placed upon a far-reaching program along these lines. The Arizona P.-T. A. is planning to hold its state convention just prior to the national convention in Oakland, Cal. This will assure them of the presence of several national speakers who can make it convenient to visit the Canyon on this date. Arizona is doing fine work for infancy-maternity through district nurses under the Sheppard-Towner fund. They are now planning a "Get Ready for School Campaign" for the children of pre-school age entering school next fall.

Arkansas.

The Arkansas state chairman, Mrs. Cecil McHale, soon after her appointment, had the advantage of a course in the Institute of Child Welfare, operated under the Laura Spelman fund in the University of Minnesota, where her husband was in attendance. This is a wonderful opportunity for preparing the pre-school worker for her challenging post. Mrs. McHale was the first chairman to be appointed for pre-school work in her state, but she will find a good background of intelligent interest already prepared.

Georgia.

Miss Martha McAlpine, child study specialist of the extension department, State College of Agriculture, Athens, Ga., has recently been appointed state chairman of pre-school circles of Georgia. The state is to be congratulated upon securing this type of chairman since the training and experience which Miss McAlpine has had in course of her preparation for the position in the state university system will give a new impetus to pre-school work. Mrs. Rae Pardee Youtz, who occupies a like position in the University of Iowa, has also been made chairman in her state. Some of those attending the national P.-T. A. convention in Atlanta may remember hearing Mrs. Youtz discuss some of the questions relating to this field. It is to be hoped that every district president will see that a strong pre-school chairman is appointed at once, so that Miss McAlpine may have someone to look to by way of securing leaders for local circles.

The national chairman of pre-school circles, Mrs. Clifford Walker, plans to meet Mrs. A. H. Reeve, president of the national congress of parents and teachers, in Washington, D. C., on January 24, for a conference on pre-school plans for the future.

St. Philip's P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the St. Philip's P.-T. A. was held Thursday in the chapter house, Mrs. Sheils presided. Members of the December-January ways and means committee, Mrs. Sofge and Mrs. Schelver, were thanked for their splendid work during December. Mrs. Blocker was again appointed to be choir mother for the junior choir, and Mrs. Ritter to assist in her absence. A splendid talk was given by the church school superintendent, Mr. Shaw. The ways and means committee for February and March consists of Mrs. Ritter and Mrs. Terry.

Tech High P.-T. A. To Meet Friday.

Mrs. J. C. Mellichamp urges every father and mother of a Tech High boy to attend the P.-T. A. meeting Friday night in the military building. The meeting will begin promptly at 8 o'clock. Fathers' night will be especially featured and the band will render a number of selections.

Mrs. Mellichamp states that "your boy needs your sympathy and appreciation, so does his very fine faculty. The effort to have every parent a member of the P.-T. A. should be encouraged by your becoming a member and doing your part to make the influence of Tech High felt in every part of the city. Atlanta has no finer asset than this wonderful school your boy and my boy attend, so show him your appreciation by going with him to this meeting Friday night. The program will be announced later."

William A. Bass P.-T. A. To Meet.

On account of the fifth district meeting the regular meeting of William A. Bass P.-T. A. was postponed until Wednesday afternoon, January 12, to be held in the Clapp gymnasium. The teachers will be there at 2:30 o'clock so that the parents may have a social chat with them before the regular meeting which starts promptly at 3 o'clock. The program chairman has a delightfully interesting program planned.

Every mother is asked to participate in the Thrift contest. They are invited to put on exhibition articles made of old materials, articles reclaimed and makeshift articles that are used as substitutes for something more expensive. Prizes are offered on these various classes.

Oakland City P.-T. A. Gives Yearly Program.

Fifth District P.-T. A. Features Extension and Education Program

The fifth district P.-T. A. council featured the departments of extension and education at the meeting held Wednesday at the Commercial High school. Mrs. John Lloyd, director of extension presented her chairmen and speakers. Mrs. A. P. Milam, of Clarkston, chairman of pre-school circles reported 52 pre-school circles organized with 1,125 mothers; 66 clinics, and 5,000 children examined. Mrs. Arthur Tufts, speaker for the department of extension gave an interesting account of the organization of the P.-T. A. in the churches and its progress.

Mrs. D. C. Shepherd, director of education presented her chairmen and speakers. Mrs. Kate Jolly, chairman of kindergarten extension, gave a brief outline of kindergarten work. She told how Mrs. Peters Black in 1865 started the work, and Spring Street school P.-T. A. started the first public school kindergarten and now there are 51 public school kindergartens in Atlanta.

Dr. Soule's Address.

Professor Sutton, chairman of school education introduced the speaker for the department of education, Dr. Andrew Soule, president of the Georgia Agricultural college. The outstanding points of Dr. Soule's address were the importance of early training, prevention rather than correction, physical education, proper diet and home training. He stressed the part that parents must feel their responsibility toward their children and not fail them in sympathy love and understanding. A motion by Mrs. Howard Jackson, adopting Dr. Soule, as our "Dear Dr. Soule," was unanimously carried.

Miss May Walker, chairman of illiteracy, stated that Georgia ranks first in native born illiterates and last in expenditure per capita for education, but this department has adopted for its slogan. "Illiteracy Stamped From the State by 1930," so there are high hopes of this part of the statistics on Georgia undergoing a rapid change.

E. R. Enlow, chairman of visual education, demonstrated the different types of picture machines and spoke of their importance in the school work.

Mrs. Walker's Address.

Mrs. Clifford Walker, national chairman of pre-school circles, made a short address on the rapid progress of this work in Georgia and made an explanation of the relation of these circles to the P.-T. A. work.

Mrs. Charles Center, director of public welfare, presented Mrs. B. M. Smith, chairman of American citizenship. Mrs. Smith told of her efforts to have the American flag respected in times of peace as well as war and to have the chairmen of parks and owners of public buildings, see that the flag never trails in the dust. She ended by having the audience repeat the "Pledge to the Flag." Mrs. Raymond Wolfe, chairman of safety education, told of cases of preventable accidents and the magazines available relating to safety education.

Mrs. Albert Woodruff, chairman of thrift, brought the message that the state organization was offering a prize to the P.-T. A. member who made the best article out of something old or something reclaimed or something that is cheap but looks expensive (a frantic search of the attic is on, or does the Salvation Army get attic relics now). Mrs. R. R. Ritchie, chairman of children's reading, among many interesting things she said, suggested that each room in every school in the district be presented with a gift of a book to be selected by the teacher, from the grade mothers.

A resolution offered by Mrs. Z. V. Peterson, that the fifth district cooperate with the proper authorities in suppressing salacious literature and posters from Atlanta. The musical numbers were an enjoyable feature of the occasion, which were furnished by the Glee club, Mandolin club and orchestra, then a bountiful luncheon was served efficiently by the domestic class.

Malone, Pre-school Age chairman. Mrs. Malone's subject was "Economy in Child Life." In her discussion of this subject Mrs. Malone pointed out the fact that between the ages of two and six the habits of life are formed, and raised the question "are we helping the child?" She stated that statistics show that of children up to eight years old, 20 out of a hundred are superior children, but between the ages of eight and 17 only five out of a hundred are superior which shows that environment has done something to them. Mrs. Malone earnestly asked the mothers to strive to become skilled parents and to build for beauty and strength of character and to rear their children with this objective—that of becoming fine, good parents themselves.

A parade of pre-school children in costume was an attractive feature of the program. Little Marie Pappenheimer won the prize for the prettiest and most attractive costume. Elizabeth and Helen Cowles won the prize for the most original costumes.

Local Publicity Scrap Books To Be Exhibited at Convention

The national congress of parents and teachers has decided to have a local publicity scrap book exhibit at the 1927 national convention which will be held at Oakland, Calif.

Each state will be limited to 10 scrap books, the measurements of these books not to exceed 12 by 16 inches. Some local scrap books were exhibited at the Atlanta convention and Mrs. Laura Underhill Kohn, manager of the program service bureau for the national congress, made these suggestions as to the "good points" and the "criticism" on those exhibits:

Good Points—Great originality; many showing excellent district cooperation, many very neatly made with clippings well cut and pasted, many artistically arranged, many giving new publicity ideas and some complied according to specifications given in the national scrap book call.

Criticisms—A few hastily put together, some with poorly cut clippings, poor writing or print, careless cutting and pasting, some with little thought as to content, quite a few with samples of activities in which the state publicity department has no part. Unless the publicity chairmen, state, district, county or local, give publicity of activities in some periodical in the state bulletin or by dissemination of the news of this work in some way, then these activities have nothing to do with the publicity work of the state, and they should not be credited to the publicity chairman.

The selection of the scrap books to be exhibited will be left to the state chairman of publicity, Mrs. George G. Ross, Vernon View, Savannah, Ga. This selection will represent, as far as possible, the different sections of the state, taking into consideration always the quality of the material submitted.

The publicity department hopes to have a publicity exhibit at the state convention at which local scrap books can be exhibited.

If anyone is interested in the scrap book exhibit for the national convention, and wish any further information, they may communicate with the state chairman of publicity.

He spoke of the progress of education in the school, but the boys and girls lacking religious training. He stated: "Character cannot be taught in the school. The future of our nation depends upon our children of today, and unless the parents give their children religious training, they cannot be fitted for their responsibilities. A good citizen is one who has religion back of him."

Mrs. Raymond H. Wolfe, chairman safety education, issues the following message to all P.-T. A. presidents in Atlanta and the fifth district of Georgia: "Last year, that is 1925-26 school age, about 200 copies of outline for organization and suggested activities for junior safety councils in schools were issued. These were mimeographed and sent out through the courtesy of the Atlanta safety council to the presidents, chairman and in some instances to the principal of the school, where the presidents of the P.-T. A. or the chairman's name were not known. Will you not favor me by securing from your former president or chairman the copy sent that it may prove of some use to you now? Griffith Film Scheduled for Howrad Screen

"Sorrows of Satan" Features Gala Array of Famous Stars.

You'll be sorry if you miss "Sorrows of Satan," D. W. Griffith's latest Paramount picture which opens at the Howard theater tomorrow should be seen by each and every movie-goer, because:

It advances the technique of motion picture direction in one tremendous leap and places the film miles ahead of others. Once more Griffith proves himself the great Maestro. Because:

Pantomime is placed on a higher level than ever before. Adolphe Menjou as a modern Satan leaves nothing to be desired. Ricardo Cortez proves himself an actor of depth and feeling. Carol Dempster is superb and Lya de Putti carves a niche for herself in the hearts of American film fans. And because:

Marie Coreli's widley read novel makes good picture material. "Sorrows of Satan" tells the story of Lucifer, thrown from Heaven with the promise of an hour of bliss within the gates of Paradise for each soul which resists him.

We are then introduced to Geoffrey Tempest, a struggling, idealistic, young writer and his fiance, Mavis Clair. Both, temporarily in the throes of despair, have great hope for the future due to the contemplated publishing of Geoffrey's novel. His publisher turns it down.

Prince Lucio de Rimanez approaches Tempest and informs him that he has fallen heir to a huge fortune. Lured by the man's magnetic personality, Geoffrey soon forgets Mavis in his new life of luxury, and makes love to Lady Sybil, daughter of an impoverished nobleman. Attracted by the youth's money, Sybil marries him.

Too late, he realizes that his marriage has been a terrible blunder. While we agree that we are doing you a great injustice by not telling what comes next, we are only doing it for your own good because "Sorrows of Satan" is one of the pictures that you can't afford to miss!

On the stage Art Landry and his internationally famous Victor Recording orchestra will play a number of selections that have made them so popular on the records. This great band is made up of more than mere musicians—it contains singers, dancers and entertainers of the first water.

Zimmermann and Granville, Swiss yodelers, will offer a distinctive novelty, "Echoes of Switzerland," as an added stage number. Zimmermann and Granville are well known throughout the U. S. A. and Canada by their genuine yodle records with the Victor, Columbia, Edison and Pathe Phonograph companies and through their extensive concert tours in the largest auditoriums of the country.

Other numbers on the mammoth program will include a delightful overture by the Howard Symphony orchestra under Joseph Littau's direction, an organ specialty by Melvin P. Ogden at the golden voiced Wurlitzer, a novelty reel, Pathe News and selected comedy.

Top, left, is shown Lya de Putti, scintillating star, who is one of the principals in "Sorrows of Satan," the D. W. Griffith film at the Howard theater this week. Next, is Doris Kenyon, who is seen in "Mismates" at the Metropolitan. James Kirkwood and Laura LaPlante are featured in "Butterflies in the Rain" at Keith's Georgia theater. Top right, Tom Mix in "Hardboiled" at Loew's Grand. Lower left, Reginald Denny in "Rolling Home" at the Cameo. Next, Reginald Denny again, this time in "Take It From Me," his very latest effort, at the Rialto. Milton Sills is featured in "Men of Steel" at the Alamo No. 2. Douglas Fairbanks, below, is at the West End in "The Black Pirate." The two gents at outs with each other are Fred Thompson and one of his supporting cast in "A Regular Scout," made with a special appeal to Boy Scouts, which is billed at the Tudor. Ben Lyon and Lois Moran are seen in "Bluebeard's Seven Wives" at the Tenth Street theater. Corinne Griffith is at the Palace in "Mlle. Modiste."

Full of romance, color and action, "Hard Boiled," the latest Tox Mix picture, will be the feature offering at Loew's Grand theater this week. In "Hard Boiled" Mix has a wonderful roll and during the action rings in his wonder horse, "Tony," a marvelously trained dog, "Bing," and a capable company of people which includes a star comedienne and a delightful leading woman.

Surrounded by an excellent cast and supplied with one of the most thrilling stories of the west ever brought to the silversheet, Tom Mix, as Jeff Boyden, gives a remarkably fine performance in "Hard Boiled." Fox Films version of Shannon Fife's romantic tale of a dude ranch.

In this, his latest release, the great western ace finds, upon leaving his comfortable home in Chicago, that crooks are crooks—no matter where they are encountered. In this particular case the bad men are New York gun artists, headed by one, Diamond Sadie, and they are bent upon michief in the far west.

In the course of the action, Tom encountered them planning a little haul which, if successful, would bring to their strong boxes some of the most desirable jewels in the safe at the famous Boiling Springs, where Abigail Gregg rules with an iron hand.

Just how Tom and Tony, working with "Spec" O'Donnell and a homely little dog, enlist the interest of the beautiful Marjorie Gregg, engineer a startling rescue, and land the culprits behind bars, develop into a western release of rare beauty and dramatic action.

Helene Chadwick, seen as Marjorie Gregg, is said to do the finest work of her screen career. In the cast are Emily Fitzory, Phyllis Haver, Ethel Gray Terry, Dan Mason, Charles Conklin, "Spec" O'Donnell, William Lawrence and others.

Alamo No. 2.

Rarely does one find such a combination of motion picture talent as First National has assembled in "Men of Steel," the big steel photoplay, which comes to the Alamo No. 2 theater, with Milton Sills in the starring role, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, of this week.

Doris Kenyon is featured in the leading feminine role. The rest of the cast includes Mae Allison, George Fawcett, Frank Currier, Victor McLaglen, Taylor Graves, John Kolb, Evelyn Walsh Hall, Harry Lee, Henry West and Nick Thompson.

"Men of Steel" was directed by George Archainbaud under the production management of Earl Hudson, the man who made "The Lost World," "Flaming Youth," "So Big" and many other successes.

Tenth Street Theater.

"Bluebeard's Seven Wives."

Opening the week at Tenth Street theater is "Bluebeard's Seven Wives," a thoroughly delightful film, featuring Blanche Sweet, Lois Wilon and Ben Lyon. The story of "Bluebeard's Seven Wives" traces the career of a bank clerk who suddenly finds himself thrust in the limelight as a popular movie star. All is not a bed of roses, however, as his press agent insists on exploiting him as a modern Bluebeard. This is neither to his liking nor to the liking of the girl he has selected as his wife, Blanche Merrill and Paul Schofield are jointly responsible for the script of the story.

"Old Loves and New," which is scheduled at the Tenth Street on Wednesday only, is an adaptation by Marion Fairfax, of "The Desert Healer," the latest of the celebrated E. M. Hull novels to reach the screen. Ever since the novel's appearance not so long ago, and its immediate leap into the best-seller class, film producers have sought for the rights for film purposes. But it has fallen to the lot of Marion Fairfax, screen executive, to realize this purpose. Lewis Stone, Barbara Bedford and Walter Pidgeon are featured in "Old Loves and New."

An American girl in Russia—love affairs with grand dukes and dashing young officers—thrilling adventures amidst a background of unexpected and romantic denouement. That is the treat in store for patrons of the Tenth Street on Thursday and Friday of the week, when Constance Talmadge's latest comedy-drama, "The Duchess of Buffalo," will be shown. This rollicking romance of a beautiful American dancer who becomes the toasted favorite of Russia is excellent. On Saturday, "Forlorn River" will be shown.

Clean Films.

A recent nation-wide canvass of theater-owners engaged in showing motion pictures point out conclusively that the type of film which appeals most directly to the public, as evidenced by attendance at theaters, is the clean, wholesome and genuinely native American product.

DESERT NOT NEW TO DONALD AND VILMAS

The desert is "old stuff" to Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky, the Samuel Goldwyn players who are co-featured in "The Winning of Barbara Worth," at the Metropolitan theater soon.

In the previous picture of each, all of the action was laid in the desert, and although the pictures were wholly distinct and separate, oddly enough it was the same desert. Colman was in "Beau Geste," made in the great American desert, near Yuma, Ariz. And Vilma Banky was Rudolph Valentino's leading lady in "The Son of the Sheik," made in the self-same desert. As a matter of fact, Vilma said hello to Ronald as her company followed his on location.

Fairfax Theater.

("Classified.")

Corinne Griffith, scintillating star of the cinema, is billed at the Fairfax theater in East Point on Monday and Tuesday in "Classified," a story of a peppy young "want ad" girl and of her various thrilling adventures. The role assigned to Miss Griffith in this production is entirely new to motion picture fans, it having never been shown on the screen before. She is supported by an excellent cast.

Scheduled for Wednesday only at the Fairfax is "Thundering Hoofs," a thrilling western of the highest order. Thrills, suspense, comedy and excellent climax are the characteristics of "Thundering Hoofs."

On Thursday and Friday, "The Barrier," a Rex Beach film, is billed Here's a film full of action. A vigorous story of early Alaskan days when men fought with their fists for their diggings in the gold fields and for the women they loved with equal readiness and fierce delight. A vivid and rugged love story conceived and told as only Rex Beach could conceive and tell it, portrayed against a background of an Alaskan village. Norman Kerry, Henry B. Walthal, Lionel Barrymore and Marceline Day are featured.

Cameo Theater.

("Smiling Thru.")

The Cameo offers an unusually attractive program for the week, having three pictures of widely-contrasting interest, the themes being made up of romance, drama and comedy.

Starting the week on Monday and Tuesday, the Cameo offers one of Norma Talmadge's greatest successes, "Smiling Through," a picture which, through its charm and romance, has outlived the years since it was made and stands forth even now as one of the greatest romances the screen has ever known. Miss Talmadge was at the very peak of her interesting career when she appeared in "Smilin' Through."

On Wednesday and Thursday, the Cameo offers the picturization of Blasco Ibanez' great drama of love, wild and unbridled passion, sacrifice and hate, "The Temptress," the story of a woman born, it seems, for the purpose of ensnaring men to their ruin for love of her, turning close friends into bitter enemies, going smilingly through a life of love and ease and leaving a bitter trail of broken hearts and ruined lives in her wake, to find at last an overpowering love which gained her nothing but remorse. Gorgeously beautiful Greta Carbo portrays the role of the temptress, with Antonio Moreno playing opposite her as the man she loved but could not win.

Friday and Saturday brings to the Cameo Reginald Denny's screamingly funny "Rolling Home," the story of a young fraud who rolled home on the crest of a wave of wealth—which was imaginary—finds love and happiness when he didn't expect to.

Estelle Bradley.

Estelle Bradley, of Atlanta, who has been appearing recently in Educational-Mermaid Comedies, has been cast for a second time as the leading lady for Lloyd Hamilton in the next comedy which the big comedian is making at Educational studios under the direction of Norman Taurog. Lloyd will be seen as an electrical worker who gets high and low voltage wire twisted with laughable results.

'MISMATES' OFFERED BY METROPOLITAN

An unusually strong heart-interest story has been chosen by the management of the Metropolitan theater for presentation beginning Monday. The title of the picture is "Mismates," a highly dramatic story which centers arouud the lives of a manicurist who has married the son of a wealthy family that refuses to recognize her.

"Mismates" is a First National picture. It is an adaptation of Myron Fagan's stage play of the same title, and was directed by Charles Brabin under the supervision of Earl Hudson, the man who gave the screen: "The Lost World," "Flaming Youth," "So Big" and many other highly successful pictures.

Interpreting the story on the screen is an unusually brilliant coterie of film luminaries. Heading the cast are Doris Kenyon and Parner Baxter in the featured roles. Supporting them are Philo McCollough, Mae Allison, Charles Murray, John Kolb, Maude Turner Gordon, Nancy Kelley, Cyril Ring, Charles Beyer and others.

The story is a gripping one and has been screened in an elaborate way. It is filled with drama, clean comedy, beautiful settings, and dazzling, exotic spectacles.

The overture to be offered by Enrico Leide and his Metropolitan orchestra will be "Chinese Moon." It is founded on two original Chinese themes, cleverly written and scored by Joseph Nussbaum. As the principal theme for the musical score that accompanies the feature photoplay Mr. Leide is using Rudolph Friml's waltz, "One Golden Hour," from the current Broadway musical comedy success, "The Wild Rose." Among the added screen attractions will be Ben Turpin in his latest Mack Sennett comedy, "When a Man's a Prince," and the latest issue of the Metropolitan News and Views. This entire program should prove exceptionally entertaining and will in all likelihood be enjoyed by the usual capacity audiences at the Metropolitan.

REGINALD DENNY STARS AT RIALTO

"Take It From Me," a super-comedy produced by Universal, is a brilliant starring vehicle for Reginald Denny, as patrons who visit the Rialto theater this week are expected to testify.

A short Hal Roach comedy, "Don Key, Son of Burro," is shown with "Take It From Me." Pathe News, which brings the latest great news events to Rialto patrons in picture form, changes to a new release on Thursday. Frank Turner directs the musical score.

A splendid cast assists Denny in "Take It From Me." It includes Monna Denny, sister of the star, who is a famous stage actress in England; Blanche Mehaffey, Denny's new leading woman; Ben Hendricks, Jr., Lee Moran, Ethel Wales, Lucien Littlefield, Jean Tolley, Vera Lewis, Bertram Johns, Tom O'Brien and others.

The story runs something like this:

Tom Eggett, with the aid of two spendthrift friends who have a penchant for picking losing horses rapidly, goes through the $50,000 left him by his wealthy uncle.

When the trio is broke and penniless, Tom is informed that his uncle, in a codicil in the will, has provided that his nephew shall inherit the huge Eggett department store provided he operates it for three months and shows a profit at the end of that period. In case the store loses money during the year, title to it reverts to Cyrus Crabb, present manager of the store, and an old business associate of the uncle.

The antics of Tom and his two pals to operate a huge business about which they know absolutely nothing, are quite diverting. Crabb, meanwhile, does his best to keep them from showing a profit at the end of the year.

The ending is quite unexpected and riotously funny, as are all of the productions starring the gifted Reginald Denny.

Theatre Talk

CONDUCTED by LORENZO JONES JR.

ANOTHER BIG BILL ON LOEW'S STAGE

Pursuing the new policy of bringing the best things in vaudeville to Atlanta Loew's Grand theater will present a strong array of talent on the vaudeville bill this week which will be headed by Kimberly and Page, the international stars, in their latest novelty act.

Kimberly and Page will follow McIntyre and Heath, Edna Wallace Hopper, Jane and Catherine Lee and other stars of the highest rank and will bring with them their new act which created such a hit recently at the Victoria Palace theater in London. This act will be brought here intact just as shown at the famous London theater.

Advise Lovelorn.

The new act of Kimberly and Page is entitled "The Heart Broker," and is a delightful travesty on the "Advice to the Lovelorn" columns of newspapers and magazines. Leon Kimberly and Helen Page are two of the highest ranking artists on the vaudeville stage and their appearance here assures a week of great fun.

On the same bill will be presented another one of the big acts booked by the Loew organization, Earl Lindsay's revue, a stupendous dance offering in seven scenes. This revue is right up to the minute in new songs, new dances and new comedy material. In the cast are such stars as Thomas Monahan, Dorothy Tilner with Miller and Alfen; Claire Cupps, Dolores Inman and Sybil Lee.

A Real Comedian.

George Morton, monologist of international fame, will present his latest absurdity, "Much Ado About Nothing." Morton is a comedian of sterling qualities and ranks high as a story teller. He also introduces comedy topical songs.

Comedy and music will be featured by the two versatile artists, the Two Rozellas, in a musical skit entitled "Music With a Smile." They play many different kinds of musical numbers and select a pleasing program of popular song hits.

Hubert Dyer and company in "A Laugh a Second" will open the bill and round out a big "all fun" program which promises to be one of the best of the year at this theater.

MYSTERY ACT HEADS KEITH GEORGIA BILL

The first big mystery act of the season makes its local appearance at Keith's Georgia theater Monday when Long Tack Sam opens for a week's engagement. On the screen will be shown Laura LaPlante in her latest screen feature, "Butterflies in the Rain."

The Chinese magician and wonder-worker has an act composed of an even dozen artists, each having some specialty to perform, including feats of magic, juggling, plate spinning, Chinese acrobatics and other pastimes of their native country. Long Tack Sam is a personality star as well as a dextrous conjuror and the magnificient Chinese robes with which he costumes his company, backed by stage curtains and draperies that are works of Chinese art, make an elaborate production for any stage.

Jed Dooley billed as "The Cameo Comic," has had considerable experience on the stage and before the motion picture camera. The name Dooley is well known in all theatrical circles and Jed holds up the family name with a line of comedy in which he is assisted by Miss Audree Evans.

Dave Schooler and his company of two, the Misses Peggy Hart and Estelle McMean, offers a musical treat under the title "Music Hath Charms." Schooler is famous for his piano solo playing and the company adds an extra touch to the program.

"The Three of Us" introduces Charles Harrison, Sylvia Dakin and Billy Hague in an act which has something new in the musical comedy line. It is presented in several scenes and said to be exceptionally clever. Neat dancing and some popular songs will be offered by Ervel and Dell, two comely young ladies who also play several musical instruments.

Beatrice Van has completed the adaptation of Owen Davis' farce, "Beware of Widows." Wesley Ruggles is only waiting until Laura la Plante finishes her role in "The Cat and the Canary" to start production.

'The Dove' Belasco Drama, Opens Monday at Forsyth

"The Dove," Belasco's greatest drama of the past few years, starring Miss Ellis Baker and John Warner, of the Forsyth Players, opens Monday night for a run of one week at the Forsyth.

With the two new leading figures of the players' group in outstanding roles, supported by more than 20 members of the Forsyth Players and an equal number of popular Atlanta amateur players, the incoming week holds every promise of being the banner week of the fall and winter stock season.

"The Dove" is not only among the highest-priced plays ever brought to this city, but is perhaps the most powerful drama of its kind ever produced here.

The plot of story is love and romance, with a blending of intrigue and treachery that keeps the audience intently interested at all times. It changes from a thing of beauty in one moment to a dark plot of intrigue in another second, alternating back and forth to thrill and hold and entertain its audience.

More than passing interest centers about the two new stars, Miss Baker and Mr. Warner. Both come to this city with highest recommendations and after successful seasons in some of the largest cities in the country. Miss Baker will be seen as a cabaret entertainer and Mr. Warner as an ardent lover, whose steps are beset with intrigue on the part of another lover.

The plot is laid in Lower California and Mexico, a country full of romance, daring and love. Jose Maria Tostado is a very wealthy, pleasure-loving Mexican, and extremely powerful in politics, and so his slightest wish is a command. At a party he is giving at the "Blue Pigeon," a notoriously popular cabaret, he meets Delores, who is the professional entertainer, and at once decides that he will win her, but it so happens that Delores is not of the same mind, she having fallen in love with Johnnie Powell, and so is brought about a bitter rivalry between Tostado and Johnnie Powell. The many exciting incidents that follow, the intense battle of love, the thrilling gun fights, keeps one in a state of great interest throughout the entire play. Tostado has power, wealth, control; Johnnie has manhood, honor, honest love, but no wealth, just a heart that beats true. Others in the play besides Delores, played by the new leading lady, Miss Ellis Baker; Johnnie Powell, played by the new leading man, and Tostado (Gus Forbes) there are most important parts. Alan Devitt has a most intense and dramatic part as Little Bill, an ex-jockey, who is a real pal to Johnnie; Lawrence Keating, as Mike Morovith, the proprietor of the "Blue Pigeon," who is in league with powerful Tostado; Rhea Diviley as Madge; Miss Shaler, as the daughter of an indulgent father, who allows her to win $500 at a gambling table.

GRAND TO STAGE "BLACK BOTTOM" DANCE CONTEST

Here's good news for Atlanta dancers—Loew's Grand theater will conduct a free school of dancing during the week of January 17 to instruct pupils in "The Black Bottom," the latest dance sensation and the following week of January 24 will stage a big "Black Bottom" contest with attractive prizes for winners.

Under the plan adopted a special "Black Bottom" dancer, a young woman from New York, will appear here all week of January 17 with Al Lentz orchestra and will give free lessons in the "Black Bottom" every morning of that week. This young woman will remain over the following week and stage the "Black Bottom" contest with Julian Hall's orchestra furnishing the music.

In connection with the week of instruction January 17, a special two reel film will be shown entitled "The Black Bottom Taught in Five Lessons."

More details of the contest and the list of prizes will be printed in the newspapers.

Tudor Theater.

"A REGULAR SCOUT."

Opening Wednesday at the Tudor for a four-day showing is the latest Fred Thomson picture, "A Regular Scout," in which thestar appears as the son of a woman murdered by a brutal gangster, and who seeks out the man for vengeance, finds him and in the struggle the man is killed accidentally; with Thomson learning he is the son of wealthy parents, and was on his way to the town where they lived. Thomson, embittered by the man's crime, decides to wreak vengeance on the crook's mother as the crook had on his, but arriving there learns to love the woman he had sought to revenge himself upon, becomes interested in a troop of Boy Scouts, and through them is aided in capturing a band of criminals.

The picture is fast, every moment of it bristling with intensity and action, and the part played by the Scout troop is immenely interesting and enjoyable.

Thomson's horse, Silver King, comes in for his share of the action and deserves a great amount of praise for his splendid work.

Monday and Tuesday brings to the Tudor Evelyn Brent in "The Imposter," the story of a girl who learned of her brother's error, and seeks to recover a jewel stolen by him to pay a gambling debt, runs into all sorts of adventures before she is finally successful in her plans.

Michael Arlen Success Featured at Erlanger

The important announcement is made that Charlotte Walker and Norman Hackett, two of the most popular stars on the stage, will appear in "The Green Hat" when that sensational success which broke all records at the Broadhurst theater, New York, last season, is presented at the Erlanger theater Monday night, when it will begin a week's engagement with matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

Mr. Hackett is well known to local theater fans who will recall his fine work as one of the all-star cast of "The Circle," with Amelia Bingham, Charlotte Walker, Henry E. Dixey and Wilton Lackaye, as well as the star of his own company in such notable hits as "Classmates," "The Typhoon," "Satan Sanderson," "A Double Deceiver" and other successes. He is a seasoned artist and brings to his work a fine trained mind, excellent voice and handsome presence.

Miss Walker is equally well known from her memorable performances in such plays as "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," "Warrens of Virginia," "Just a Wife," and many of David Belasco's notable successes.

In securing these players for the leading roles in "The Green Hat," local theatergoers will have an opportunity of renewing pleasant memories of their art, as well as the chance to see this sensational play under most favorable auspices, as both Mr. Hackett and Miss Walker are ideally fitted for the difficult roles of Napier Harpenden and Iris March.

Vaudeville Celebrates Centennial Anniversary

C. Roltaire Eggleston, Prominent Showman, Characterizes Present Day 'Twice and Thrice Daily.'

BY ELMO HAMBY.

"Speed" is the term which in one word summarizes the difference between modern vaudeville and the old-time variety shows, according to Manager C. Roltaire Eggleston, of the Keith-Albee Georgia theater, the city's modern vaudeville house.

In this year, the centennial of vaudeville or variety shows, it is desirable to examine some of the things which have made vaudeville more prominent than its parent, the legitimate drama.

"The modern idea is swiftness and terseness. With only about 12 minutes in the spotlighty glare, the modern variety performer must tell his story in short, swift strokes, without any of the frills and flourishes so common to old-time dramatic productions," Mr. Eggleston said.

"And this in itself was one reason for the inability of performers who were huge successes a decade ago to please the modern audience. They cannot accustom themselves to the dispatch with which offerings on the vaudeville stage are treated. Consequently, it is the younger and the newer performers who hold the coveted place in the vaudeville sun.

Constantly Changing.

"It is aptly termed variety, and it is not a variety of this or that particular bill but a swiftly changing variety of the years. Where is the professional strong man of yesterday? When have you seen a plantation number, a rathskellar, or a "Floradora" sextette number on a vaudeville stage?

"Changing swiftly and overnight, even before the taste of the public becomes apparent, vaudeville today is the stage of America." Mr. Eggleston speaks from a background of many years of theatrical experience. He knows the theater from both sides of the footlights, so to speak, having for 10 years occupied a place in the Keith-Albee hall of fame as a magician. His services as a performer are augmented by many years of successful theater management, and, consequently, he is highly qualified to pass on the respective merits of variety, or vaudeville.

Child of Drama.

Variety is the child, rather the illegitimate offspring of the drama. Since the middle of the 17th century short features were used between the acts of legitimate drama. At first it was a solitary singer, a dancer or a monologist. It later developed into troupes of varying sizes and character.

It was in 1826-'27, in the Lafayette theater in New York, that the suckling babe, variety, weaned itself from the parent drama's breast and became a more or less sickly infant, and in 1830 variety was romping about firmly established.

Phineas T. Barnum, the great circus man was attracted to this type of showmanship. He established a house on Chatham street in 1835 and exhibited therein one Joice Heth, a very old negress, who was George Washington's nurse, according to Mr. Barnum's statement. This attraction was later augmented by a juggler and equilibrist, Signor Vilvallia. Others were added and this outfit toured the country, being the forerunner of the circus, with which Barnum's name is inseparably associated.

Keith-Albee Formed.

And so the variety shows existed in more or less precarious and uncouth forms until the advent of the 80s, which period brought to vaudeville its greatest influence to this time. In 1883 B. F. Keith opened a store show next to the old Adams house in Boston, where ideas were conceived which brought into being vaudeville as it is recognized today. In 1885 Mr. Keith was joined by E. F. Albee, a former circus man, and the great present-day partnership of Keith-Albee was begun.

Gustave Walters another pioneer in the business, launched the forerunner of the great Orpheum circuit, which is the finest vaudeville circuit in the country today, in 1886 when he opened the Orpheum theater in San Francisco.

In rapid succession others came into the new venture. Poli, Murdock, Wilmer and Vincent, Gus Sun and a score of others, the majority of whom are forgotten today, addcd their names to the list of pioneers.

So, through an age of uncertainty and misunderstanding that every great venture must pass, the offspring of drama assumed proportions that dazzled its austere parent.

Modern Theater.

We come to the modern vaudeville theater. A magnificent place that offers the ultimate in beauty and a comfort that is club-like. The Keith-Albee Georgia, which is the modern variety theater in Atlanta, cannot be surpassed in pure worth. The circuit, which plays the Georgia for 60 cents plays New York at $2.20 top.

Modern dressing rooms and backstage equipment provide the same degree of comfort for the performers that is accorded the patrons. This is beyond doubt the indication that variety has prospered. To quote the rather facetious remark of one prominent vaudeville performer, "They built the box office first, then the auditorium, the foyer and the lounge rooms. Then, when they made some money they built dressing rooms for the actors."

A new theater under construction next door to the Georgia is to play vaudeville. Loew will erect a modern theater here in the near future, which gives ample proof of the fact that variety has grown from a rather puny baby to a mighty influential giant in the amusement world.

Vaudeville Uppermost.

There is at present some bewailing of the fact that drama has been pushed into an inferior place to vaudeville, but it is only the manifestation of the present day desire for speed, briefness and straight-to-the-point entertainment. Drama will always have its clientele of faithful followers, but to the mass of the people "the stage" means vaudeville.

In its hundred years of existence vaudeville has seen glorious days with still greater times in store. The vaudeville spotlight now flickers on a mass of talent. And the centennial vaudeville celebrations is the herald of a new and a mightier era in the realm of the twice-and-thrice daily.

Mickey McBan's Talent Due To Son Reflectors

MICKEY McBAN.

Mickey McBan, who plays the part of John Geste as a child in "Beau Geste," the outstanding film sensation of the year, which comes to the Erlanger theater on Monday night, January 17, for a week's engagement, did such a fine piece of acting in one of the child scenes in the picture, he was complimented by Herbert Brenon, the director. To Brenon's knowledge, the boy had had no acting experience or training that amounted to much before he was selected for his part in "Beau Geste." His rehearsal for the scene had been satisfactory so orders were given to "shoot." They did and the camera caught a registration of emotions that would give credit to many older and more experienced actor.

Brenon was amazed at the performance and asked the boy how it was he did so much better while the camera was turning than in rehearsals—how it was he could make his face like that. Mickey evidently thought he was being "bawled out," and said, "Gee, Mr. Brenon, I couldn't help making faces. Those sun reflectors were shinning right in my eyes." And rather than hurt the tender feelings of such a promising embryo John Barrymore, Brenon turned away to hide a grin.

Baker is a brunette—not a blonde, and when handed news stories of her coming here upon her rrival she exclaimed: "Just like, men; they do prefer blondes and you see they will be disappointed with me." It took some bit of consoling to assure her that brunettes really are more popular here.

But Miss Baker is extremely happy to be in Atlanta. She said so. "I've never played in the south," she said Saturday at her suite in the Biltmore hotel, "but I always wanted to come down. So here I am. I do hope I please everyone and will do my very best."

Mr. Warner, heralded as a sheikish, sheik young man, isn't by any means. He is a reg'lar fellow, of fine type, well chisled features, a pleasing manner and other attributes that are expected to make him popular at once here. He is from Massachusetts and was schooled in his home state. He has played some of the best roles in stock in this country.

Mr. Warner has a slight advantage over Miss Baker in that he has played in big road shows which have visited this city. In fact he has played here on three occasions before and knows any number of Atlanta people. He has been busy between rehearsals the past week in renewing old acquaintances and in meeting new friends.

Both new players will make their debuts in stock, however, Monday night in David Belasco's spectacular success, "The Dove."

Palace Theater.

A bill of unusual versatility and interest fills the coming week at the Palace theater in Inman Park where four big productions that have scored real hits are on the program. Corinne Griffith, in the eyes of many the most beautiful woman on the screen, starts off with "Mademoselle Modiste" on Monday and Tuesday. This great romance has never failed to please and done in the inimitable style of Miss Griffith is a really big attraction for the first two days at the community playhouse. Wonderful gowns, beautiful settings and a supporting cast of stars carries "Mademoselle Modiste" far ahead of the usual run of pictures.

Richard Dix will delight Palace audiences on Wednesday when he is to appear for the day only in a vivacious and tensely gripping play called "Men and Women." The topic alone indicates an all-absorbing plot and the unfolding of the play leaves nothing lacking that goes to make a well balanced and completely satisfying picture. Dix is at his best, and Dix at his best assures an entertainment par excellence.

To see Bebe Daniels in "Kid Boots," playing at the Palace on Thursday and Friday is to see the most swiftly exciting and wonderfully acted piece of work that the glorious Bebe has ever done. "Kid Boots" is a surprise picture. Full of tense situations, laughter evoking comedy and tender romance. The plot is unique and the thrills come thick and fast throughout play from the start to the vividly enacted climax. "Kid Boots" is a gloom chaser and a picture that has held audiences spellbound with delight.

"Too Much Money," that is the somewhat paradoxical title of the closing feature on the Palace weekly program this week. If it is possible to have too much money this picture gives a logical reason. See it and see for yourself. An hour's entertainment is a sure bet.

West End Theater.

"The Black Pirate."

In presenting "The Black Pirate," which is coming to the West End theater on Monday and Tuesday of this week, Douglas Fairbanks is up to one of his pioneering tricks again. The film is in natural color, and a vast improvement over past efforts at presenting color. Doug has picked out tones which are calculated to rest the eyes—principally browns and greens and their complements. And all the color is selected in accordance with its dramatic value. The story is an original one from the facile pen of Elton Thomas. All the "yo-howe" and the "avasts" of the seventeenth century are contained in the film. Billie Dove heads an eminent supporting cast to Doug.

Conway Tearle, popular leading man of the screen, is featured at the West End theater on Thursday and Friday in "The Sporting Lover." This is an adaptation of the Drury Lane stage hit, "Good Luck." "The Sporting Lover" gives Tearle the character of Captain Terance Connaughton, who has inherited a rusticated Irish castle and a lot of mortgages and debts from his ancestors and faces the problem of service in the war and of making his own living. The picture unfolds a story of romance, horse racing and wartime sacrifice.

One of the most interesting and picturesque phases of our national military history, namely, life at a western army post during the Indian wars, is given vivid portrayal in "Ranson's Folly," featuring Richard Barthelmess, which is billed at the West End on Wednesday only. "Ranson's Folly" is based on the celebrated novel by Richard Harding Davis. Dorothy Mackaill plays opposite the star. "The Brown Derby" is slated Saturday.

John Barrymore has completed his firsh United Artists picture, "The Beloved Rogue," in which he satisfies a life-long ambition in creating his interpretation of the character of Francois Villon, immortal French poet and housebreaker of the fifteenth century.

On the return to Hollywood of the Samuel Goldwyns and Vilma Banky, Hungarian star, the day before Christmas the president received the Goldwyn party at the capitol.

MARGARET MOORING REOPENS STUDIO

Margaret Mooring, one of the best-known dance teachers in the city, announces the reopening and enlargement of her studio, located at 640 Boulevard, N. E., which will be conducted under her personal supervision.

Miss Mooring is one of the best-known figures in Atlanta amusement circles. Her services and those of her pupils are in constant demand for banquets, conventions, assemblies and other social and business affairs.

Miss Mooring was connected with the Don Lanning permanent stock company which played musical comedy here last summer, and she has also appeared individually and with her pupils on other local stages. Her pupils have at all times manifested the results of excellent training.

In addition to stage dancing, tap, ballet and clog, Miss Mooring also teaches ballroom dancing, and has perhaps instructed more people in this line in Atlanta than any other one teacher. She has engaged additional assistants to meet the demands of her patronage.

French Foreign Legion Subject of 'Beau Geste'

Now that "Beau Geste," scheduled at Erlanger theater for the week of January 17, has brough the French Foreign Legion to the attention of America, and millions of theatergoers are familiar with the uniforms and equipment of legionnaires, a word about the origin of the Legion Etrangere and its enviable military record may not be inappropriate.

As far back as the crusaders, French and Anglo-Saxon marched together and fought to save the world for Christianity. This was the fighting body which, years, later, became known as the Legion Etrangere.

Richard Coeur-de-Lion, Philip D'Aubigne, Broglie of Broglie; Rantzan, Lowendall, the duke of Berwick, John Hitton, the son of an African king, the Scottish Stuarts and many other knights and men of note were among the ancient soldiers of the Legion.

Legion at Waterloo.

The Foreign Legion was prominent in the glory and pomp of Napolean's dazzling career. Eight regimens, created after his return from Elba, shared the fate of the world's greatest soldier at Waterloo.

Following Napolean's downfall, King Louis Phillippe, in 1830, officially created the Royal Foreign Legion "to offer refuge to those foreigners who by reason of the troubled state of Europe have come within our borders and whose presence, unemployed and harassed by necessity, may constitute a public danger." Later, 1831, the French Chamber of Deputies, decreed the Foreign Legion should not be ened on the soil of France, so the regiment went to Africa, with headquarters at Sidibel-Abbe's on the Algerian desert. Today there are close to 20,000 members serving in its units, scattered from northern Africa to Tonkin in southeastern Asia.

Patrick MacMahon, a descendant of the Irish kings, was lieutenant colonel of the Foreign Legion in 1842. During the Crimean war his troops were assigned to the task of capturing Malikoff. After hours of fighting to beat off the Russian counter-attacks, Marshal Pellisser, the French commander, sent MacMahon orders to retire. He replied, "I will hold my ground, dead or alive." He held. Ten times since, during its 96 years of existence has the legion been ordered to retreat. Ten times it has magnificently obeyed orders and refused. It doesn't retreat. It stays and dies if need be.

In 1859, MacMahon defeated the Austrians at Magenta. He was given the title of duke of Magenta and awarded the baton of a marshal of France.

In Algeria, Mexico, Tunisia, Milianah, Kabylia, Morocco, Crimia, Italy and in France during the world war constitute the scenes of the legion's most important activities. The world war emergency nullified the 1931 decree of the French chamber of deputies and allowed the legion to serve in France for the duration of the war. Its record during that period furnishes a brilliant chapter in French military history. A majority of veteran legionnaires were killed during those long years, among them some of the finest blood of the allied forces. Alan Seegar, poet, was one.

Personnel Varied.

The world war, being a national emergency, the legion's personnel at that time was made up, in the majority, of a high type of men who wanted to fight for love of France, hate of Germany or just because they wanted to be "in the swim." At the other, less harried, times, thieves, murderers, "gentlemen rankers out on a spree, damned from here to eternity;" captains of causes lost, the disheartened, the unemployed, millionaires, paupers, college professors, clergymen, and every other conceivable type of humanity are in its ranks. Some of these join for glory, others for adventure. Some seek refuge from a prison sentence or even the gallows in "the exile of the self-condemned." No man is known by name in the "Legion of Strangers." Upon enlistment he is given a number and from that day until the day of his discharge, five years later, he is addressed officially as "Legionnaire No.—."

The ordinary life is so hard and exacting that the recruiting officer often advises a day of thought to strengthen or weaken the candidate's resolve to join and stick it out. He is reminded that the penalty for desertion is death before a firing squad.

Americans Independent.

Except during the world war, there never has been more than five or six Americans serving in the legion. This is explained by John Bowe, famous American legionnaire in his "Soldiers of the Legion." He records, "Independence and servility do not go hand-in-hand. If there was anything the American excelled in it was disobedience. He knew that he must obey orders to obtain results, that obedience was the essence of good team work; but he wanted no more orders than were necessary. He was willing they should be neutral—who had not the courage to stand up for their convictions. . . . They never would patch their clothes. They did no fatigue duty they could dodge. They carried grenades in one pocket and books in another, and only saluted officers when the sweet notion moved them."

This belligerant attitude is undoubtedly an important reason why most Americans come to grief after a short period of legion enlistment.

There are two views of the Legion Etrangere. Maurice Magnus' "Memoirs of the Foreign Legion" describes the revolting life led by the legion's dregs in such detail that Knopf had to censor the original manuscript. This book is by "a successful deserter, a natural great-grandson of Kaiser Freidrich Wilhelm."

The other view, as in "Beau Geste," emphasizes wild adventure, the thrills of love, courage and self-sacrifice, and subordinates the terrible realities of dirt, disease, brutality and utter weariness which, with the sun, cause desert madness.

Every story has two sides, however, and Major Percival C. Wren, author of "Beau Geste," and Herr Magnus differ only in their point of view.

Throngs To Hear Gigli Here In Popular Priced Concert; Railroads Help Music Club

Through the courtesy of five railroad systems leading out of Atlanta, hundreds of posters will be distributed in Georgia and neighboring states in promoting the concert of Beniamino Gigli, the great Metropolitan tenor, who will sing here on January 20 at the auditorium, according to the announcement made Saturday by Mrs. Wilmer L. Moore, vice president of the Atlanta Music club, which is sponsoring the event. These lines are the N., C. and St. L., the Central of Georgia, Southern, Seaboard Air Line and the Georgia railroad.

"Most Atlantans have come to realize the tremendous civic advertising value of the regular appearance of world famous artists here, such as Gigli," Mrs. Moore said. "Of course, the club was especially fortunate in securing Gigli, almost, as it were, by accident. His concert is not one of the civic series of the Atlanta Music club, but is an additional attraction purely for the public benefit. Tickets for the series cannot be used for the Gigli concert.

To Benefit City.

"The great tenor has never before sung in Atlanta in concert and never before has he sung here for less than grand opera prices. In presenting him in a popular concert at popular prices, we feel that we have performed a great civic benefit. His management has been most generous in permitting us to do this.

"Gigli is as distinctive as a concert artist as a grand opera star. Not since the days of Adelina Patti, in the early nineties, has a concert artist appeared who has drawn a $10,000 house in New York. Gigli's last concert at the Century in New York drew within $500 of this amount.

"The popularity of both artists rests in their generosity. It was the custom of Patti to sing from 12 to 20 times when she appeared before her audience. Since Gigli's audiences seemingly never tire of his beautiful voice he is appreciative and courteous enough to sing as much as the audiences demands, which often runs into as many as 25 appearances on one program."

Outside Assist.

Over 100 music clubs in the state federation have been asked to cooperate in promoting the Gigli concert and hundreds of out-of-town patrons are expected for the performance. In view of the heavy demand for tickets expected, the box office will be opened one week in advance of the concert instead of three days as is the custom of the club. Out-of-town orders will be given first choice on the date of their arrival. Orders must be accompanied by a certified check or money order. The box office will open Thursday, January 13, at 9 o'clock on the first floor of the Cable Piano company. Tickets are priced at $1, $1.50, $2, and $2.50. The $2.50 seats include the first 13 rows of the arena and the seats in the boxes.

Alliance Francais Meeting Takes Place Here in February

Lovers of French literature, art and culture from several Southern states will gather in Atlanta early in February for a convention which will be exceptionally important, not from the number of delegates, but because of the distinguished men and women it will attract, according to an announcement by Frederic J. Paxon, president of the Atlanta Convention and Tourist bureau.

This will be the meeting of the Southern group of the Federation d'Alliance Francaise, or the French Alliance, which has a particularly large and active organization in Atlanta. The federation, which has about 300 local units in the United States, is composed of men and women interested in the French language and the literature, art, history and culture of France, and its honorary president is the French ambassador to the United States. It is expected that about 30 Southern groups or local organizations will be represented at at the Atlanta meeting, which will begin Thursday, February 3, and continue for three days, with its sessions at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

Social Affairs.

The convention will be marked by several social affairs, including a luncheon at the home of Charles Loridans, president of the Atlanta group; a dinner at "Wingfield," the home of Mrs. John Marshall Slaton, vice president, and a tea at the home of Mrs. Edgar Neely.

One of the most prominent of the visitors will be Mme. Andre Alphandery, of Paris, who will lecture at the opening session, on the evening of February 3, on "The Land of Sunshine in France," describing the French province, its people and its literature and art. Mme. Alphandery is the daughter of Senator Cremieux, of France, was reared in a family of scientists and men of public affairs, and is noted for her salon in Paris where famous folk gather. She was one of the first to interest herself in the care of the abandoned children of France, and for her work she was awarded the cross of the Legion of Honor. She is visiting America on a lecture tour.

The first business session will be held at the Biltmore at 10 o'clock on the morning of February 4. Charles Loridans, who is vice president of the federation for the Southern states and president of the local group, will welcome the delegates. Professor Charles Downer, official delegate from the College of the City New York, will speak on "The Clarity of the French Language." At noon the visitors and members of the local group will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. Loridans at luncheon. In the afternoon the session will be addressed by M. Auguste Viatte, special delegate from the French circle of the Hunter college, New York. He will discuss the literary career of Paul Claudell, recently named ambadassador from France to the United States, but who has not yet accepted the post. M. Caudell is recognized as one of the foremost living poets of France. The business session will be addressed by Felix Weill, grand secretary of the federation, who will discuss the work and aims of the organization. In the evening the delegates and mebers will go to the hame of Governor and Mrs. John Marshall Slaton to be their guests at dinner. Speakers at the dinner will be Mr. R. S. Driout, of the Military college of South Carolina at Charleston, and Professor J. Longstret, of the University of Georgia.

Morning Session.

The morning session Saturday, February 5, will be addressed by Professor Gilbert Chinard, of Johns Hopkins university, Baltimore, on "The Essential Characteristics of French Literature." A business session will follow. At noon the members of the Atlanta circle will give a luncheon at the Biltmore to the delegates. In the afternoon the visitors will be given a motor trip to Stone Mountain and will return for tea at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Neely.

Officers of the Atlanta circle of the Alliance Francaise are: Charles Loridans, president; Mrs. John M. Slaton and Mrs. H. M. Atkinson, vice presidents; Mrs. H. M. Davison, treasurer, and Mrs. Laure Lenoir, secretary. The board of management is composed of Mrs. Edgar Neely, Mrs. Thomas Erwin, Mrs. H. E. Newson, N. A. Goodyear and Paul Seydell. Circles in the Southern group which are expected to send delegates include those at Hollins college, Hollins, Va.; Roanoke, Va.; Sullins college, Bristol, Tenn.; Randolph-Macon college, Norfolk, Va.; North Carolina college at Greensboro; Davidson college, Davidson, N. C.; Ste. Genevieve-in-the-Pines, Asheville, N. C.; Raleigh, N. C.; Columbia, S. C.; Agnes Scott college, Decatur, Ga.; Brenau college, Gainesville, Ga.; University of Georgia, Emory university; Little Rock, Ark.; Macon, Ga.; Savannah, Ga.; Chattanooga, Tenn.; Nashville, Tenn.; Memphis, Tenn.; Louisville, Ky.; Birmingham, Ala.; Muscle Shoals, Ala.; Natchitoches, La.; New Orleans, La. and Houston, Texas.

Forsyth Patrons Will Meet New Stars at Big Reception

TUESDAY MATINEE CROWDS WILL BE ENTERTAINED

Forsyth theater patrons at the matinee next Tuesday afternoon will be guests at an informal back-stage reception immediately following the conclusion of "The Dove," the week's play, where they will meet members of the Forsyth Players and generally see how the popular players look from the business side of the footlights.

Souvenirs will be given ladies at the reception and everything will be done to make patrons and players feel at home behind the curtains.

On Thursday of next week another reception will be held when the same informal program will be carried out, and at intervals during the coming few weeks such impromptu affairs will be staged to keep players and the public more closely allied.

Two of the faces which patrons will see this week will be very few ones—Miss Ellis Baker and John Warmer, leading woman and leading man of the group appearing for their first time in stock here.

Miss Baker is a demure, charming young woman, a native of Michigan, and educated in the best and most exclusive schools for young women in the east. She comes to this city from a series of engagements in St. Louis, New York and other big cities and with a record that reads very much like a Broadway star of the first water.

Miss Namie Davis Writes Of Xmas at Tallulah School

Miss Nannie Davis, principal of the federation's school, "The Light in the Mountain," at Tallulah, writes of Christmas in the following letter.

To our dear Georgia clubwomen and many friends: The Christmas spirit prevailed at Tallulah one month before the notable day arrived. Christmas projects were in every classroom. Christmas carols were learned. Everything pertaining to the birth of Christ was studied from the Bible. Beautiful little Christmas plays were given and each room was decorated with evergreens and Christmas trees.

Old Santa "did himself proud" at Tallulah this Christmas. He gathered his gifts from the four quarters of the continent and poured them out abundantly upon these lonely mountain children, who so earnestly believe in and trust him. He went by Atlanta and brought oranges from the North Peachtree Road Woman's club and candy for all the stockings from the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs. He met B. C. Broyles and inspired him to send for the Atlanta Elks and the Georgia Elks association, a great package of toys which helped to bring the cheer of the season, not only to the 200 children in the school, but with some to go home on December 20 into the remote mountain regions for other little children who had never seen such pretty "gimcracks." As the good wintry saint swept through Atlanta, Lewis H. Beall, of Sears, Roebuck & Co., gave him a cheerful hail and asked that he give a lift to a marvelous load of toys which must get somehow to Tallulah. Gladly the old saint packed in these splendid toys and lots of dolls, and such dolls! Some were as big as our little children. Nunnally & Co., sweetened up his pack with chocolates dainty enough for a king, while Rogers company sent goodies of various kinds, fit for a queen, and nuts to crack on long winter evenings. Papershell pecans from the Blackshear Woman's club, from the Lively farm at Thomasville, and from our "Darling" friends in Waycross. A turkey and apples came from the patrons of the school near at hand, which met the actual Christmas dinner need of the 15 children who remained at the school for Christmas day.

Founder Honored.

For the Christmas tree of December 20, which was for all the children, came all sorts of fruits in memory of our dear founder, Mrs. Mary Ann Lipscomb, from her devoted and ever faithful children. Later came more dolls from Mrs. W. D. Ellis, Jr. As the gift sleigh passed Chicago, Mrs. Ferdinand Weigand flung aboard the most wonderfully chosen gifts for all the children who stay through Christmas at the school. Such lovely dolls were here, too. Surely no little arms in this section will ache for want of a Christmas doll this year.

There are few places where so many lonely shut-in folks can be reached, as through this central point, and very many of them were happier this year than since the great drouths began to take even their little from them.

The organizations of the state were splendid in their remembrance.

Besides the Elks and the Atlanta Federation of Clubs the loveliest of packages came from each of the chapters of the Colonial Dames of Georgia, who thus remembered not only their own scholarship pupil, but a number of other girls, too.

The Georgia division of Business and Professional Women asked each of their clubs for a money gift which, put together, will furnish substantial comforts for their little girl. Argonne post, No. 1, American Legion, never forgets its scholarship boy.

The fourth district made Christmas for its pupil; the junior order of Old-Fashioned Women sent a lovely box for theirs, as did the Rhododendron club, the College Park Woman's club, the Christmas Sewing club of Atlanta, and the Atlanta debutantes of 1925.

Other Donations.

The State Association for Education of Georgia Mountaineers sent a box of Christmas cheer and money to add more, and Mrs. V. C. Freligh, our fairy godmother, sent her usual check to be spent "for a good time" for the stay-at-school children. Last year, you may remember, that beside the party and certain other joys, the girls chose a pair of overalls each as their special Christmas indulgence. Surely nobody knows what will give pleasure. This Christmas Mrs. Freligh gave the party and enabled a number of the stay-at-schools to go on visits where they were invited and even some who had homes, to travel to them. Not content with this remembrance, she sent the gift of $100 from a Boston friend whose only request is that he receive no thanks. We shall comply with his request but loud in our hearts, oh my! Mrs. Harry L. English sent a generous check for Christmas cheer.

All the scholarship donors generously remembered their beneficiaries, sending not only Christmas pretties and goodies, but in many cases substantial gifts of clothing or money to be invested in shoes and clothes to bring warmth and comfort long after the Christmas of 1926 had slipped into the land of beautiful memories.

Other Remembrances.

Among those remembering with particular generosity, their scholarship pupils, were Lewis H. Beck, Mrs. Howard H. McCall, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Clark Bradley, Mrs. Kelly Evans, Mrs. James E. Hickey, Mrs. Henry L. Jackson, William S. Witham, Mrs. Rufus T. Dorsey, Mrs. Felton Jones, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Chapin, Mrs. F. M. Robinson, Mrs. H. A. Watts, Hugh M. Willet, Mrs. Lawrence Willet, Mrs. Lamar Rucker, Mrs. John F. MacDougald, Mrs. Inez Wilkins Jones, Mrs. Richard P. Brooks, Mrs. Blenett Lee, Mrs. Morris Brandon, Mrs. A. O. Granger, Mrs. F. H. Brownell, Mrs. Clark Howell, Mrs. Smith D. Pritchett, Mrs. Anne Bates Walsh, Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Stone.

Scores of gifts and messages of cheer must fail of individual mention for lack of space, but be assured that all were fully and heartily appreciated. Altogether it was a marvelous season of happiness and good-will and all those who had homes went away rejoicing with good soles under their feet and happy hearts in their breasts because of the spirit of Christmas joy which came to them through the loving kindness of their many faithful friends. With thanks from them all and best wishes for a happy new year for each and every one of you,

ANNIE CARRINGTON DAVIS,
Principal Tallulah Falls Industrial School, Inc.

Mrs. Duvall Plans Music Luncheon For Augusta Club

Mrs. Clarence Duvall, chairman of music for the Augusta Woman's club, arranged a "How to Enjoy Music" luncheon last Tuesday.

The guests were seated at six tables in the club rooms adorned with flowers, and at each guest's place was a small Georgia R. R. bank calendar on which was inscribed a suitable verse. Mrs. David Nachman, president, presided and read a beautiful New Year's greeting to the clubwomen written by Mrs. A. H. Brenner, to which Mrs. William H. Howard made an appropriate response in verse, and offered the blessing. Mrs. Nachman then introduced Mrs. Howard as chairman of fine arts who in turn introduced Mrs. Duvall, paying her a charming tribute as their "talented, enthusiastic and efficient chairman of music."

Mr. Bishop Sings.

Mrs. Duvall introduced James Bishop, whose magnificent dramatic tenor gave delight with his singing of "Mother O' Mine" and "The Task." Mr. Bishop's clear enunciation emphasized the lovely words of both songs, and his accompaniment on the piano added much to the beauty of his voice. Luncheon was then served by Mrs. A. H. Brenner and her committee and at the close Mrs. Duvall introduced Miss Dorothy Halbert, music director at the Tubman.

Miss Halbert gave the clubwomen one of the most instructive talks and illustrated the subject "How to Listen to Music" by a number of selections on the piano which she rendered with a brilliance, expression and finished technique that held her audience enthralled.

Miss Halbert said that music has the triple appeal—to the feet, the heart and the head, or in other words the physical, emotional and intellectual. She illustrated the foot appeal with a spirited rendition of Detts' "Juba;" the heart appeal by Liszt's exquisite "Lieberstraum in A flat," and the head appeal by a selection by Bach in "D minor." Her closing number illustrated the combined appeal of the physical, the emotional and intellectual by a brilliant rendition of Chopin's B flat Minor Scherzo.

Benefit Party.

Before the luncheon ended Mrs. Nachman asked the support of all present in the benefit card party which will be given by the Woman's club in the near future, and in their artistic event of the year, the recital to be given in March by Mrs. Ernest McDowell.

A number of visitors were then introduced, including Mrs. A. H. Smith and Mrs. C. F. Hunt, of the Thomson Woman's club; Mrs. Alrich, of Poughkeepsie; Mrs. Springer, Atlanta; Mrs. Melton, Dahlonega; Mrs. John Shanahan, New York; Mrs. Everton and Mrs. P. E. O'Connor.

Mrs. John F. MacDougald, chairman of club institute for the fifth district, Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs announces that plans are complete for the district club institute which will be held Thursday, January 20, beginning at 10 o'clock, at the Atlanta Woman's club.

The object of the insitute is to study club methods, publicity values, public speaking, parliamentary practice and to acquire a more thorough understanding of the functioning of the general and state federations. Such an institute will be a positive factor in creating interest and promoting efficiency among the women of the district and it will stimulate interest in the state club institute held annually at the University of Georgia, in Athens.

Mrs. Rucker to Speak.

Mrs. Lamar Rucker, of Athens, past president of the club institute of the University of Georgia and a leader in club activities in the state, will speak on "Publicity Rules for Writing," and on club institute work.

Mrs. Hamilton Douglas will conduct a drill in the elementary and fundamental parliamentary rules so necessary to club presidents in conducting meetings.

Mrs. John K. Ottley, president of the board of trustees of Tallulah Falls school, will address the institute on the "Georgia Federation." Her address will acquaint clubwomen with the valuable points of service and development of this constructive body of organized women.

Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, director for Georgia in the general federation, will explain and outline the work of the general federation. Her talk will acquaint the district presidents and their officers with the manner in which the general federation functions. Miss Carolyn Cobb will give a practical talk on "Public Speaking."

Urges Attendance.

Mrs. Oscar Palmour, president of the fifth district, urges all district presidents and their officers as well as all district chairmen to attend.

Albany Woman's Club Proposes Many Changes

The Albany Woman's club proposes to make the club a clearing house for welfare and charitable work in Dougherty county, including associated charities, Kiwanis clinic, Red Cross, Hospital Aid association and Y. M. C. A. auxiliary, functioning through the club, with a chairman appointed for each committee.

Several changes have been made in the by-laws, the principal one being that members can only be taken into the club twice yearly, October and January, instead of all through the year. Twenty-two members were recorded in October and there is a waiting list to be added in January.

The beautifying and civics department is cooperating with other women's organizations in planting magnolia trees along the highway through Dougherty county. The home economics department sponsors luncheons, woman's exchange, and conducted a course in home decorating under the direction of Mrs. E. D. Herring. The third Thursday of each month is the literary meeting and it is the purpose of the Albany club to sponsor a womans exchange.

Boston Twentieth Century Club Cares For 67 Children

The Twentieth Century club of Boston sponsored a Christmas tree for 67 children and reports that the junior club has undertaken to send books to the sufferers at Mt. Alto throughout the year.

Mrs. Obie Jones, secretary of the club, returned for active service at the last meeting, having been absent on account of illness of her family. Miss Marie Groover was hostess to the club at the last meeting, with Mrs. J. A. Horn, the president, in the chair.

Mrs. Warthen Finishes Series On Budget and Insurance

BY MRS. OBER D. WARTHEN
State Chairman.

Even though your newly constructed budget provides for life insurance in one or more of its many forms for the benefit of the family in general, are you laying something away for the education of your children?

In this "age of specialization" a college education is very necessary to the ambitious boy and girl. Statistics show that the largest per cent of the successful men and women of our country today are college trained. They also show that the majority of our families are not able, when the time comes, to send their children to college at all and that the largest number of those who do go receive help from some other source to complete their studies.

Facing these facts, does it not behoove every parent of young children to begin planning immediately to take care of this contingency?

Two Methods.

There are two methods from which to choose—the savings bank and educational endowment insurance. Insurance is to be preferred for two reasons. First, insurance demands systematic attention, and second, the whole amount is assured even though you may, through accident, disease or death, be able to make but one payment. By the savings bank method if you had only deposited $20 to the fund, in case of calamity, $20 is all that you can draw, but, by the other plan, $1,000 would be available.

The above statement does not mean that $1,000 is all that you can contract for. Your policy may be for any amount you want and several children may be educated on the proceeds from one policy.

A child may be insured as early as three years (earlier by some companies) for a certain amount payable in 15 years or at the age of 18. When the policy matures payments will be made yearly, quarterly or monthly as has been arranged.

In case of death or disability of parent, no further premiums are due and the full amount will be paid at stated time with interest compounded annually. Or the whole amount is paid at once to a guardian if contract so states. If a double-indemnity clause has been included, double the amount will be paid. The original amount at college age of child and the rest to the family immediately.

If the child does not live to take advantage of policy another beneficiary can be named and arrangements made to suit conditions.

This policy draws a yearly dividend which may be applied to premiums or left on deposit drawing interest and withdrawn at any time or used to pay premiums in lean years.

Of course when the child reaches the 'teen age it is too late for a policy of this kind, but a regular endowment policy may be taken and in case of death of parent before child is of college age enough to cover his educational expenses can be left with the company and paid by them at the proper time and in desired manner with accrued interest. By this plan a child is assured of its rightful inheritance even if orphaned.

Mothers! father! Do not take chances in this important matter, make sure! Include an educational policy in your budget now.

Another Lesson.

There is another great lesson which can be taught a boy through insurance—that of thrift. Explain the advantages of insurance and have him take a policy and make it his duty to pay at least a part of the premiums.

Tell him how it affords family protection, how it will increase his credit and "provide funds for emergency and opportunity." Show him how it will influence the opinions of business men concerning his character and you may be sure that the regular habits which insurance calls for instills a stability of character that a mere savings account can never do.

Study insurance and take advantage of its many opportunities for your protection and advancement.

Beautiful America Club Engages in Many Activities

The Beautiful America club, of Bu-Orr and Mrs. M. B. Mathews was ford, with Mrs. Horace G. Garner in the chair as president, heard Mrs. Pat Bradley, the treasurer, report $56.20 in the treasury, and Mrs. H. W. Christian's report that $9.85 was in the library treasury. Mrs. John Carter, chairman of the library committee, reported that $25 worth of books had recently been added to the library, and that the children drew out every book the day the list was ready.

The Lizzie Hamilton park, named in honor of the first club president, has been much improved by the park committee, with Miss Lizzie Hamilton as chairman, and that 451 feet of hedge, 46 shrubs, three trees and a number of rose bushes had been added.

The club voted to send a box of canned fruit to Tallulah Falls school as a Christmas offering. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. J. C. joint hostess.

Mrs. E. A. Wilbanks, chairman of music under fine arts, had charge of the program which celebrated the 100th anniversary of Beethoven's death. "The life of Beethoven" was read by Miss Evlyn Fleeman; piano solo, "Sonata Pathetique," Beethoven, Miss Aline Eden; "Ten Rules for Music Club to Follow," Miss Ertha Garner; "Ten Rules for Music in the Home," Mrs. Joe Bradley; piano trio, "Feast of the Rose," Mrs. E. A. Wilbanks and daughters, Victoria and Annie Grace; "America's Musical Renaissance," Mrs. L. Smith; piano duet, "Lustspret Overture," Mrs. E. A. Wilbanks.

Mrs. Dallas Martin and Mrs. Walter Aldredge invited the club to meet with them at the home of Mrs. Martin in January.

Georgia Women Will Attend Executive Board Meeting

The meeting of the executive board of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, to be held in Washington, January 12, 13 and 14, will differ from former meetings in that the states will be featured through the state directors. The board consists of the officers, state directors, trustees and department chairmen. State presidents and division chairmen attend board meetings as conference members.

Through Mrs. Brantley, Mrs. Richardson and Mrs. Inman Georgia will be heard from and will take her place in the general federation that she has always held since the days when Georgia clubs belonged to the general federation and a state organization had been perfected.

The general federation will give a reception at which the senators and representatives from the states will be entertained. Mrs. Brantley, Mrs. Richardson and Mrs. Inman have forwarded their cards to be enclosed in the invitations to the Georgia senators and representatives.

Mrs. Alonzo Richardson will give in a short report a resume of Georgia's work and enter into the discussion of the problems of the states as seen by the directors. Mrs. Sherman in a recent communication referred to that section of the federation by-laws which says: "The director shall be the official communication between the general federation and the states." It is with this idea that the directors are expected to take their respective states to the general federation board and share in the problems that confront other states.

The board meeting proper will be preceded by two days of committee meetings and conferences. The enlargement of the Federation News will be an important subject discussed and there will be discussion of the several types of propaganda now being directed towards women's organizations.

President Coolidge and Mrs. Coolidge will receive the members of the board and on January 12 Mrs. Herbert Hoover will entertain them at tea. Mrs. Virginia White Speel, president of the state presidents, will entertain with a conference luncheon at her home. A visit to the bureau of standards, called the "house of wonders" also is scheduled. The Mayflower has been designated as the official hotel. The Atlanta members of the board always visit Wilson's tomb and at the last meeting Georgia and Massachusetts placed wreaths on the tomb.

Covington Club Will Observe 'Georgia Day' by Product Dinner

The January meeting of the Covington Woman's club was held in the library Tuesday afternoon, with Mrs. S. L. Waites, president, presiding, who opened the meeting with New Year's greetings to the club and a card of greetings was read from Mrs. Belle Knox Rogers, formerly of Covington, and a loyal club member, now of Titusville, Fla.

Mrs. Harmon McDonald, treasurer, reported a balance on hand of $254.93 after all indebtedness had been paid, which was a gratifying report. Club voted to send check to city for second installment on pavement in front of library. A contribution of $5 was made to students' aid fund. The legislative committee, Mrs. W. C. Clark, chairman, reported the jail painted and courthouse in much more satisfactory condition.

The library committee, Mrs. C. A. Sockwell, librarian, reported the roof in good condition and $3 collected from books on pay table.

Mrs. Robert R. Fowler was given a rising vote of thanks and corresponding secretary instructed to send note of thanks for a large donation of boys' books to the library.

February 12 being Georgia day, the club will serve a Georgia product dinner with the following committee in charge of dinner and program for the day: Mrs. W. C. Clark, chairman; Mrs. W. Trox Bankston and Mrs. R. E. Everitt. Mrs. A. C. Vining having resigned as chairman of the February committee, Mrs. E. J. Dennard was elected to fill her place. Mrs. W. C. Clark and Mrs. Luke Robinson were appointed to see the county commissioners in reference to raising the librarian's salary.

Mrs. L. H. Smith and Mrs. C. C. Estes were elected to membership. At the conclusion of the business session the meeting was turned over to the program committee, Mrs. J. E. Phillips, chairman; Mrs. J. N. Wagner, Mrs. Joseph Siegel, Mrs. H. A. Anderson, Mrs. J. C. Upshaw and Mrs. C. E. My Mother's Garden

Here bloomed her cherished garden long ago,
Here the phlox and purple larkspur loved to grow.
And the evening primrose smiled
When its topaz lights beguiled
The night moths with the magic of its glow.

Here the lilacs bloomed enchanting, with its scent,
And the crimson salvia flamed,
And the eglantine was famed
For the rare old English perfume that it lent.

But now, where Love once lingered on his way,
The weeds of Time are rioting, they say.
Only here and there a bloom
Left to blossom through the gloom
Like a star upon the breast of Yesterday.

Chairman of Junior Memberships for Eighth District, G. F. W. C.

Mrs. Hatcher Heads Harlem Woman's Club.

The annual election of officers of the Harlem Woman's club, of Harlem was held Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. C. Clary, president during 1926. Interesting reports from the retiring officers, and from several of the chairmen of committees were read.

The officers for 1927 are as follows: President, Mrs. R. R. Hatcher; vice president, Mrs. W. E. Hatcher; recording secretary, Mrs. H. M. Dunaway; corresponding secretary, Mrs. O. T. Harper; treasurer, Mrs. John Lamkin.

The outstanding feature of the year's work has been the founding of a nucleus for a town circulating library, which will be formally opened in the near future. It is hoped this will fill a long-felt want in the neighborhood. While the high school has the beginning of an excellent library, this is not at all times available to the general public, and there is no reason why the new library of the Woman's club should not supplement the use of that of the high school.

Mrs. Wey Makes Student Aid Plea

The friends of our student aid will doubtless be interested to learn that loans were made January first to 22 Georgia girls amounting in round numbers to $2,000. Ten of these were second payments on loans, and 12 were new loans.

This reduces the balance on hand to an amount all too small to meet pledges already made and the many applications for summer schools and 1927-28 loans.

Thus far only five clubs have sent gifts this year, hence we must urge that gifts or pledges be sent us at as early a date as possible, so that we may know upon how much we can count for future loans. The amount of $1,500 has been paid on loans since October 1, 1926, and quite a number have close accounts. Thus far, $1,901 has been sent us by friends of student aid.

The following extract is from one now studying at Teachers' college in New York, who was put through the University of Georgia by student aid, will testify as to the spirit and purpose of many of "our girls:"

"I am enjoying my work this year. There are so many new people to meet and so many new ideas to grasp. Every day I feel grateful to the women of Georgia for establishing the Student Aid foundation which makes it possible for girls to study who otherwise could not go to school. I am planning to come back to Georgia for two reasons: First, I just naturally love Georgia; second, if there is anything in me worth while Georgia needs it. With every good wish to you for the New Year. May it be full of rich blessings."

Since we are loaning each year upwards of $5,000, the necessity for gifts large and small is evident, and we trust that those who understand the nature of such an investment as student aid will respond generously to this plea for the wherewithal.

Mrs. Nachman Represented Federation at Conference

By Ella A. Baxter, Editor Woman's Department of Augusta Chronicle.

"That it is necessary for the American people, both men and women, to familiarize themselves with national and international affairs, and to create a public sentiment for a peaceful solution of national and international disputes and differences rather than to resort to war, and to elect leaders who will substitute peaceful methods for the solution of problems, was the thought most forcibly impressed on the delegates to the recent peace conference held in Washington," says Mrs. David Nachman, who represented the clubwomen of Georgia at the conference. Nine women's organizations were represented at the conference organization whose membership amounts to several millions. There were 350 delegates present and at each session there were at least 500 in attendance, among them many notable and distinguished men as well as women who came to the conferences during the five days' sessions.

Mrs. Nachman says that there was no intention expressed at the conference of urging disarmament on the United States government unless all other nations disarm, that the most ardent advocates for peace did not desire to see the government unprotected at any time, and the general belief expressed that disarmament can only come by a universal agreement in this direction.

War Prevention Methods.

The conference stressed four methods by which they believe that war can be prevented, namely:

An international code of law; the establishment of a court of justice to administer the law; arbitral treaties by which disputes can be settled by means of arbitration, and treaties of neutrality by which it would become impossible for nations to furnish arms and ammunition to belligerent nations.

The League of Nations was highly commended at the conference, and one of the interesting speeches heard, Mrs. Nachman says, was given by a well-known American who had spent the past summer in Geneva, and who related to the conference many highly interesting examples of the way the league is functioning, and the successful manner in which it has already prevented the settlement of disputes on foreign soil by war, although as the speaker impressed upon them, the league is still in its infancy and will accomplish much more with each year's existence.

An outstanding occasion during the conference was the "Philippine morning" when two natives spoke eloquently for self-government and a number of strong speeches were made, one against the independence of the islands, by the republican congressman from Massachusetts, and one for independence, by Representative Gilbert, of Kentucky, democrat.

"Puts Georgia on Map."

It was during the heated Mexican debate that offense was given by the criticisms of the speaker directed against the American government, and it was on this occasion that Mrs. Nachman "put Georgia on the map" by rising to speak against criticisms of the government.

Among the distinguished men who addressed the conference were General Tasker Bliss, member of the supreme war council in France; Dr. James Shotwell, of Columbia university; Congressman Theodore Burton Norman Angell, the great English publicist, author of "The Great Illusion;" Dr. MacDonald, chairman of the executive committee, foreign policy association; Dr. Sze, Chinese minister; Chester Rowell, of the University of California, who gave one of the most interesting talks of the conference on the subject, "Why There Are Constant Rumors of War Between America and Japan." Dr. Parker Thomas Moon, author, lecturer, professor of international relations and many other of the most prominent men in this and other countries.

Mrs. Nachman says that a spirit of harmony and intense enthusiam pervaded the conference, and every member left Washington pledged to do her part in arousing a sentiment for a peaceful method of settlement of international difficulties rather than a resort to arms. The women of America feel that this conference will be a powerful influence for peace in the future, and that the influence of millions of representative women must result in a sentiment being aroused that is opposed to war as the final settlement of national and international disputes, rather than a legal arbitration.

Mrs. Sherman Will Attend Albany Council

Mrs. A. P. Brantley, of Blackshear, president of the Georgia Federation, leaves Monday for Washington, D. C., to attend the conference of state presidents Tuesday, and attend the meeting of board of directors of the general federation.

Mrs. Brantley has received a telegram from Mrs. John Sherman, general federation president, stating that she would attend the council meeting in March of the Georgia federation which meets in Albany.

National Drama Week Scheduled in February.

National Drama week, February 13 to 19, sponsored by the community drama division of the General Federation of Women's Clubs and the Drama League of America, is a nation-wide effort to educate the public to appreciate and demand good drama and to stress the importance of the theater as a social force and as a great educational movement.

Mrs. Pearl Bennett Broxam, of Manquoketa, Iowa, the federation's community drama chairman, says that a new interest is everywhere manifest in community drama. People in small towns and in suburban communities are discovering their own creative genius and are learning that being the players instead of the audience is twice as enjoyable, hence the great revival of interest in amateur theatricals.

Hundreds of clubs already have plans for the celebration of Drama week, either by presenting a play; by having a play read, each member being assigned a part in advance; having a play read by a professional, or having a noted and qualified speaker on some phase of the drama. Drama conferences and drama classes are planned, play-writing contests are announced and drama programs will be sent out by radio. Detailed suggestions for club celebrations and programs may be secured from the Drama League of America, 59 East Van Buren street, Chicago.

Art Division Announces Plans.

At the meeting of the art division of the Atlanta Woman's club Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, Mrs. Thomas English, who is an authority on the subject of stained glass and whose family has been engaged in the making of stained glass windows for years, will give an interesting talk. Her subject will be "The Glory That Is Glass, Past and Present."

Few Atlantans know that such windows are being made here in the city. In the following weeks the art division will visit the studio in which these windows are being made and see this work being done, from the original designing to the completed work.

Beginning the first week in February the art division will sponsor a series of lectures to be given by Miss Lucy Stanton, the well-known Atlanta artist, miniature painter and authority on art history. This series of lectures will last for eight weeks and among the subjects to be discussed by Miss Stanton are art of Holland, Belgium, France, Spain and Italy.

Annual W. C. T. U. Hold Fast Roll Call

The national president of the Woman's Christain Temperance Union, Mrs. Ella Alexander Boole, of Brooklyn, N. Y., sends the following New Year's greeting to nearly a million constituents:

"A new year is here. We will tread new paths. We will face new responsibilities. Be not afraid. Our God is the same yesterday, today and forever. He will guide in the future as in the past. He will give grace and strength according to our need. Our task is to enter the open doors, to assume the new responsibilties, and as good soldiers to face whatever is in store for us. With trust in God and firmness in the right, let us "Hold Fast and Go Onward."

THOUSANDS OF PRAYER SERVICES THURSDAY.

The W. C. T. U. plans an educational campaign to cause the people to want to elect a dry congress and other officials, and does not contemplate a share in any political intrigue or maneuver to secure the election of candidates.

Prayer has ever been the practice and source of power of the organization.

Therefore, according to the custom of beginning the new year in prayer, the 20,000 local unions in the United States met Thursday to pray for God's blessings upon the leaders and the entire membership that they may have wisdom in the development and execution of plans to promote the cause of prohibition. Those charged with the responsibility for making and enforcing the prohibition law, the law violaters, both the makers, sellers and buyers of illicit liquor, were not forgotten in these prayers.

In some places large congregations met for prayer in churches, in other places, cottage prayer meetings were held, as in Macon, where a dozen groups met in as many homes. Members who could not attend these gatherings, joined in the prayers wherever they were.

In Georgia the helpful program prepared by Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, the national W. C. T. U. evangelistic director, and published in the current issue of The Georgia W. C. T. U. Bulletin, together material for carrying it out, was used.

"The whole purpose of prayer is to change things that need changing," and the W. C. T. U. expects to hold fast and go forward through continued prayer.

GREAT ENTHUSIAM OVER ROLL CALL.

"Action" is the W. C. T. U. keynote for 1927. "Hold fast and go forward" the slogan. It is not what we think, not what we feel, not what we plan but what we do that counts. Thinking and planning are necessary, but of little value unless followed by well directed action.

Following on the heels of prayer comes action. In this state the action is the hold fast roll call which is being inaugurated upon the initative of the state president, Mrs. Marvin Williams, Atlanta. On one day between the 6 and 16, every one of the nearly seven thousand 1926 members will be given an opportunity to answer "here" when her name is called. The response to be made with her dollar annual dues, and she may also make a contribution to the budget to cover the operations of the W. C. T. U.

Great enthusiasm exists among the members, and unions are vieing with each other to be first to re-inlist every member. The standing of the unions will be announced at a great mass meeting on the seventh anniversary of National Constitutional Prohibition the 20, at Wesley Memorial church in Atlanta.

VICTORY DAY, THE 16TH.

Sunday, January 16, is to be observed as Victory Day, the seventh anniversary of the 18th amendment, by meetings of every union in the United States. In churches in the evening or by general mass meetings in the afternoon. Preparation is under way to bring this celebration the best membership, the best speakers and singers, the best rejoicing for our victory, the best faith and optimism for the year 1927. Prohibition will be the dominant thought of the day, and many will take advantage of the public psychology and make the theme of the address:

"Yes, It's the Law—and It's a Good Law."

Prohibition is the best method of dealing with the liquor problems and the W. C. T. U. advises, let this be our theme. It is the unanswerable argument.

"Announce it, speak it, sing it, advertise it. Let it wave in banners, let it adorn the walls at meetings, dinners, luncheons, forums, churches and schools and colleges.

The elections prove the country drier than ever, a matter peculiarly the pride of the W. C. T. U. National constitutional prohibition came swiftly to enactment after the famous proclamation of the former national W. C. T. U. president, Mrs. Lillian M. N. Stevens, of Maine, and this anniversary will be an outpouring of thanksgiving, a reconsecration to the cause; and a day of determination to hold the gains and go forward to the ultimate victory.

The W. C. T. U. requests every minister to call attention to the day in his sermon and prayers next Sabbath.

Park Street W. M. S. Installs Officers.

At one of the most interesting meetings of the Park Street W. M. S. the following circle chairmen were installed Monday afternoon at the church by Mrs. D. M. Therrell, the president: Circle No. 1, Mrs. R. M. Brandon; circle No. 2, Mrs. Frank Baker; circle No. 3, Mrs. H. L. Crumley; circle No. 4, Miss Leila Culberson; circle No. 5, Mrs. W. C. Turner; circle No. 6, Mrs. B. R. Stallings; circle No. 7, Mrs. B. M. Cross; circle No. 8, Mrs. C. L. Douglas; circle No. 9, Mrs. O. A. Sharpless; circle No. 11, Mrs. R. O. Hopson.

Reports were made by all the officers and treasurers of the circles and these showed a splendid year's work and wonderful achievement and advancement in all lines of the work.

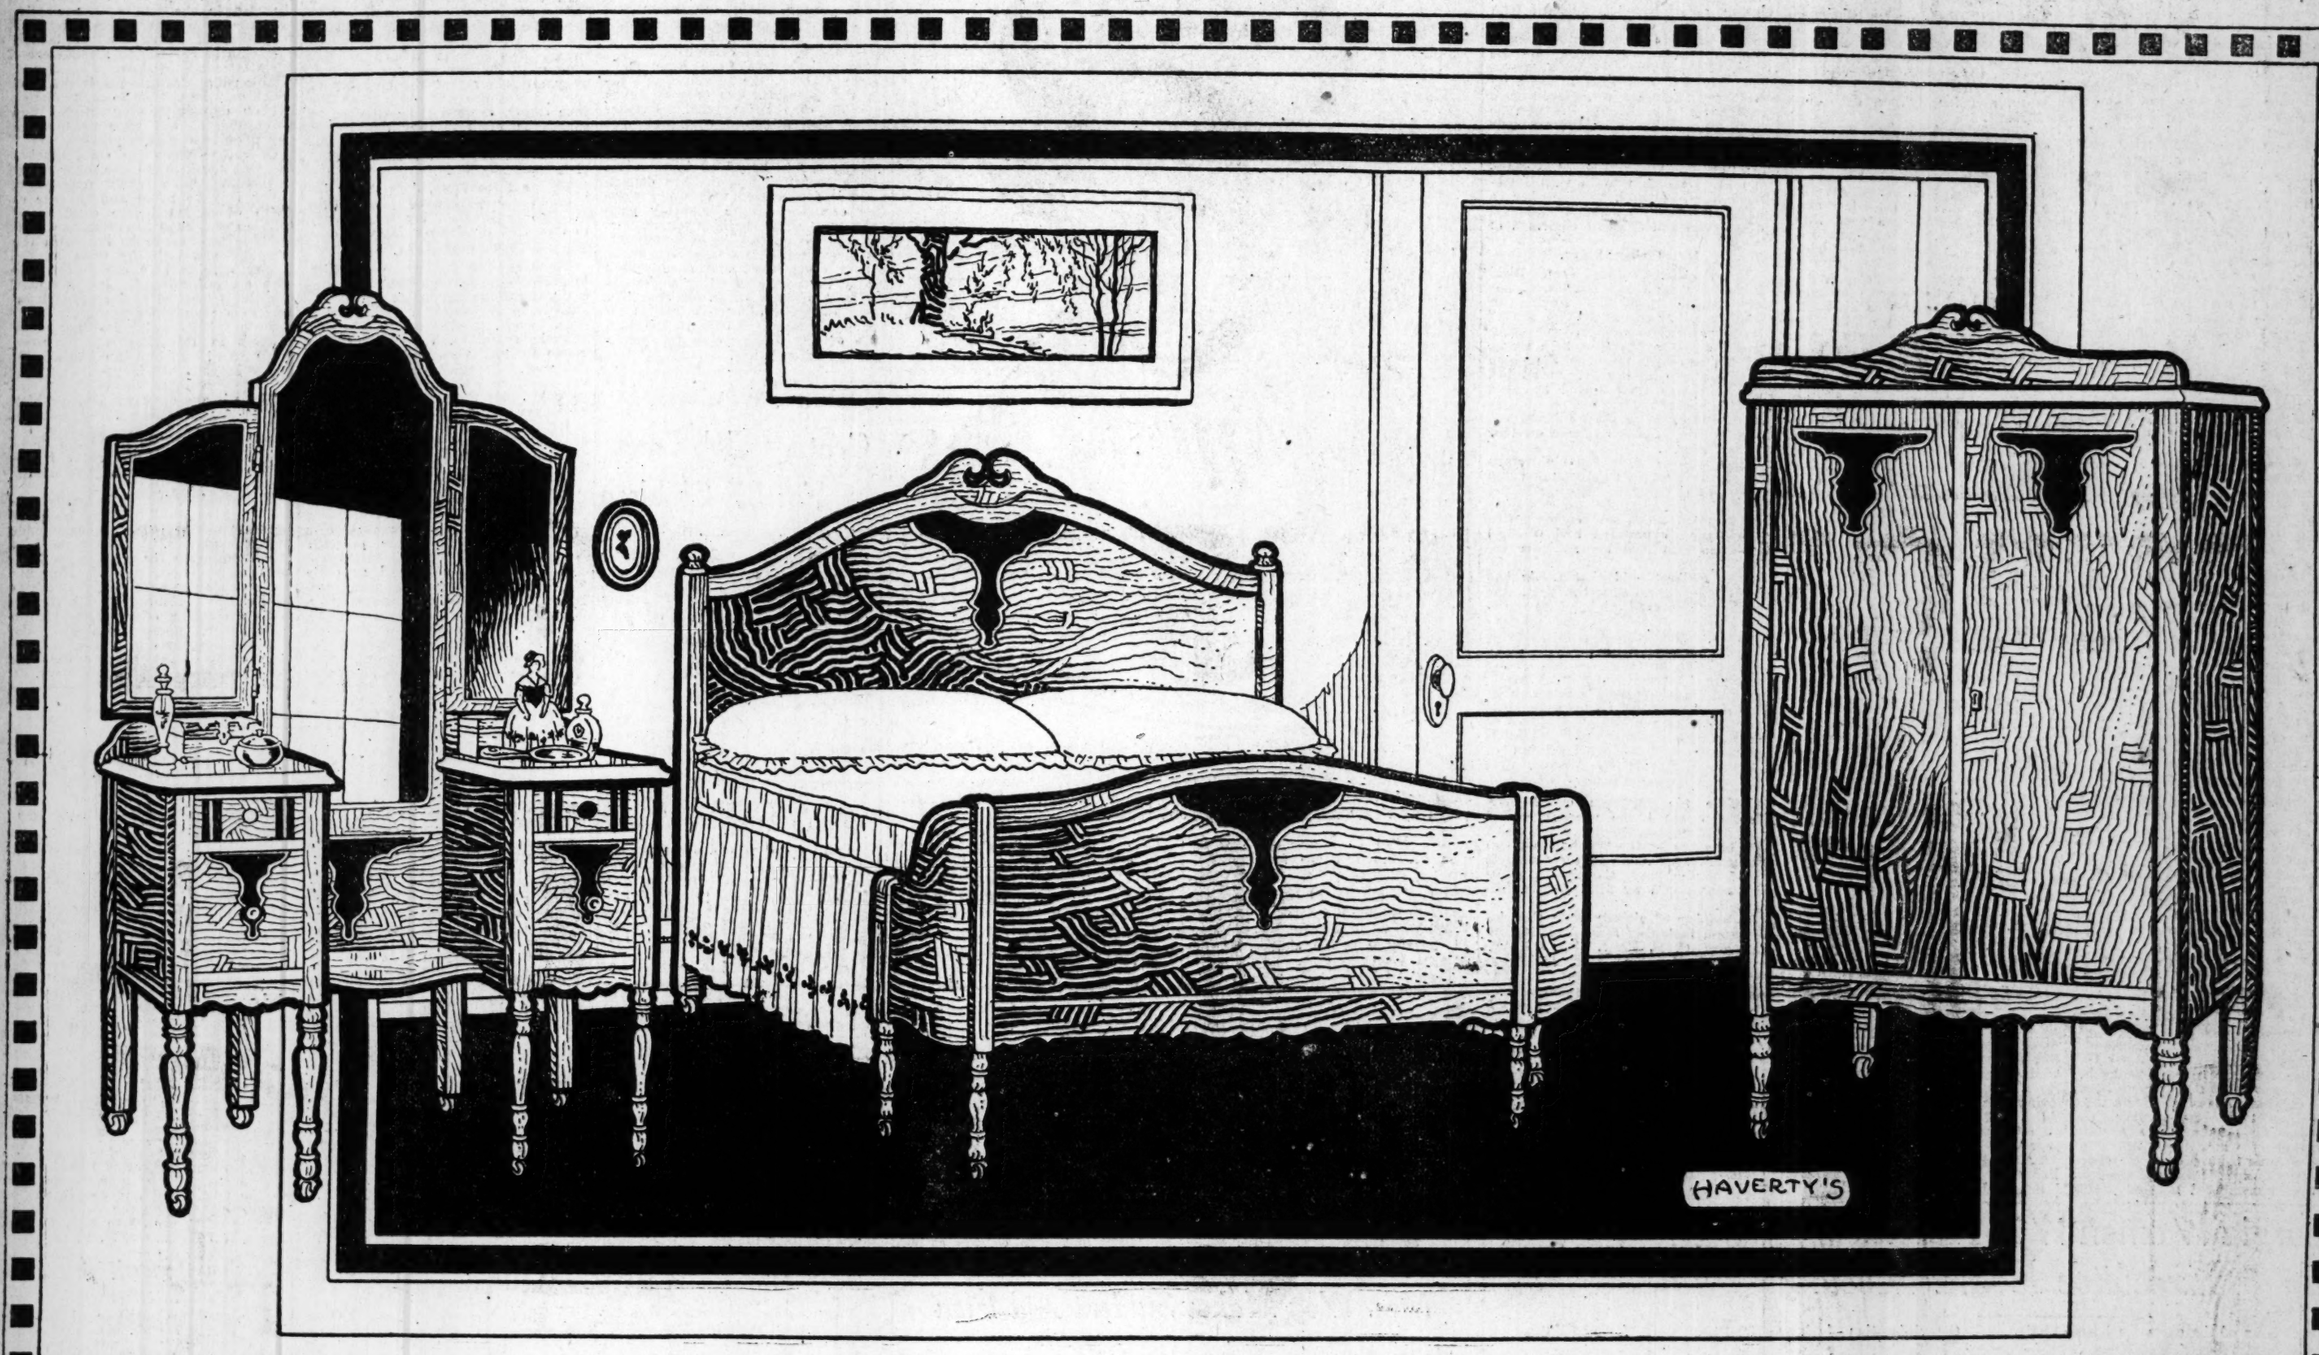

Miss Arline Deickman Is Honor Guest.

Mrs. Jack Deickman entertained at a party Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the Kay-Deickman cafeteria in the Peachtree Arcade, the occasion celebration the tenth birthday anniversary of her daughter, Miss Arline Page Deickman.

The table held a birthday cake ornamented in pink and blue candles, and the cakes were iced in these colors. Covers were laid for six, and an orchestra furnished a musical program.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

SUNDAY JANUARY 9th, 1927

SHADES OF LITTLE RED RIDING HOOD!—"Grandmother, how beautiful your complexion is," would be the proper observation of the little lady of the fairy story these days. You've heard lots about youthful modern grandmothers, but Mrs. Bert Wade, of Greensboro, N. C., formerly of Atlanta and widely known here, claims the world's record. She's 32 years of age, and she appears here with her daughter, Mrs. Roy Stegall, of Atlanta, who is 16 years old, and her granddaughter, Miss Dorothy Stegall, four months old. (Tracy Mathewson)

TOUCH OF OLD JAPAN—Mrs. John W. Grant, Jr., wore this striking costume at the New Year's eve Nine O'Clock ball. (Kenneth Rogers)

HOLD EVERYTHING—Why Buddy Mason, accomplished roller skater, should try out his accomplishments on the edge of a roof this far from the ground is something he will have to explain. He calls it "fun," and he's having his fun atop the Los Angeles Athletic club roof. (Herbert)

COME TO ATLANTA, is the enticing invitation issued by Esmond Brady, in a "Forward Atlanta" costume, to Misses Dorothy Albert and Rebecca Ashcraft at the Nine O'Clock ball. (Kenneth Rogers)

QUAINT, BUT THE CHARLESTON WAS BARRED—The Jackson Dick family attended the Nine O'Clock ball in the heavy wooden shoes and the colorful garb of the Zuyder Zee people. Left to right, Mrs. Dick, Henry Dick, Jackson Dick and Jackson Dick, Jr. (Kenneth Rogers)

QUICK, WATSON; THE NEEDLE!—The mystery of the missing door knob from one of the farm buildings of J. C. Childs, near Forsyth, was solved when this four-and-a-half-foot snake with a head no larger than a man's thumb was found to have swallowed the knob, which proved more than it could handle gastronomically.

DODGING WINTRY WINDS—J. W. Fitzgerald, of Savannah, at the extreme left; Fred A. Poor, of Chicago; Robert W. Gifford and Mrs. Gifford, of New York; Miss Betty Poor, of Chicago, and Mrs. Helen Hoffman, of Philadelphia, bask beneath the sun on Miami Beach, while home folks shiver. (Underwood)

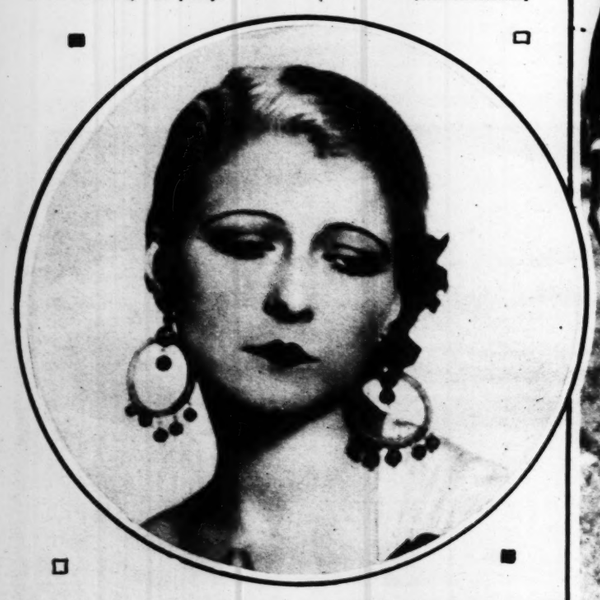

TREACHEROUS RUG FAILS TO SPOIL DEBUT—Gwendolyn McCormack, daughter of famed tenor, slipped on a parlor rug a few days before her scheduled debut in New York, and injured her ankle. Specialists fixed it so she could receive the acclaim of more than 500 guests who attended her coming out party. (International)

HOMEFOLKS WELCOME MIGHTY COBB—J. F. Carswell is pictured here reading the resolutions passed in Augusta when Ty Cobb arrived home recently. Cobb's Augusta admirers and friends have pledged faith in him, despite Leonard's allegations. (International)

WILL THIS NEVER END?—Mille Josianno, Parisian actress, is picked as typical beauty of all the republic of France. Sculptors and artists are responsible for the selection. (Underwood)

BASEBALL SCANDAL BOMB THROWER—"Dutch" Leonard, former big league ball player on his ranch near Fresno, Calif. He is the central figure in the baseball scandal implicating Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker. (International)

OUT OF PLACE BUT A LOT OF FUN—Los Angeles kids make a snow-man out of flakes hauled from a mountain peak. If what they say of the state's sunshine is true, "it won't be long now." (Underwood)

OF ALL THINGS—This is a tree and it grows at Nassua, Nassua. Thirsty Americans, attracted to the resort every year for that reason, take great pleasure in sliding down its banister - rail - like trunk after third drink. It (the tree) is 200 years old. (Underwood)

WHOOPS!—Howard Nicholsón and Hilda Ruckert world-famous fancy skaters, at St. Moritz, get all up in the air when they demonstrate the new "St. Moritz glide." (Herbert)

MIDAIR CRASH KILLS FOUR—This shapeless mass of wreckage is mute evidence of the terrific crash of two planes above Rantoul, Ill., which caused the deaths of four army officers. A heavy fog was responsible for the accident. (International)

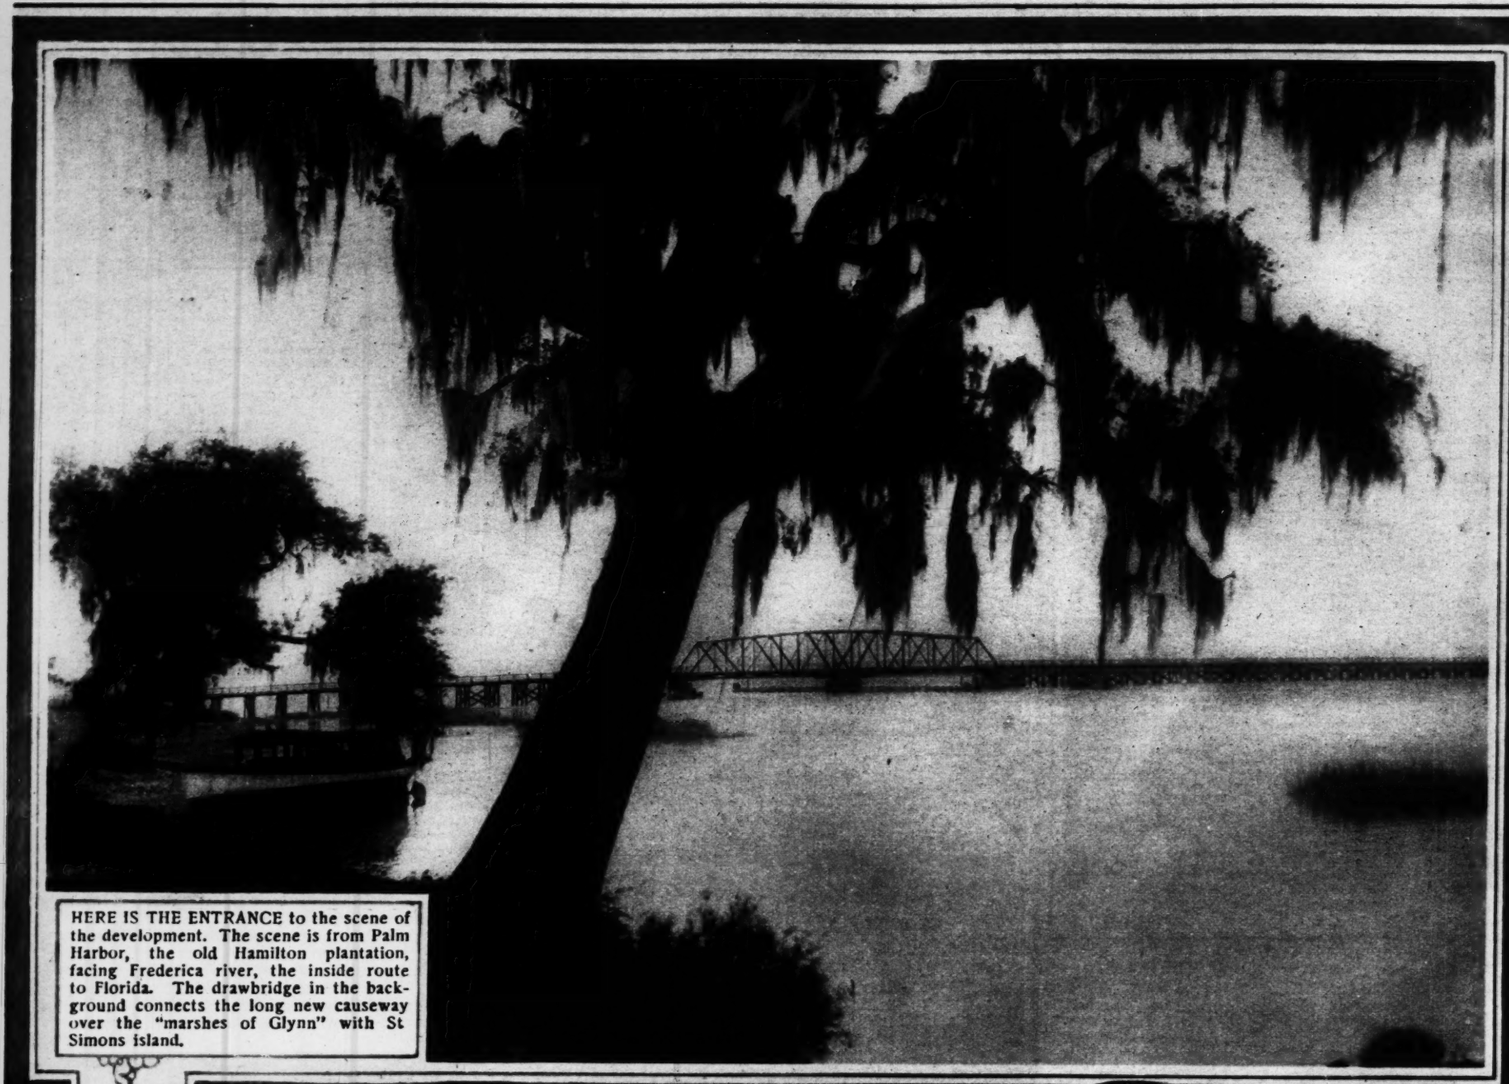

EVERYBODY'S DOING IT—In accordance with the modern trend to write a book, regardless, John W. Langley, former Kentucky congressman, who served a year in the Atlanta federal prison for violation of the dry law, announces that he will tell his story in book form. (International)

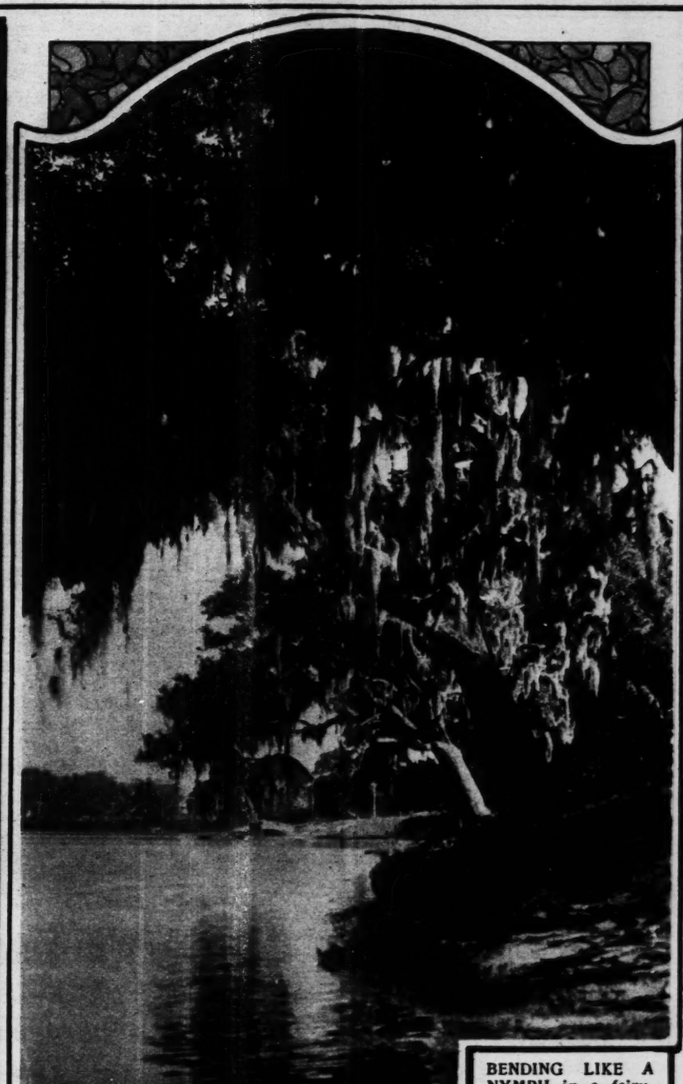

400 YEARS OF WEDDED LIFE—In this group are Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. James K. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Mott and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Curtis, who represent 400 years of wedded life and 571 years of age (International)

CHEER FOR THE SICK ROOM—This group from the First Christian church of Atlanta visits Grady hospital each Sunday bearing gifts of flowers for the sick. (Photo by George Cornett)

HERE IS THE ENTRANCE to the scene of the development. The scene is from Palm Harbor, the old Hamilton plantation, facing Frederica river, the inside route to Florida. The drawbridge in the background connects the long new causeway over the "marshes of Glynn" with St Simons island.

BENDING LIKE A NYMPH in a fairy-land dream to kiss the waters of the Frederick river, the leaning oaks pictured above stretch their moss-covered limbs toward Brunswick, inviting one to visit St. Simons. The scene is along the inland waterway to Florida.

EVERY TURN OF THE ROAD on St. Simons beckons to some new adventure in natural beauty. This scene is near the historic chapel founded by John Wesley at Frederica, where he preached in establishing methodism in America.

Where Nature Beckons By Its Beauty

Framed in a natural setting of huge live oaks trimmed in beautiful Spanish moss, on St. Simons island and Glynn isle, near Brunswick, work will soon begin on the resort development of these beautiful Georgia coast islands, according to plans announced by Howard E. Coffin, Detroit millionaire, and associates. Herewith are presented most attractive views of the section to be developed. For complete story see news section of today's paper.

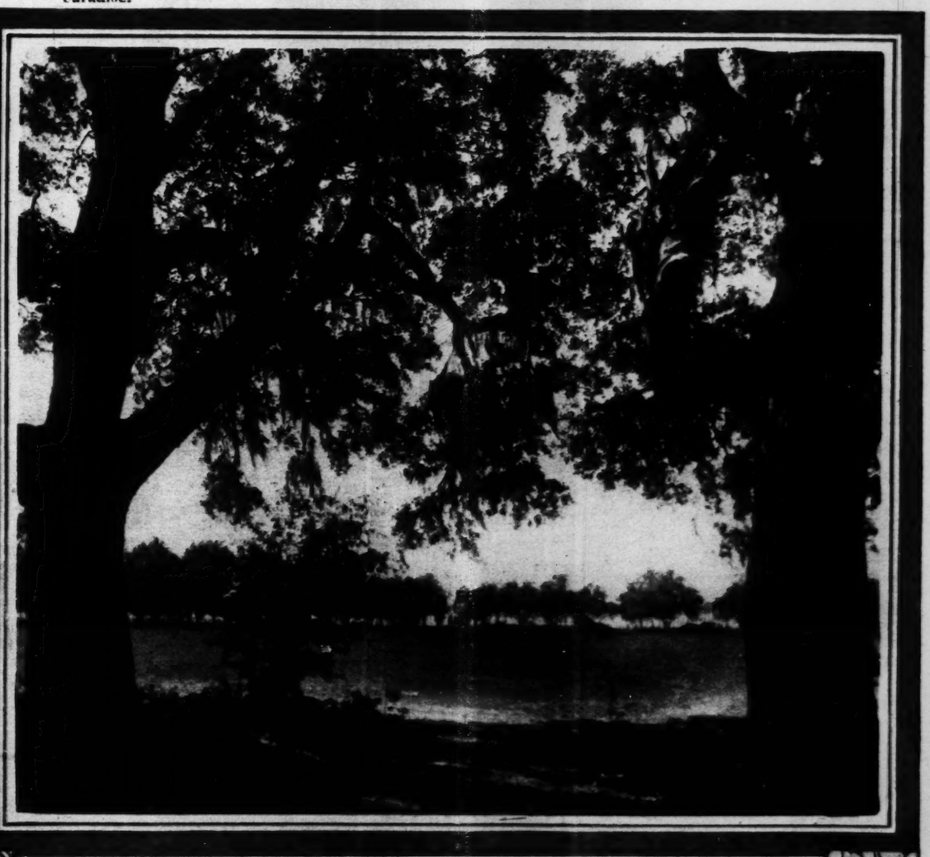

Photos by Kenneth Rogers

SAGE, TALL AND STATELY PINES, with an undergrowth of cabbage palmetto, form an idyllic scene on the site of the Coffin development on St. Simons island. The growth is tropical, wild and luxuriant, and needing only the skilled touch of the landscape artists to transform it into a resort paradise.

LOVER'S LANE, on King's Retreat, is one of the most beautiful spots on St. Simons island. Here oaks planted in the time of Oglethorpe today form a perfect arch, festooned with moss and hung with giant grape vine "creepers." The picture is a symphony in tone, the sun striking through the oak branches to make a wonderful blend of light and shadow, which the camera has caught.

IN THE FIELD which peeps between these giant oaks of St. Simons island will stand the Tolomato Country club, with a golf course, yacht basins, etc., as one of the main links in the development planned by Mr. Coffin. The oaks form a part of Lover's Lane on King's Retreat.

IF THE LACING SHOULD BREAK—Olive Bordon, film star—need we say beautiful?—what with dimpled knees and a form that would turn Venus pale pink with envy, exhibits the sort of bathing suit you never see in this section of the country. (Herbert)

ONE WAY OF GETTING SUMMER FURS—Lenore Hayes shoots a lynx at Lake Placid all by herself. Her father captured a live one. If the family keeps up at this rate, Lenore's going to have a nice set of furs before long. (Herbert)

GOING UP IN SMOKE—The Hotel Magnolia, in St. Augustine, is seen from the air when it recently burned to the ground. The Magnolia was one of the largest frame hotels in Florida, and Palatka, Jacksonville and South Jacksonville sent aid to save the business section from the spreading flames. (Underwood)

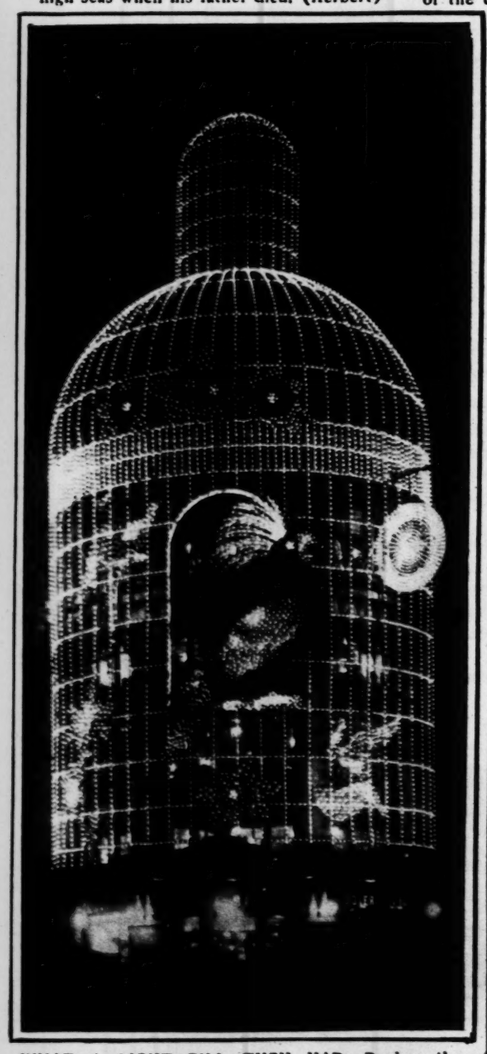

RISING WATERS SPREAD HAVOC—This scene was taken in flood-stricken Pineville, Ky., and is typical of all sections which have been washed under by the mighty tide that swept over Arkansas, Mississippi, Tennessee and Kentucky. (Herbert)

MIKADO'S BROTHER IS HERE—Prince Chichibu, second son of the dead emperor of Japan, and younger brother of the present emperor, who arrived at New York recently. The prince was on the high seas when his father died. (Herbert)

TIDE WASHES OVER NASHVILLE—This scene was made on First street, between Marks and Berry streets, in Nashville, Tenn., where the Cumberland river has risen out of its bed and over many parts of the city. (Herbert)

WHAT A LIGHT BILL THEY HAD—During the Christmas holidays this great electric sign, eight stories in height and representing a parrot and cage, attracted the eyes of all. (Herbert)

LIVING HIGH in this castle in the air, Amas Asfey, 86, of Swarelle, Calif., gets next to nature by communing with the birds. The aged bird lover built the tree-top house in a week's working time. (Underwood)

Enticing as Sin—seductive as a siren—with all the subtle lure of "the world, the flesh and the devil," Lya de Putti adds thrillingly to the "Sorrows of Satan"—at the Howard next week—because his chance of hours in Paradise depends on men's resistance to her hypnotic wiles! But beauty can make, too, a bit of heaven-on-earth, and girls are right to cherish winsome loveliness, as thousands now do, by protecting their complexion with Black and White Peroxide (Vanishing) Cream! This snowy cream, which you can get from 80,000 dealers everywhere, prevents chapping; whitens and refines the skin, and forms the daintiest powder base imaginable!

THEY FELL FOR HIS ACCENT—Equipped with nothing more than a prepossessing person, a pronounced English tang to his speech and a pair of spats, Harry Algernon Lee took advantage of American gullibility and tipped the police to a number of raids on exclusive night clubs. Lee was graciously received at the clubs, where he was believed to be a nobleman. (International)

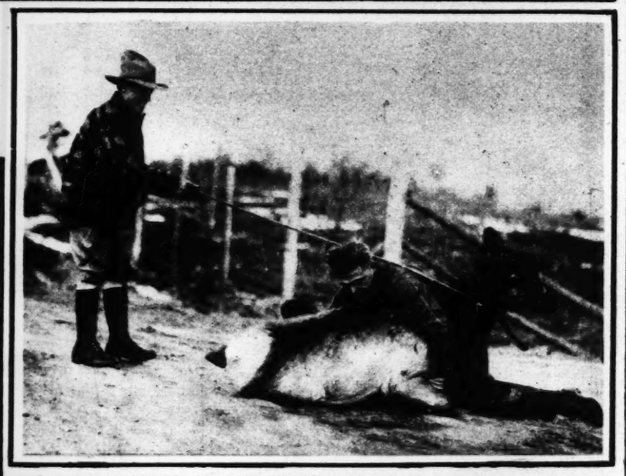

BOTTLE-FED TIGER—One of three cubs hand-reared on the bottle, this young tigress, which when full grown will be twice its size and weight, has been presented to the London zoo by its owner. The tigress is as tame as a house dog. (Underwood & Underwood)

"FLIGHT INTO EGYPT," one of the world's greatest masterpieces, is the work of Giotto di Bondone. Complete story of this painting appears in today's Constitution Magazine.

ELK RODEO is held in the east to compete with western cattle round-ups. The first real round-up of elk at Middleboro, Mass., was a great success. The elks sold to hotels at the fat price of 85 cents a pound. (Herbert)

WILD WEST STUFF AT THE ELK'S EXPENSE—The first real round-up on the only elk ranch in the east, at Middleboro, Mass., was staged recently, when over 400 elks were shipped to hotels for eating purposes. Elk meat is a rich food and expensive. Here are two ranchers "dogging" a big elk. (Herbert)

"SMOKY JOE" POSES AS SCANDAL REPORTS STARTLE FANS—Wood, one-time famous baseball pitcher and now coach of the Yale team, denies any wrongdoing in connection with charges of "throwing" the Detroit-Cleveland game in 1919. (International)

The Filmy Gowns Women Used to Fear

Wear them now in security, under the most trying of hygienic handicaps

Eight in every ten women have adopted this NEW way which solves women's most important hygienic problem so amazingly . . . by ending the uncertainty of old ways . . . and adding the convenience of disposability

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND, Registered Nurse

SOCIAL demands, no matter how ill-timed, hold terror no longer to the modern woman. Sheerest gowns are worn without a moment's thought or fear. One dances, motors, goes about for hours in confidence and security.

The uncertainty of this old-time "sanitary pad" has been supplanted with positive protection. There is a new way—a way that once you try will keep you forever from risking again dangers of old ways.

KOTEX—what it does

Unknown a few years ago, 8 in every 10 women in the better walks of life have discarded the insecure methods of yesterday and adopted Kotex.

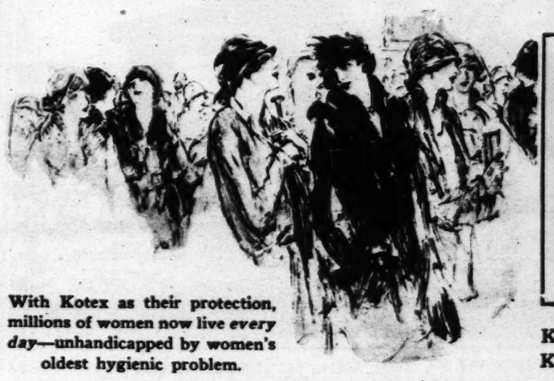

Filled with Cellucotton wadding, the world's super-absorbent, Kotex absorbs 16 times its own weight in moisture. It is 5 times as absorbent as cotton. It discards easily as tissue. No laundry — no embarrassment of disposal. It also thoroughly deodorizes, and thus ends all fear of offending. You obtain it at any drug or department store, without hesitancy, simply by saying "Kotex."

Only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex

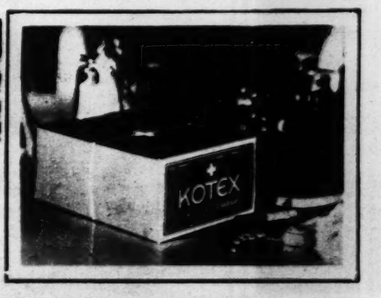

See that you get the genuine Kotex. It is the only pad embodying the super-absorbent Cellucotton wadding. It is the only napkin made by this company. Only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex.

You can obtain Kotex at better drug and department stores everywhere. Comes in sanitary sealed packages of 12 in two sizes: the Regular, and Kotex-Super. Supplied also in personal service cabinets in rest-rooms by West Disinfecting Co.

Kotex Company, 180 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill.

With Kotex as their protection, millions of women now live every day—unhandicapped by women's oldest hygienic problem.

Kotex Regular . 65 cents per dozen
Kotex-Super . . 90 cents per dozen

(1) No laundry. As easy to dispose of as a piece of tissue — thus ending the trying problem of disposal.

Easy Disposal

and 2 other important factors

(2) Utter protection—Kotex absorbs 16 times its own weight in moisture; 5 times that of cotton, and it deodorizes, thus assuring double protection.

(3) Easy to buy anywhere. Many stores keep them ready-wrapped in plain paper — simply help yourself, pay the clerk, that is all.

AND NOW IT'S THE "KICKAPOO"—Not content with securing the inspiration for modern dances from the negro-frequented Charleston levee and the black bottoms of midwestern river valleys, exponents of modern ballroom contortions have invented the "kickapoo," which they tell us is a central Illinois "fantasy of the barnyards." Here are two pretty steppers illustrating three positions of the latest dance in sequence. (Herbert)

ON LIEF ERICSON'S WATERY TRAIL—This sailing ship, modelled after the vessel in which Ericson made his famed trip to America's shores 1,200 years ago, was sailed to New York by four daring Norwegians who emulated the feat of their ancestor. (International)

CHRISTMAS FOUNDLING—This little stranger—a two-day-old baby boy at the time—was abandoned in a paper sack at the Terminal station here just after Christmas day. He now is at Grady hospital, where doctors and nurses have fallen in love with the little fellow. Mrs. Flora McIntyre, Grady nurse, is shown holding the foundling in her arms. (Kenneth Rogers)

HE TOURED EUROPE IN A BASKET—The big tourists are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dazey, of California, scenario writer and playwright, respectively, and the little fellow is Frank, Jr. The family has just returned from abroad, where Frank, Jr., spent five months in his swinging basket crib. (International)

STARS AND BARS are engraved on the giant boulder dedicated recently in Augusta, Ga., for General Joseph Wheeler, noted Georgia general both in the war between the states and the Spanish-American war. The boulder was placed on the site of General Wheeler's birthplace and was erected by the Annie Wheeler auxiliary, U. S. W. V. Members of the boulder committee, left to right, are Mrs. H. D. Norrell, Mrs. Elizabeth McAllister, Mrs. W. I. Wilson, chairman, and Mrs. W. W. Battey. (Sale's Studio)

A FAMILY AFFAIR is the fire department of Belmont, N. J. In its roster of 26 men are five sets of brothers totalling 11 men—and here are the bold brother fire laddies. (Underwood & Underwood)

SELECTING PRIZE CORN—Here are judges in the Southern railroad's 1926 corn contest inspecting entries. Left to right, the arbiters are: Professor J. F. Duggar, of the Alabama experiment station at Auburn; N. C. Lasseter, editor of the Progressive Farmer at Birmingham, and C. A. Mooers, of the University of Tennessee experiment station at Knoxville. (Francis E. Price)

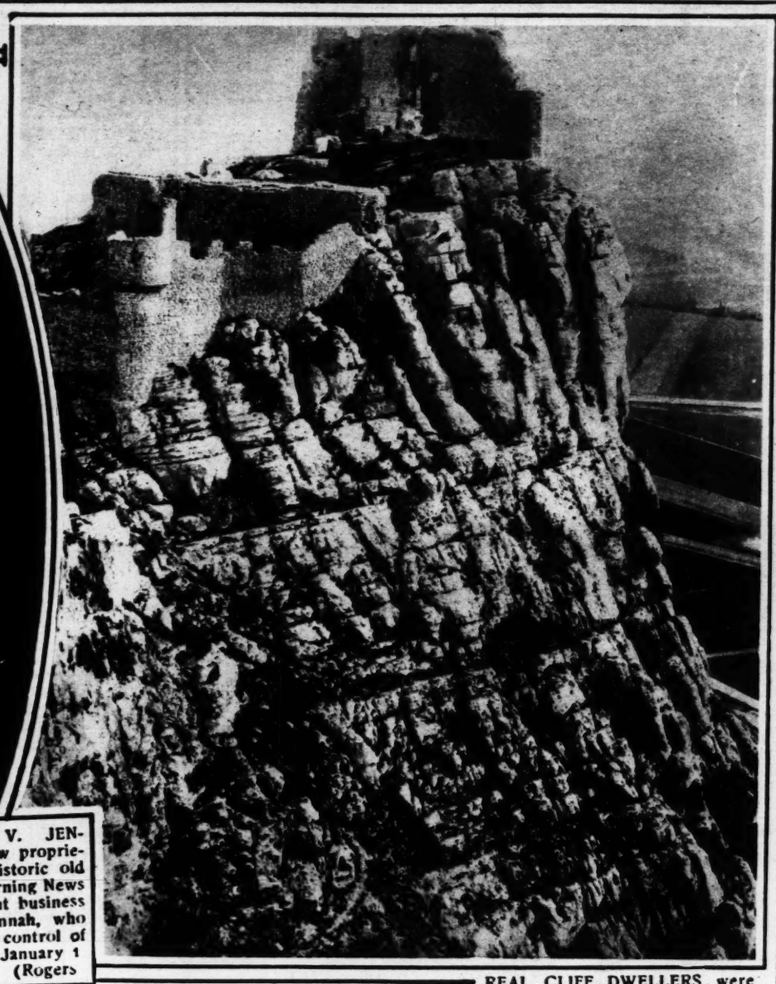

HIROHITO ASSUMES JAPANESE THRONE—On the death of Emperor Yoshihito on Christmas day, Prince Regent Hirohito began his duties of governing the mighty far eastern empire. The new emperor is popular with the Japanese people. (Herbert)

ROMANCE BLASTED, SONGBIRD'S WIDOW BACK IN U. S.—Shown as they arrived on the S. S. Paris in New York are Mrs. Enrico Caruso, former widow of the Metropolitan opera tenor, and her two children, Jacqueline Ingraham, the baby, and Gloria Caruso. Mrs. Caruso recently divorced Captain Ingraham, British army officer. (International)

44 Years of Faithful Service and Value-giving

Gray Hair Unnecessary

Don't think your hair need remain streaked with gray—or even very gray. For over ten years men and women whose hair was once blonde, auburn, brown or black have successfully used Kolor-Bak to restore color to their gray hair. Today they haven't the slightest visible trace of gray. Nor can you tell they ever used anything on their hair.

Kolor-Bak is a clean, colorless liquid—as easy to apply as water. It requires no experimenting with samples of your hair. The one bottle is for all hair, no matter what shade or color. Results often appear in a week. And with the disappearance of the gray hair, the tonic properties of Kolor-Bak make it splendid to use for dandruff and falling hair. Its tremendous success is clearly shown by the sale of nearly 3,000,000 bottles, which proves its superiority.

Drug stores and dealers where the best toilet articles are sold, sell Kolor-Bak with guarantee to refund your money if it does not bring the desired results.

Forty-Seven Years of Service

H. M. Patterson and Son Rounds-out Most Half a Century of Faithful Service to This Community

Since 1880, when this organization was introduced to this community, it has been a pace maker to the exacting details that are so necessary in our profession. Progressing from the first horse-drawn vehicles of the early day to the present modern motor equipment, we have, step by step, included the newer, finer and up-to-the-minute methods of service, in our constant efforts to establish the confidence of the public.

Laboring with this forward march spirit as a foundation of a reverent, sympathetic and efficient service—we have in the forty-seven years of our existence accumulated friendships of envious proportions, spreading far and wide. And in these friendships we take just pride, because they represent the indorsement of a service which has sought to please and satisfy in every phase of courtesy and thoughtfulness.

In the rounding-out of most half a century of progress and upbuilding, and earning the reputation which is so fondly cherished, we are ever looking forward for means and opportunities of offering newer and better ways of serving. This New Year finds us with the finest equipment obtainable. A motor service of the most modern type is at your command. And the high plane upon which H. M. Patterson & Son was founded will continue to be a foreword throughout the years that follow.

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

by Dornford Yates

A Young Englishman Falls in Love With a Woman Whose Charm Is Enhanced by Mystery—A Grim Mystery That He Finally Dispels.

MY UNCLE, Col. Jeremy Sundown, was a strange man. He was also old and my only relative. Every Sunday at three o'clock I would call at his club, but though, if ever I made excuse, he was greatly annoyed, when I came he treated me with rudeness and would always forego his tea lest he should have to pay for mine as well.

Then one day I heard he had died on the steps of his club, and two days later I learned that he had left me three hundred and fifty thousand pounds.

I had always declared that, if ever I became a rich man, I would lead a life of complete and impregnable idleness; but after six months of leisure in the south of France I could bear this condition no longer and wrote desperately to George Lustre, who was a city solicitor and an old friend of mine, asking him to keep his eyes open for any suitable job.

To my delight, he replied by return post, saying that my letter had been timely, for that he had waiting at that moment a singular piece of work, "for which," said he, "I can find no takers at all, because, as luck will have it, it is a rich man's job."

That was enough for me; and, telling my servants to follow, I set out for London forthwith.

I left my dressing case at the —— hotel and drove to a garage where I knew they would care for the car. Then I walked back to the hotel and half an hour later sat down to a decent meal.

When this was over I was almost too tired to smoke, and, after a cigarette, I defied the law of digestion and went to bed.

I had given careful instructions that I was not to be called and was fully expecting to sleep for ten or twelve hours; but no more than three had gone by before I was awakened by the violent clamor of a powerful electric gong.

For some moments I heard it in my dreams, but at last I opened my eyes. The hotel was on fire.

Yet there seemed to me to be no imminent danger, for though I could smell the smoke I could hear no sound of the fire and, when I looked out of my window, there were no flames to be seen. Moreover, the electric light was still working; so I put on a coat and some trousers and, thrusting all else that I had into my dressing case, I left my room and made my way down to the hall.

I believe I was the last person to leave the hotel, and as I gained the street, for the first time a glow appeared in the windows of a chamber upon the first floor.

Even then the building could most certainly have been saved, but the firemen did not arrive and the police, who had formed a cordon, refused to permit any one else to enter or re-enter the house.

In vain the luckless proprietor begged to be allowed to return and empty his safe; in vain a tall American insisted that it would take him less than one minute to fetch his wife's jewels; in vain I collected six porters and declared that, armed with buckets, we alone could get the fire under control in a quarter of an hour. The answer was always the same: "It is too late now. You should not have left the house."

It was an outrageous business, but that is the way of France, and, since fire waits for no man, by the time the brigade arrived the building was doomed.

The hotel stood well back from the street in a sort of place, and I was standing, with my back to the front of a shop, immediately opposite, watching the conflagration, when I became aware of a girl who was standing beside me doing the same.

As I glanced at her the crowd came back on us and I put out my arm to save her from being crushed.

She smiled and thanked me.

"Were you staying there?" said I.

She nodded.

"Unfortunately."

"Have you lost your luggage?" said I.

"I've lost everything," she said. "I was fool enough to rush out when I heard the noise—and there you are."

With that she glanced down and I saw that her legs were bare. There were little bedroom slippers upon her feet, and a wisp of a nightgown was floating from under her coat.

"Good Lord!" said I. "Have you no clothes at all?"

"Not a stitch. I tell you, I've lost everything. And if those fools with the hose don't do better than they've done up to now I suppose the garage will go and I shall lose my car. How are you off?"

"O, I'm all right," said I. "I only had a dressing case with me and I brought that along."

As I spoke I looked down to the pavement.

My dressing case was gone.

I do not think I should have been human if I had not sworn audibly.

"What's the matter?" said the girl.

"O, nothing," said I. "Only those wallahs with the hose aren't the only fools here tonight. Let's—let's get out of this, shall we?"

We fought our way out of the press.

As we emerged, "I thought you said you had a dressing case," said the girl.

"So I had," said I. "And now somebody else has one. In fact, as far as I can see, I'm only a pair of trousers up on you. But then your coat's longer."

"You don't mean to say——"

"Yes, I do," said I. "And what's more, I'm not going to complain, because I bought it. Any one who likes to deposit an expensive looking dressing case in the middle of a crowd like that deserves what he gets. But don't tell any one. I'm going to say it was burned."

The girl began to laugh helplessly.

"And now," said I, "I'm really quite sick of myself; so let's talk about you. Are you alone here?"

"Absolutely."

"Don't you know a bank or anything?"

She shook her dark head.

"I was only passing through," she said.

"Well, what are you going to do?"

"And you?" said the girl.

I reflected. Then, "I'm going to take you," I said, "to another hotel. You must go to bed and to sleep. And as soon as the shops are open I'll get you some things."

We started to walk slowly toward another hotel.

"This is all wrong," said the girl suddenly. "Utterly wrong. And yet"—she looked me full in the face—"I'm going to accept your offer. I'm rather independent, you see; and I don't want to get tied up with a helpful crowd. If you'll come in good time tomorrow I'll have a list——"

"What a joy it is," I said thankfully, "to meet a sensible child."

"——but you mustn't think I make a habit of letting strange men choose my stockings."

"How," said the girl uncertainly, "are you going to get money?"

"I shall go to a bank," said I, "and ask them to wire to London. If I show them my car they'll probably lend me enough to buy us some clothes, but we shan't be able to leave before tomorrow. Can you wait till then?"

The girl nodded.

"I was going to Lyons," she said; "but now I must go about. I live with my brother near Rouen."

"That's my way," said I. "So if your car is out of action I'll drive you home."

"O, I can go by train."

"As you please," said I. "I want you to do what you want."

As we came to the hotel I was seeking——

"Tell me," said the girl. "Why are you doing all this?"

I thought for a moment. Then, "Because I like you," I said.

* * * *

When, after viewing the car, the manager of the bank I had approached offered to lend me two hundred and fifty francs against it, I told him to go to the devil and borrowed ten thousand from the proprietor of the garage.

Then I repaired to the hotel at which I had left the girl. A note was awaiting me.

"Dear Mr. Lacey:

"Please buy me the things I have written down. As for my clothes, I think the best way will be for you to go to some lingerie shop, explain the situation and ask them to send a girl here. And then, if you will come here later, I will tell you how much I owe. O, and a shoe shop, please. I slept very well and am very comfortable.

"Yours sincerely,

"DIANA LANDFALL."

Attached to the note was a list of what, I suppose, may be described as toilet requisites.

I did as I was bid, and when I had finished I purchased such things as I needed and telegraphed to London for funds.

By the time I had bathed and changed it was past midday, and when I returned to the hotel my lady was in the lounge.

I paid the bills and we went out to look for her car. This we did not find, for the roof of its garage had fallen, and to judge from the condition of a big motor which was protruding from the debris it seemed likely that what was left of its fellows would not be worth taking up.

It was a lovely day and we lunched on a balcony, taking our time, for we had nothing to do.

Over the meal we seemed on the way to friendship, but, though in the main Miss Landfall was very charming, that that was a state which she was uneasy to enter seemed once or twice most clear. When, therefore, luncheon was over I handed her two thousand francs, told her the name of the inn at which I was staying and, having sent for a taxi, escorted her back to her hotel.

At the door, "If you want me, send for me," I said.

"Very well," she said. And then, "Thank you."

I lifted my hat and turned away.

I spent a most trying afternoon, walking the streets of Blois and returning to my inn at least once every half hour to see if I was required.

Yet, to exploit the obligation under which she lay to me was not to be thought of, and in the end I returned no more to my inn, but walked out into the country because I made sure that if she did summon me it would be because she felt that, accepting my hospitality, she must make some return.

When I was six miles out the thought that she might have need of me sent me into a sweat, and I turned and came back like a madman for fear that she would send to find I had betrayed my trust.

Sure enough a note was waiting. I tore it open.

"Miss Landfall requests the pleasure of Mr. Lacey's company at dinner at eight o'clock."

I replied, bathed and changed, as far as my wardrobe was permitting, in the excitement of a youth, and at ten minutes to eight I sent up my name.

All eyes were upon her as she came down into the lounge, and I remember thinking that I must be but one of many that had fallen in love with so beautiful a thing.

Her features were lovely and her gray eyes steady and grave. She was tall and slim and moved easily. Her feet were very small and she had chosen court slippers, very small and simple, without any strap. She wore no jewelry, but I do not think the finest pearls could have enhanced such comeliness.

She smiled like a pleased child when she saw me, and that I confess did my heart good, for I was immediately certain that she had asked me to dinner not of politeness but because she did not want to be alone.

"Shall we dine where we lunched?" she said.

"If you please," said I.

As we left the taxi, "And now you take over," she said, giving me back my notes. "I had to ask you because you didn't ask me, but now we'll drop the mask and I'll be the guest."

They found me some excellent Clicquot and we dined very well, and I was in the sixth heaven and soaring from that when all of a sudden at coffee she brought me clean down to earth.

"You'll let me drive you to Rouen?" I had said eagerly.

She hesitated and then laughed.

"Let me send the money," she said.

For a moment it was in my mind to call for the bill and leave the table. The insult was so uncalled for and, I think, undeserved. Then I remembered how she had smiled when she saw me and I sat where I was. But the blood was up in my face and I saw that her color was high.

"Tell me something," I said. "And remember that I'm a plain man who's heard a lot about women but known very few, so that I can't play any game, but only speak as I feel."

"Go on," she said.

"Do I seem to you the sort of man who would use an advantage which chance had put into his hands?"

She raised her eyebrows.

"I've really never considered the point," she said.

"Consider it now," I said.

Her color deepened. Then she looked me full in the eyes.

"I'm not accustomed to being ordered," she said.

"Nor I to being insulted," said I.

There was a long silence.

At length, "I withdraw what I said," she said quietly. "And I beg your pardon. If you knew more of women you would know that I should never have spoken to you if I had not known that I was safe in your hands. If, after this, you will be so good as to drive me to Rouen I shall be very grateful."

That was so very handsome that for one mad moment I thought of kissing her hand.

Instead, "I don't understand you," I said shakily.

"That," she said, smiling, "is a very common complaint."

I pointed to a bill which hung from the balustrade.

"There's a dance at the chateau tonight," I said. "Supposing we went."

Her eyes lighted.

"I'd—I'd like to go," she said tremulously. "On one condition."

"What's that?" said I.

"I'll tell you tomorrow."

"Good enough," said I, and called for the bill.

Some Frenchmen were in evening dress, but I think my suit looked as well as any of theirs, and all of the women looked graceless beside my tall, dark girl.

I think she enjoyed the evening and I know I did.

In the dark of the garden I put her hand to my lips and she did not try to prevent me, but her fingers were very cold.

And at half past eleven I took her back to her hotel.

* * * *

My money arrived the next morning and we left for Rouen at noon. We lunched by the way and had crossed the Seine by five. Then she asked me to stop the car, and I did so seven miles from the city, at the top of a winding hill.

"The condition is this," she said, "that you will say 'good-by' at Rouen and never make any attempt to see me again."

I sat very still.

"I'm mad about you," I said slowly. "I think you know that. I've had quite a good life so far—a very good life. But I never had any light in it until you came. Must you take this away?"

She did not answer at once, but sat more still than I, staring through the wind screen on to the dusty road.

Then, "Yes," she breathed.

"You're not married?"

She shook her head.

"Then let me plead my suit. Let me come back in six weeks and plead my suit. Because we met so strangely is that any reason——"

"None," she said quickly. "But please give me your word."

At last, "All right," I said thickly.

As I started the engine she burst into tears.

For a quarter of an hour or more she sobbed in my arms and, when at last I kissed her, she put her arms round my neck.

"But you promise?" she whispered. "You promise?"

"If it's your will, Diana."

"Yes, dear."

I set her down at a hotel in the Rue Jeanne d'Arc. She thanked me gently and gave me her little hand.

Then she turned and walked up the flagged pavement whilst I stood, hat in hand, looking after her in a mad hope that she would turn. But she did not so much as look back, but passed out of my sight into the busy hall.

Then I got into the car and drove on up out of Rouen like a man possessed.

Two days later I received the money she owed me by her check on a London bank. No letter accompanied this, but only a sheet of note paper upon which were penciled the words, "With my love."

"It's the queerest job," said George Lustre. "Difficult, delicate, dangerous, and you'll only be paid by results."

"Damn the pay," said I. "Tell me its shape."

George rubbed his nose reflectively. "It's like this," he said. "By way of economy, England has cut down her coast guards till they practically don't exist. You remember the race?"

"Perfectly," said I. "Fine, bearded fellows, with a spyglass under the arm and a trim, whitewashed cottage in a bight off the cliff."

"That's right," said George. "Well, they've gone because, when they were there, they had nothing to do. Smuggling was dead. And but for the duty on silk I think they might have been spared."

"You mean——"

"I mean," said George, "that, thanks to the absence of the coast guards, silk's being run into England for all its worth. And it's worth a good deal today. Take silk stockings alone; they're light, they're a specialty of France, and the modern English girl would far rather have them than bread. Very well. I act for certain people—big people, whose identity you may imagine but I'm not free to disclose, and this silk running business is making them tired."

"Naturally," said I.

"But the trouble is this: It's not a job you can tackle from this side of the channel alone. And the French police will not help. They say they will, but they don't—because they're not going to stop any money which comes into France. We've tried using private police, but they're absurdly expensive and out of their depth."

"I agree," said I heartily. "It's inexcusable. Do you give me a free hand?"

"Absolutely," said George. "But of course we can't recognize you. You'll be doing the work, but you won't appear. When everything's ready you'll call the revenue in and they'll get all the praise. That's on this side of the channel. On the other, when you've located a depot beyond all doubt, upon our request the French will be bound to act. The question of payment doesn't seem to interest you, so I'll make the obvious remark that you won't lose by putting this smuggling down, and leave it there."

"The revenue wallahs will let me come and go?"

"My dear Bertram," said George, "you'll become their patron saint."

"Then that's settled," said I. "I'll make my preparations and when I'm ready to start I'll let you know."

* * * *

Five months had gone by, and I was unknown, yet feared. By friends and enemies alike we had come to be called "The Court Cards"—in a way a misnomer, for we were six in number, myself and my five men. Yet the name served, and after a while we each used a card as his badge. Mine was the king of spades, my lieutenant's the queen of clubs, and the other four shared the knaves.

We had not stamped out the silk running, for we were but six and it was a profitable game; but we had reduced it by half, and from Dunkirk to Ushant there was not a smuggler that did not detest our name.

George Lustre was radiant; the revenue officers hung like dogs upon our lips; and I was a miserable man.

That my work had brought me to Rouen increased my wretchedness, and I would not have walked along the Rue Jeanne d'Arc though it had been Smuggler's row.

However, I had no cause to go by that way, for my lodging was in a poor quarter of the city and, indeed, I was only there because the bigger the town the easier may you lie hid, and I was to prove a chateau not far from Dieppe.

I had no doubt it was a depot. The coast was but ten miles away, and we had already marked down a swift seagoing launch. In fact, all was in train. It only remained to connect the launch with the chateau, and that we were to do this night. Once that had been done, the launch would be taken redhanded upon the English coast and at the same moment the chateau would be raided by the French.

Now a car was, of course, always used to take the silk from the depot down to the sea, and if we could identify the car that had left a depot as the one which within the hour was feeding a launch that was evidence against the depot which nobody could possibly contest. But without betraying our presence this was most hard to do, for the cars ran without any lights and were driven with the utmost vigilance, so that, though we might see one leave, to attempt to follow it up was out of the question.

Yet we had devised a system which, when we were able to employ it, worked very well. As it was leaving its depot one of the Court Cards would mark a wheel cap of the car with a dash of red paint. This badge it would carry to the coast, and there, while the business of lading the launch was going on, another Court Card would first touch the wheel cap with a handkerchief and then clean the cap with spirit so that no trace at all of the paint remained. Of course he could use no light, but if, when examined later, the handkerchief was stained red, the connection we sought to establish was plainly proved.

The second entrance to the chateau was approached by a little lane from which a second drive curled between ranks of old elms up to the stable yard. Old iron gates closed this drive to the lane, bu though the chain that locked them might not have been undone for twenty years I had marked the grease upon their hinges and I knew that when they swung open they would do so without a sound. And that is not the way of gates that are never used. Besides, I had seen the mark of a tire in the little lane.

Now, whether the gates would be opened before the car left the stables I could not tell; but, in any event, so narrow was the lane that the turning out of the drive was very sharp and would have to be taken slowly and with the greatest care. My plan was, therefore, to lie hid within the gates and to paint the off hind wheel cap either while the gates were being opened or as the car was turning into the lane.

When it was dark I left Rouen, taking the road to the coast. We were still five miles from the chateau and had not yet reached the point at which we were intending to leave the car when one of my headlights failed.

I had descended to see what the trouble might be when a car which was coming toward me began to slow

The Other Day

By Donald Ogden Stewart

NEW YORK CITY is located in the southern portion of the state of New York and is one of the leading cities of that section. It has an excellent harbor and is the terminus of several important railroads. The inhabitants are of Dutch origin, with fair hair and blue eyes, although in recent times several other races have settled there. These migrations have had a considerable effect upon the character of the people, and the language also has lost much of its original purity. English is understood in many of the shops and restaurants and the traveler who has a moderate command of that language can get along without any considerable difficulty, providing he is willing to pay fairly liberally for what he gets. First-class hotels are plentiful, but expensive.

The two principal railroads entering New York from the middle west of America are the "Pennsylvania" (named after the state adjoining New York state on the west) and the "New York Central." On my recent trip to New York I chose the latter and arrived about 10 o'clock in the morning. After "tipping" the "porter" (tipping the porter) I gave my hand baggage in charge of a "Red Cap," and, turning to my "wife," I said, "Now where?"

"To the aquarium," she replied. I might add, for the benefit of those who have not been following these travel articles, that my wife is very fond of fish.

"But don't you think, dear," I suggested, "that it might be better to go first to a hotel and wash up?"

"I washed on the train," replied she. I might add, for the benefit of my "newer" readers, that my wife washes on trains.

"But—" I began—and then, seeing the look that came into her face and remembering that we were on our honeymoon, I relented—or at least I pretended to relent. By this time we have walked along the platform beside the train and come out into the station, which was very large and very full of hurrying people.

"I wonder where they are all going," said my wife.

"I don't know," I replied, "but I can always ask," and as the next stranger went hurrying by I raised my hat politely and said, "Where are you going?"

He looked at me a little blankly and replied something that I did not understand. Before I had time to ask him again he had disappeared.

"I don't think he understood you," suggested my wife.

I was a little irritated.

"I was considered very good in English at college," I retorted, "and practically won the F. Gordan Snodgrass cup for excellence in English Diction and Water Sports."

"I know you did, dear," she replied, "and I was very proud of you at the time—but don't you think that perhaps——"

She was holding out to me the "Guide to Conversation in New York," which we had purchased before starting.

"All right," I replied, somewhat appeased by her gracious manner, and, taking the book, I began to look for the section entitled "At the Railroad Station."

"I don't seem to find any sentences we can use," I complained after a few minutes.

"Why not?" asked my wife.

"Well, for example," I replied, "here is a sentence beginning "Please, sir, can you direct me to a good strictly Kosher meat market?"

"What's the answer?" asked my wife.

I had lost my place in the Guide, but soon found it again.

"The answer is 'No,'" I replied.

"What's the next question?"

"The next question," I continued, "is—'Well, then, would you care to hear my aunt play upon her flute?'"

"In the Grand Central station?" asked my wife.

"It doesn't say," I replied, "but I presume that this covers the useful questions no matter what station you are in."

"Oh, dear" said my wife.

"All right," said my wife, "go on. What is the next question?"

"Well," I replied, "apparently the stranger did not care for the flute-playing either—hmmm"——

I turned the page quickly.

"What happened?" asked my wife.

"There seems to have been somewhat of a fight," I replied.

"Who won?" she asked.

I read farther.

"It doesn't say," I answered, "but there was a good deal of ill feeling—and the flute was broken—and the last sentence is 'I think, madam, that if you put a cold key to the back of your neck the nose will stop bleeding.'"

"O, dear," said my wife, "I hope that nothing like that happens to us. Isn't there some other conversation for railroad stations?"

"Well," I replied, turning over the pages, "here is a section beginning 'Come, Harry, shall we follow those two girls who are looking back this way?'"

"That sounds interesting," said my wife.

"No," I replied, after having read a little more, "this ends badly, too. At least, the last sentence is 'But, waiter, this is preposterous.'"

By this time the Red Cap who had been carrying our bags became a little impatient.

"If you'all don't mind, suh," he said, "Ah'll set these bags down foh a minute."

"Why, certainly," I replied, and perhaps you can help us out of this delemina."

The negro smiled.

"Ah think, suh.' he said, "that the word you is attempting to use is 'dilemma.'"

I flushed, but then recovered myself.

"Thank you," I said, a little stiffly.

"Not at all," replied the Red Cap, stooping as he got out from under the weight of our baggage, "and thah was one othah word you misused in the course of youah conversation, but ahm afraid ah've done fohgotten. Let me see."

He took off his cap and scratched his gray, wolly head.

"Was it 'flatulent'"? asked my wife. "My husband frequently misuses that."

"No," replied the negro, "it wasn't that."

"Was it 'pelvis'?" she asked.

"I wasn't talking about pelvises," I said, raising my voice in protest.

A gentleman who was passing suddenly stopped.

"I'm a physician," he said. "Is anything wrong."

"No," I replied.

"Thank you," he said, and passed on.

"Well, anyhow," said the Red Cap, "let's get going. Where do you'all want to get to?"

I looked at the negro and winked.

"Can I speak to you aside a moment?" I asked.

"Certainly, Massa," he replied.

I turned to my wife.

"Will you pardon us a minute, dear?" I asked.

She agreed, and we walked several paces away.

"Now here's the point," I said to the Red Cap. "My wife wants to go to the aquarium and I want to go to a hotel."

The negro scratched his head.

"That's a pretty serious problem," he said, "but not entirely insoluble."

I smiled happily.

"You mean, of course, insolvable."

The negro blushed a bright tan.

"Have you'all got a dictionary?" he said.

I searched through my pockets.

"I think there's one in one of those suitcases," I said, and I called to my wife. "Dear—where did you put the dictionary?"

"The what?" she yelled back.

"The dictionary," I called. Our voices echoed rather loudly in the large vaulted dome of the Grand Central station, and several people turned and looked at us. In fact, one man with three children came eagerly up to me.

"What train did you say, mister?" he asked.

"The Dictionary," I replied. "Have you got a dictionary?"

The man shook his head gloomily.

"We used to have one," he said, "but I never carried it much with me except on long trips."

By this time my wife had come up.

"What is it, dear?" she asked.

"I'm looking for our dictionary," I said.

"What word don't you know?" she asked.

"That's all right," I replied. "Where's the dictionary?"

She hesitated a moment and then began opening one of the bags. As she lifted up the lid several things slid out of the suitcase on to the smooth hardness of the tiled station floor. Among them was a toothbrush, my pajamas, and a bottle of Scotch whisky.

O, dear," said my wife.

Suddenly, as though out of nowhere, appeared the hugs towering bulks of three policemen. They came from different corners of the station, and in a minute they had been joined by five more.

"What's going on here?" asked one of the biggest of the policemen. "What's in that bottle?"

"I don't know, sir," I replied. "My wife packed the bags."

"It smells all right," he said.

"I think it's pretty good," I replied. "Won't you try some?"

"Well," said the policeman when he had finished. "I'm afraid I'll have to be going."

"So will I," said one or two others. And in a few minutes we were once more alone. My wife packed the empty whisky bottles once more in the suitcase, covered it with my pajamas, and closed the lid. The Red Cap picked up the bags and motioned for us to follow him. At the other end of the station we found a taxicab stand, and as my wife was getting into the nearest cab the porter began talking to the driver. There was an answering grunt, and as I started to enter the porter pulled me aside.

"Ah told him to go to the Ritz," he whispered."

I smiled and thanked him. I also gave him a dollar. Then I turned to enter the cab.

"Did you tell him the aquarium?" asked my wife.

"Yes," I replied.

"I've been thinking it over," she said, "and I think that perhaps we had better go to a hotel first."

I sighed.

"All right, dear," I said.

I leaned forward and explained to the driver and we started off.

Things New and Old About The Bible :

By W. P. KING
Pastor First Methodist Church, Athens, Ga.

Christianizing the Christian Creed.

I.

IN the separation of the Christian from the non-Christian element in our creeds, the Christian consciousness exercises a necessary function as confirmatory of the authority of Jesus. Paulsen has said that the one road to truth is the rationalizing of experience.

W. P. KING

The essential teachings of Jesus, such as fatherhood of God, the redeeming grace of Jesus Christ, and life eternal are verified in our own experience and become self-evidencing.

Creeds must also stand the test of reason especially as it manifests itself today in the scientific spirit. We are to accept facts in the spirit of a little child with a freedom from all partisan bias. No longer can we hold to the old conception that "Faith is believing what we know is not so." There is to be no hiding or twisting of the facts. Every difficulty must be fairly faced. We are driven back to the use of reasoning faculties in dealing with the Bible and doctrines.

"Prove all things, hold fast to that which is good."

The power which God has given to man for the reception and recognition of truth is his reason Bishop Butler wrote: "Reason is the one faculty with which we have to judge anything, even revelation itself."

II.

The results that are involved in this transforming method.

1. There are the negative results which follow. There will be eliminated the scientific conceptions of the universe as held by the Biblical writers as forming no part of the vital religious revelation.

There will be laid aside the imperfect conception of God from the earlier anthropomorphic ideas to the ideas of the divine sovereignty as set forth by Calvin.

The pre-Christian idea of the advent of the Messiah for a physical reign on earth must follow the way of other Jewish remnants. The popular form of the apocalyptic element is pre-Christian or non-Christian. The distinction between the transient and abiding in the Bible and in Christian creeds must be fearlessly made. The line must be drawn between the primary and what has been termed the secondary in Christianity.

The norm of a Christian creed is not the Roman Catholic church and papal infallibility, nor the Protestant church and the theory of Biblical inerrancy, but the primary and fundamental as revealed in Jesus Christ. Primarily Christianity is described as "A belief in the personal revelation of God through Jesus Christ with such religious corollaries thereto as have been shown to be of moral power and in accord with reality."

Ideas of the atonement are not to be held which are temporary expressions springing out of a particular social or political condition.

1st. There was the ransom theory according to which Christ was given as a ransom to Satan for men. It was a divine stratagem by which Satan was cheated, since he could not hold Jesus. The theory was made possible by the military custom of paying a ransom for captives. This theory prevailed from Trenacas to Gregory the Great.

2nd. There was the Satisfaction theory of Anselm. In sinning against an infinite Being, man incurs an infinite debt which only a God-man can pay. The theory sprang out of the feudal ideas of the honor which a vassal owes his feudal lord, and the necessity of other satisfaction or punishment for every offense. In the 18th century the theory was developed in commercial terms. Man must pay the debt owed to God or some one else must pay it. The merits of Christ were transferred to us. The theory is expressed in the familiar hymn, "Jesus Paid It All."

3rd. There is the governmental theory of Grotias, a justice satisfying theory of the atonement.

Christ suffered as an example to uphold the majesty of the divine law which demanded that punishment be inflicted.

It is not possible for the modern mind to accept that idea of justice. This theory was developed in the political atmosphere of the rise of nations and kings and their government.

4th. There is the moral influence theory of the atonement. The sublime example of Christ's heroic suffering would melt the hard hearts of men. This theory does not accord with the greatness of Christ's personality, since his life was more than the life of a hero and his death was more than the death of a martyr. This conception of the atonement has been held along with the Socivian or Unitarian idea of Jesus.

5th. There is the true idea of the atonement in the light of the fatherly love of God. Suffering is a fact in the life of God. He is the Supreme Sufferer. Only He who can be hurt by our sin can save us by His suffering love. "In all their afflictions He was afflicted." The suffering of the atonement was not substitutionary but vicarious.

In the main with the revelation through Christ as our standard, it is not so much the falseness as the imperfection of the historic creeds which is corrected. They do not state a positive Christian doctrine which is necessary for our day.

Men have recited all the creeds and yet believed in human slavery in industrial oppression in the deep cleavage of caste and class lines, and in the dark butchery of war. We have dealt with philosophical watch-words and with historical statements which have been undermined by science instead of the eternal truths which Jesus preached and for which He lived and died.

Where does a creed stress the fatherly love of God, the brotherhood of man, the universal missionary mission of Jesus and the divine law of service?

There are the positive results which follow the clear and high standard of Christ.

A suggestion has just been made touching the true nature of the atonement, and it is also true that every doctrine must be interpreted in the light of the fatherly love of God as revealed in Jesus Christ.

Repentance, faith, salvation, immortality, human loss and ruin, all must be understood in the light of this central sun. God is love, and every conception of cruelty is alien to a truly Christian creed. Men are brothers and kindness, not revenge, is the Christian law of life.

The picture of a military Christ trampling on the prostrate and bleeding bodies of his enemies, though held by the ultra orthodox is not Christian. Only that theology is Christ-like which believes that God is like Jesus. Does God need to be placated? What of the doctrine of reconciliation? The New Testament Scriptures always speak of reconciling man to God. The creeds speak of reconciling God to man. God must be a perfectly ethical being and all ideas of God punishing the innocent for the guilty must be discarded.

If theology is to the Christian freedom of thought must be allowed to the Christian. "If the Holy Spirit is to lead the believer into all truth, there must be liberty for such guidance."

Dr. W. N. Clark writes: "Our theology must be Christian, that is all, that is it must set forth the right God. The true light now shineth and in it we are to walk. Yet this is no arbitrary limitation dictated through command; it is a warning that otherwise we cannot get it right, since the God and Father of Jesus Christ is the God who exists.

Nor is this a restraint; it is an infinite enlargement. God desires us to be in such harmony with His high character as to give the name of truth only to that which corresponds thereto. With vision thus purified, theology will go on forever seeing more and more of that eternal glory which is practical truth for daily life, and gaining more light upon the mysteries that make life perplexing to the soul."

(1) To accept as our standard the gospel of Christ will bring a new appreciation of the messages of the ancient prophets, since Christ was in line with the prophets, the pioneer spirits who defended the weak against the cruelty of the strong.

(2) To accept as our standard "the Light of the World" will afford us practical guidance in the affairs of life and authority, since we will not be constrained to appeal to the inferior authority of other religious leaders.

(3) To accept as our standard the revelation of Christ will free us from many complex questions which produce division and will immeasurably enhance in the church the "Unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace."

(4) To accept the true divine standard, stripped of many false human accretions, will give new impetus to the universal mission of the Christian religion.

THE WORLD'S BEST PICTURES

"The Flight Into Egypt" —oo— By GIOTTO

This is the 47th of a series of 52 greatest paintings which represent the choice of the art directors throughout North America. Reproduction of this masterpiece appears in the rotagravure section of today's Constitution.

BY EUGENE P. CONLEY.

FROM vantage ground I perceive through the fog and dust of other years a great parade of painters filing past in review—all are there—Michelangelo, Raphael, Whistler, Rubens, Leonardo, Gainsborough, Velasquez and on to lesser greats—none is missing. Giotto and Cimabue are in the lead—they are the flag-bearers. To them goes the credit of being the first to breathe the spirit of life into canvas figures.

"Is this one of the fifty-two greatest paintings?" queried little Mary in the other office, as she pointed to Giotto's masterpiece, "Flight Into Egypt." Her tone implied a lack of judgment on the part of the art directors. Then dejectedly she added, "The figures look stiff, I like Raphael's style better."

To play favorites is to work an injustice. I answered in the affirmative and admitted the superiority of Raphael's works, but consider this, a mighty span of two hundred years separated the two. 'Tis easier to criticize than to create. Raphael was great because Giotto went before. He improved upon Giotto's style. Glory and credit must ever go to the one recognized "the first."

Glance back into history's pages and you'll find the Santa Maria and the Clermont spelled in bigger type than the Leviathan. Yet, from a standpoint of splendor and comfort there is no comparison, but credit goes to them because they were the first.

"Flight Into Egypt," one of the many scenes depicting the life of Christ which Giotto painted in the Arena Chapel, Padua, Italy, is considered the grandest of the group. The story has often been told. Joseph and Mary, heeding the advice of the Angel, fled with the Christ Child into the land of Egypt, before the merciless Herod's preposterous edict, which called for the killing of all boy babies under two years of age, could reach its objective. "Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown." Herod, sensing the semblance of truth in the persistent rumors of a new king's being born, suffered not the consequence to secure his throne.

Giotto di Bondone (Jot-toe dee Bon-doe-nay) was born fourteen miles from Florence, about the year 1266. Little is known of his early youth. At the age of ten, (this was about the time of Dante's first meeting with fair Beatrice) the boy with his father's permission, was apprenticed to Cimabue, recognized as the greatest painter of his day.

The genius so apparent in latter years was visible from the start. Ever precocious and willing, the boy climbed, unchecked, steadily up the ladder of fame. His progress was amazing-brilliant, and ere long he was teaching the teacher.

The flower of painting took root in the latter part of the thirteenth century when Giotto's genius, matured and spread its pollen on the stigma of the Renaissance when the flower bloomed in full. He died in 1337, in his 71st year. More than a century later Lorenzo the Magnificent, placed a marble bust over the grave of the great painter and on it was carved this epitaph: "I am Giotto—what need is there to tell of my work? Long as verse lives my name shall endure."

AUCTION BRIDGE —{}— By MILTON C. WORK

THE INTERNATIONAL AUTHORITY

LAST Sunday I promised that today I would discuss the Business Pass, and I am glad to do so because there is so much popular uncertainty concerning it.

A Business Pass is a pass made by the partner of a player who has doubled informatorily; the informatory double having been made, of course, with the expectation that the partner of the doubler would bid. When a No Trump is doubled, the double announces that the doubler has a No Trump also and probably a stronger one than the bidder; it takes more strength to justify an informatory double than it does to warrant the original bid of one No Trump. When a suit-bid is doubled, the doubler announces strength and at least three cards in each of the other three suits; the probability of weakness and shortness in the suit that is doubled is also suggested but not guaranteed.

The idea in doubling is that the partner will bid a long suit and that the doubling hand can support it with satisfactory results. Should the intervening adversary bid, the partner of the doubler is relieved of his responsibility and need not take out the double by bidding; but the great bugbear of informatory doubling has been the ignorant or foolish partner who leaves the doubler in the lurch by passing when a bid is the one and only thing of value he can contribute to the partnership enterprise. The informatory doubler of a suit-bid whose partner with a bust "passes out on him," is in about the same comfortable position as a swimmer who dives into a tank without noticing that it is waterless.

Cases arise in which suit doubles, instead of being taken out in some other suit, are taken out with a No Trump, and cases in which No Trump doubles are taken out with two No Trumps; but these No Trump take-outs are not particularly frequent, and the opportunities for successful Business Passes still less so. But "Business Chances" do turn up every now and then, and full advantage should be taken of them when they occur.

A Business Pass is exactly what the doubler does not expect; but if the player who makes it be dependable, it is the declaration which the doubler should welcome the most heartily. The Business Pass says: "Partner, in spite of the fact that your double asks for a take-out, my hand is so strong that I am satisfied we can severely defeat the declaration and obtain a large penalty with our combined strength."

Many more Business Passes follow a double of one No Trump than a double of one of a suit. The doubler of the No Trump announces strength for the declaration he is doubling; the doubler of the suit is usually very short in that suit and sometimes absolutely void of it. Therefore: In the No Trump case, when the Business Pass is made, both partners are strong in the doubled declaration; but if a Business Pass be made after a suit-double, only the passer has presumable strength in the prospective trump-suit.

As I have pointed out, the weakness pass of an informatory double is anything but good business—the greater the weakness the more important the take-out — but with strength, when the doubled declaration is No Trump, or two or three of a suit, gratifying results are often obtained by it. The hand cited last week is an illustration of this. South (Dealer) bids No Trump, West doubles, North passes, East holds:

Sp.: x-x. Ht.: x-x-x. Dia.: King-Queen-10-x. Cl.: Ace-Queen-10-x.

East should take the contract himself by bidding two No Trumps, or play for a large penalty by making a Business Pass. Playing the rubber game, it might be better for him to bid two No Trumps and cinch the rubber; on either of the first two games of a rubber, or playing Duplicate or Progressive, he should pass. This is because the rubber game, after each side has won a game, is apt to be worth more than a penalty; while the penalty will probably be worth more than winning a non-rubber game. The No Trump bidder in the hand given above is sandwiched between two strong hands. North must have a bust as three strong hands are all that can be formed from the high cards in one pack; therefore a Business Pass must leave South in an unenviable position. For East to bid two Diamonds or two Clubs would be a serious error; either bid would compel the doubler to assume that East held the bust, with the probable result that a Minor contract would be played at which game would not be obtained. It is a case for either two No Trumps or the Business Pass; nothing else should be considered.

The other hand I gave last Sunday was as follows:

Sp.: Jack-9-x-x-x. Ht.: x-x-x. Dia.: x-x-x. Cl.: x-x. In that case the bidding was supposed to have been: South one Spade. West double, North pass, and the question was what East should do with the above holding.

This is a hand to test the nerve of a player in the East position. With a practically trickless hand, a take-out is unescapable; and East's only suit of over three cards is the one in which the partner has announced probable weakness by a double. The unsteady player is apt to reason: "Why not pass and permit the adversaries to play with their declaration doubled? I can take a trump trick or two, my partner will take a flock of side tricks and we will defeat them; whereas, should I bid anything, we would probably be defeated. This is fallacious reasoning because, even against the strength which may be credited to a dependable doubler, the Declarer would be more apt to make than lose his doubled contract. The pass would enable him to locate most of the adverse trumps in East's hand and he would manipulate his play accordingly.

Broadway Banter —BY— FORNEY WYLY

BEATRICE LILLIE is back again on Broadway in a musical concoction called "Oh, Please!" Had I been told to fill up the magazine section today with just what I thought of Miss Lillie, I would still contend I had not been given sufficient space. This English comedienne is more excruciatingly funny more disarmingly attractive than ever before. I suppose I'd best let it go by saying I find this Miss Lillie possesses more magnetism, more personality than any other actress on our stage today.

"Oh, Please!" taken as a show is no masterpiece. But as a vehicle for the limitless talents of Lady Peel, it serves well enough. And when you see Miss Lillie wallowing around on the floor in one of her comedy scenes, never for one instant forget you are beholding Lady Peel. Somehow you never forget it. In "Oh, Please!" she has another of her famous "concert ballads" during the rendition of which she gets into every conceivable position the while she is manicuring her nails for dear life. She has a number on the order of her famous Charlot Revue number, "March With me," called "The Girls of the Old Brigade," in which the costumes are hilarious.

The music was written by Vincent Youmans who did the score for "No, No, Nannette," and it is extremely tuneful. At least one number, "You Know That I Know," give indications of being another "Tea for Two." "Nicodemus, Be My Little Knick-Knack Now" is another good melody.

"Oh, Please!" further boasts of the decorative presence of Gertrude MacDonald whose high-kicks brought joy to these weary old eyes. However, "Oh, Please!" after all is just Beatrice Lillie which is one way of saying it's just a little bit of paradise.

* * * *

Miss Lillie's opening night drew the theatrical crowd who know her as Miss Lillie and society who know her as Lady Peel. I wonder if ever before Lady Anybody ever rolled around the floor of a stage the way Miss Lillie does in her gymnastic song. Katherine Cornell, she who wears "Green Hats" so well, was an enthusiastic first-nighter at the Lillie show, and so was Elsie Janis and her mother. Fanny Ward, whose face I gave a minute survey, still looks years under thirty. Fanny's weird colored hair was held in tow by a sapphire-blue band. Thomas Meighan and his wife, Frances Ring, were naturally there, for you see Frances' sister, Blanch "Bells on My Fingers" Ring is married to Charles Winninger, leading comedian in "Oh, Please." Ben Lyon made his usual appearance.

When on the third night of the show, I found myself drawn back again, I found Peggy Hopkins Joyce on the front row just about to shake her orchids off laughing. Also present was Jeanne Eagels, out of "Chicago" for good. Miss Eagels and the management of "Chicago" had some kind of rumpus with the result that Francine Larrimore is doing the part Miss Eagels was scheduled to do. Alice Brady who is rehearsing her third play of the season, looked stunning in the ermine evening wrap I saw her wearing between the acts.

Julia Murphy Whitehead was an energetic shopper whom I encountered in Saks the other day. And immediately thereafter Jack Cohen, Jr., sauntered up and we three managed to block traffic in that way only Atlantans can do. Mrs. Whitehead was looking her usual charming self.

Only a few moments before, I had collided on Madison avenue with Ben Gatins, a cousin, incidentally, of Mrs. Whitehead. Mr. Gatins whom you recall once lived at your very own Georgian Terrace, is one of those rare persons who actually give out the impression they're glad they're alive Mr. Gatins was walking down the street very much as if he meant it.

"Countess Maritza" is the best Shubert operetta of the year. The way things are managed in this show is like nothing so much as the old-time light opera favorites such as "The Spring Maid," "The Prince of Pilsen," etc. The voices are excellent and the stage humor does not fill you with ill-humor. Walter Woolf is a matinee idol over whom luncheon parties fuss and fume in a body. Odette Myrtil and her violin are both acceptable. "Maritza" provides as satisfying an evening in the theater as you'd want. Maurice and his wife sat on one side of me the night I saw the show, and Eddie Cantor on the other, and the fact that I watched the stage pretty consistently convinces me "Maritza" is a good show—unless it is that our little Forney is at least growing up.

I have no way of knowing how "manners" are in Atlanta these days. Consequently I do not know if the following engraved cards, now very much in vogue in New York, have to be filled out by Atlanta guests and forwarded their hosts or hostesses on "the morning after":

"Mr. ——— regrets exceedingly his deplorable conduct while a guest at your party last ——— evening and humbly craves your pardon for the Breach of Etiquette checked in the adjoining column."

The "adjoining column" contains the following "Breaches of Etiquette":

(1) Striking hostess with bottle.

(2) Spanking hostess or female guests. (Now, Glenny).

(3) Riding to hounds in drawing-room.

(4) Excessive screaming.

(5) Frequent absence from party.

(6) Extreme inebriation.

(7) Excessive destruction of furniture.

(8) Throwing glasses.

(9) Insulting guests.

(10) Indiscreet petting.

(11) Nausea.

Mystery Of the Strangely

Who Is This Mortal Enemy Palerme and What Can Be Reason for Continually Plotting Against Her Life?

BY GINA PALERME.

PARIS.

HAVE you ever felt that you were being followed by a shadow that meant death? Have you ever shuddered under an imaginary cold clutch at your shoulder or at a sudden vision in the dark as if a creeping monster were about to leap at your throat?

If you have gone through such an experience you will readily understand what I have been suffering since that mysterious attempt upon my life as I lay dozing in bed. Only my trouble did not come from an imaginary foe, but from some real mortal enemy who shot at me from the dark of my garden and who has since conceived the most harrowing means of keeping me in constant dread and agony.

For weeks I have not had a good night's rest. I am moving from one hotel to another in the hope of finding sleep and security. But the most dreadful thing for me is to appear nightly at the Moulin Rouge where that lurking fiend may be hidden in the shadows of a proscenium box aiming his revolver at me as I sing and dance.

I have asked for a release of my contract to take a short rest, but the management says I must live up to every clause in it and continue to take the place of Mistinguett on the bill. So I must stick it out. I must smile and look unconcerned as I recite my lines before the blackness in front of the footlights.

The attempt on my life, as all the newspapers called it, happened at my villa at La Varenne Saint Hilaire, about forty-five minutes from Paris by motor. After the performance at the Moulin I had dined with a friend and then driven home with Miss Betram, my companion-secretary, whom I have known since the happy days in London when I leased the Duke of York theater for my own musical review.

When we reached home I went straight to bed. The servants were all sound asleep, as usual at that hour, except the gate keeper who let me in.

I had hardly switched off the lights and tucked myself nicely away in the cool sheets when a sudden sense of danger gripped me. It seemed like a premonition of some dreadful evil, as if some one were lurking somewhere in the room, under the bed perhaps, or in one of the closets.

I did not move, but a million thoughts raced through my head. I should have looked under the bed. I wondered if the window screens had been securely locked. Scolding myself for a little fool, I eventually dropped off into a sort of doze.

I don't know how long I lay in this state of semi-consciousness. I was startled out of it by the sound of two shots in the stillness of the night. For a moment I lay quite still. A lethargy of fear paralyzed me. Had I been dreaming? But no, there came some voices from within the house and my dogs were barking.

Gina Palerme, the Parisian stage star who lives in constant terror of death at the hands of a mysterious foe.

I jumped out of bed and turned on the lights, screaming for my maid as I slipped into a dressing gown. In a moment the servants were in my room.

We found, to my amazement, that two shots had been fired through the window of the adjacent boudoir, the window of the bedroom proper being securely shuttered. The shots had gone through the dresser that partly masked the door between the boudoir and bedroom and the bullets had buried themselves in the heavy paneling of the bed right over where my head had been.

One of the men servants rushed to the window and looked out into the night, but there was nothing to be seen, no noise to be heard except the barking of the dogs.

We notified the police, of course, and had the park searched; but no trace was found of the person who had fired the shots. What we did find was a ladder which had been placed on two chairs under my windows and which had served for the cowardly attempt on my life.

Who had done it? Who was the fiend lurking in the shadows and trying to kill a sleeping woman? I am beginning to suspect, but I cannot tell. I will not tell, because if I should be right in my suspicion, it would be certain death, indeed. A cast-off lover? No, I won't say.

So many dreadful things have happened since that night that I am constantly on edge My nerves are in a terrible condition. I am sure that phantom enemy is somewhere near me all the time.

Two days ago, as I was standing in the wings waiting for my cue to enter, a heavy spotlight fell from a height of fifty feet and crashed right behind me as I made a forward step. It was an accident, of course, so they all said. But was it really?

A memory came to me of a strange occurrence of a few months ago, when a curious individual found his way to my dressing room and had to be ejected by the firemen on duty. The man had entered without knocking just as I was making up my face. My maid happened to be out on an errand.

He was a short, powerfully built individual with long muscular arms hanging down almost to his knees and little squinting eyes under a low forehead. I told him to leave at once, since I was not in a position to receive anybody. But the man snarled.

He looked at the thin drapery that covered my shoulders and make a step toward me. Then I shrieked, of course, at the top of my voice.

Two "pompiers" rushed in and took hold of the intruder who swore and spat at me. They held him and tried to pull him away, but he was stronger than the two combined and shook them off as if they had been so much air. The next moment he was at my shoulder again.

"You will die with less on than that," he hissed and was gone.

They searched the wings and dressing rooms, and even went through the cellars under the stage, but found no trace of the awful man.

Could he be the one who shot through my bedroom window? If so, what had I done to incur his enmity? Or was I the victim of a madman, of a depraved fiend who sought to frighten me into submission to his devilish desires?

No, I cannot believe that. The shots d been fired to kill me and the "acci-ents" which are daily, almost hourly, ccurring to me are proof that my life i in the balance.

Yesterday, on the wall of my dress-ng room, a heavy mirror hung. There i the frame in the corner now. It came own just as I had gotten up from the hair directly under it and the heavy plate glass burst into a dozen frag-ments. I would have been literally guillotined if some mysterious sense of restlessness had not prompted me to rise just at that moment. Can you ex-plain it?

I had practically nothing on when the mirror crashed down as if suddenly unhooked by an unseen hand. If it had not killed me outright, it certainly would have marred my body with ter-rible cuts.

Can my enemy be some one who is jealous of my success, of my youth and shapeliness of body?

Even this morning as I drove from my hotel a wheel came off the car and went rolling into a shop on the Boulevard de Clichy. Upon in-vestigation we found that the wheel had been deliber-ately unscrewed. Some terrible foe is surely trying to kill me.

It was at first suggested that burglars had tried to break into my villa, but that idea was at once dis-missed as an impos-sibility in view of the facts in the hands of the police. No, indeed, there is a mortal enemy waiting for his chance. It is some one who is de-termined to be avenged for some-thing I have done to him unconscious-ly, perhaps. Every-body has enemies in this profession.

Sometimes I think it is a woman who commands the men responsible for all these "accidents" and for the attack upon me in my villa. This is merely a guess, of course, but it would be quite possible if you realize the fearful odds one has to overcome in Paris to maintain one's position as a star. In order to injure a rival, nothing is too mean in the eyes of some women.

I do not accuse any one, nor do I say this is a particularly common oc-currence in the theatrical circles of Paris, for those things may happen anywhere, but a Frenchwoman scorn-ed is worse, I believe, than any other scorned or defeated woman in the world.

It may be that these attacks are engineered to drive me from Paris and that my return to the French stage may be re-sented by some one after my successes in London. But I shall not give up, I as-sure you. It is a despic-able thing to persecute a woman as I am being persecuted, but I'll not be ousted.

...ce the night when two bullets were fired at me as I lay in bed what little sleep I get is haunted by dreadful nightmares. Again and again I awake in a cold tremble of terror, imag-ining that I feel a revolver's muzzle pressing against my temple

I take my pre-cautions and always have some one I can trust at my elbow. Still, the feeling of that unseen danger is always with me. Sometimes when I stand before the audience or bow to the applause with smiles and hand kisses I have a feeling as if two glowing eyes are peer-ing at me from the darkness below and as if in the next moment a shot was going to flash out of that gloom and end this misery of deadly suspense. But nothing happens, thank heaven. Noth-ing except the "little accidents" almost at every turn in my daily routine of life.

I have given up my chateau. I will never live there again and have given it into the hands of the agents for sale. It is such a lovely place. I could do all my sporting exercises there, tennis, rowing, swimming in my own rosewa-ter pool, and rolling about on the lawn.

Ah, yes, that is the way I am keeping fit. It's a sad business, isn't it? Try-ing to keep fit for some hidden enemy to shoot at you from the dark!

My friends in the audience give me an ovation every night. I know that every man in front there is on the qui vive for an attempt against me and that each suspicious individual is being closely scrutinized by the secret police. But my sense of security is gone.

My successes are great and I am thankful to all who nightly acclaim me, but I must have a rest from this sneak-ing phantom, from the deadly thing that lurks in the shadow and is ever near me.

I am afraid day and night, but won't show it. I am tired and unspeakably nervous. But if they shoot me on the stage I shall die game. I shall die in the harness, so to speak, little though there is of it to die in.

THE MAGIC MAN

A Blue

INSTALLMENT X.

—I KNEW that," she said, looking away.

"I felt I'd jarred you, so I've been waiting. I talked with your father that night. He told you about it, no doubt."

"No, he hasn't mentioned it."

"You know what I think of you," he said. "If you hadn't known it before, you must have that day. I said it all then. Can you—care for me, Rose, as I do for you?"

He was leaning nearer, his hands clenched, wanting to snatch her into his arms and crush that fragrant face against his breast. But her eyes were looking through the walls of the little room, fixed on the distances.

"It's such a big thing, Mitch," she said. "One has to be so very, very sure, and—I'm not a bit sure. We've been seeing each other at dinners and dances and house parties, and we've talked and motored and tennised together a lot. And still—still—I can't answer the way you want me to, yet." She turned to him. "What did Rah-rah say when you talked to him?"

"He seemed to think I ought to be earning my living."

She nodded. She had guessed as much.

"I never was brought up to think about making money. It's—it's a dashed tall hurdle."

"Well," she said, after a slight pause, "hurdles are made to jump."

She was looking at him, half smiling, half puzzled. Minute by minute today she had been growing more sensitive to some curious and undefinable undersurface change in him. No realignment of moral molecules can take place in the metal of a soul without some subtle alteration in its owner's guise.

Mitch shrugged, a little sullenly. The same baffled, hedged in feeling he had had during that conversation with Roselius was stealing over him now, to his acute discomfiture. He knew he wasn't showing at his best, but for the life of him he couldn't help it. He lifted his glass and drained air.

"What's the use in bucking a thing like that? Long before I'd be earning anything worth while you'd be honeymooning at Waikiki—with somebody else."

But the warmth had gone from her tone. His had not been the answer she had expected. This was not the Mitch she had known so well—or was it that she had never really known him?

He looked at her, frowning, conscious of some subtle change in her manner that was beyond his analysis. "There's no other man, is there?"

"No," she answered.

A clock chimed. She rose slowly and held out her hand.

"Good-bye, Mitch," she said. "I must go back to my work."

He watched her go glumly and poured himself another three fingers before he went out to the hall.

* * * *

Canuck sat in a big wicker rocker, kimono and sandals, looking out of the open window. It was a breezy afternoon, with cloud wisps far and high, mares' tails, graying the blue and gold of sky and sunlight.

He was looking down on a tree-shaded tennis court with a marquee where sat a half dozen young people, sunshiny girls and young men, bareheaded and sweatered, furnishing hilarious applause for Rose and a flanneled opponent who whacked at each other across the net. Now and then faces turned to look up at the pale blob his own furnished in the shadowed ablong of window and once Rose waved her racquet at him and he waved back.

A good, fast game! And she could certainly play it! His eyes sparkled as he watched the lithe swing of her young body in its blue sport skirt and blouse open at the throat. He wondered whether he had ever played it—if he had, the know how would come back to him as soon as he tried. He felt an itch to be down there, dancing about on his toes and swiping at the little white ball. A hard, lean look was growing in his face now, he ate with a healthy appetite, and slept each night almost a full circle of the clock.

The game ended, the players melted away, and he picked up the book that lay open on his knee. It was Maeterlinck's "My Dog." Rose had been reading it to him.

Dull stuff, it had seemed at first, not a story at all—even the cover had no bright colors or big lettering. Nothing happened, no detectives or escapes or adventures; only a man talking along about a dog. But all at once it had caught him. He had had the sensation of a snuggle and whine against his knee, of something thrust into his hand that was soft and cold and wrinkly, and the lick of a warm, sticky tongue in his palm. Very far away, something like looking through the wrong end of a sypglass, was this sensation. But it had told him things. He knew what the man who wrote that book was talking about. It hadn't seemed dull after that.

But somehow it was more interesting when Rose read it to him, and after a little he laid the volume aside and sat thinking.

He leaned forward in his chair and looked out through a break in the foliage, across gray water, sprinkled with drifting specks of black and dun. Far away were lofty smoke shadowed outlines. The prospect of leaving, however, alone—and lost—he felt, gave him a peculiar sinking feeling. Leaving meant leaving her!

Canuck straightened his body and stretched out his muscular arms.

"I don't want to go!" he said. "And that's no maybe, either. Damn it, I don't!"

As if in answer to his thought, a knock came at the door. The handle turned and Rose entered. She had donned her white linen again, and the organdie fillet lay like a band of snow against her hair. Her face was still flushed with the exercise.

"Saw you watching us," she said, glowing. "It was priceless. I love to win."

"Who were the others? Nurses and doctors?"

"No-o-o. Just friends of mine."

"Does the hospital let them come here to play? That's great!"

"When you're well enough you'll have to take a hand."

He shook his head. "Guess I'll never have the chance."

"Why do you say that?"

"O' I don't know. What's it matter?"

"What does what matter?"

"Anything."

She came close. "You've been trying to remember again. How silly—when you've only to wait!"

"The doc hasn't got me fooled any!" he said, with apparent irrelevance.

"In what way?"

"He doesn't know himself who I am. None of them do."

"O, is that what you've been thinking?" she cried.

"It's so, isn't it?"

"Surely not! I'm certain Mr. Roselius knows all about you."

"Honest to God?"

"Why, of course he does."

"Do you, too?"

"I know a little."

"Have I got any—any folks?" There was appeal in Canuck's face.

"Why haven't they been here?'"

"Maybe they have, and the doctor hasn't told you."

A pause.

"I'd been thinking what if I—hadn't anybody, or any—any place to 'light. Sort of a lost dog feeling, you know. It gives me the willies. Do you ever get 'em?"

"Not very often," she told him. "But when it does happen, do you know what I do? I've got a room with all my little child toys in it. I simply make a dive for it and flop down on the floor and imagine I've slipped back to about seven, when there weren't any such things as problems and everything was fun. When you get blue why don't you try fancying you're still a youngster?"

He had thrown an arm up over his eyes.

"I—can't remember that I ever was a kid," he said, in a muffled voice.

For once Rose had no answer. She stood silent, angry with herself for forgetting, and feeling the anger flooded with a surge of compassion.

As she went down the corridor she was struggling with a curious sense of unreality. It was requiring every day more and more of a mental effort for her to realize that the man she had just left was the desperate criminal she had shot down ten days ago in the act of burglary.

* * * *

Florian came into the Lib-Lab with snapping eyes and mustachios twitching with agitation. "Charles! Charles!" he exclaimed. "Something outrageous has happened!"

Roselius finished jotting down a temperature record (it was Saturday afternoon and the staff were gone) and slammed to the door of the electric furnace before he said:

"Yes, yes, Prosper. What it is?"

"I've been robbed!"

"So?"

"Some one has rifled my room." He snatched up the telephone from Roselius' desk.

But the latter put forth a detaining hand. "Here! What are you going to do?"

"Obviously, call the police. It's that cursed vaurien of yours! He's not in his room—I've been to look. The first day he has on his clothes he takes his leave—with whatever he can put his hands on! Just as I told you, with your silly quixotic theories."

"I never saw such a man for the police!" exclaimed Roselius. "Prosper, you have a suspicious mind. Put that phone down! It's my phone."

"But, I tell you, Charles, it's happened in the last two hours! He can't have got far. How upsetting! And when our ship sails at 3 o'clock!"

Roselius put his huge hands on the surgeon's protesting shoulders and pushed the dapper, excited figure into a chair.

"Sit down," he rumbled. "Did you look in his bathroom?"

"No."

"Well, why didn't you? That's probably where he is. He's dressing. I only sent his clothes to him half an hour ago. Now, then, what's missing?"

"Clothes—jewelry—heaven knows what else!"

"How did you find it out?"

"When Helene went to lock my trunks, just now, she found the things gone. She keeps a list."

"Yes," said Roselius, moodily, "she would."

"Two suits, six shirts," said Florian, ticking the items off on his fingers, "four suits of underwear, handkerchiefs, cuff links, and a pocketbook with gold initials."

"How much money was in the pocketbook?"

"It was empty. An old one that I don't carry any more."

"And the clothes. New?"

"No; strangely enough, they were old ones."

"H-m! Were the cuff links very valuable?"

"No, but—confound it, Charles, what has that to do with it? A man doesn't relish being robbed!"

Roselius grinned portentously.

"That's true, Prosper," he said, "but the thing was done so hurriedly—really an inspiration, you know. And I didn't have a chance to tell you, with Helene buzzing round."

Florian's eyes bulged.

"You hadn't time!" he exclaimed. "Mon Dieu! It was you who stole them?"

"It was," said Roselius, in a tone that implied "and what the devil are you going to do about it?"

"For what?"

"I need 'em for that quixotic theory of mine that you just referred to so tenderly."

"That jailbird—my clothes for him!"

"But Prosper!" said Roselius sweetly. "You see, I discovered that you and he are near enough the same size. That isn't my fault, is it? He couldn't wear my clothes. You wouldn't expect that of him!"

"Your fault? Your fault! Name of a name!" Florian appealed to heaven. "He has to have my clothes because they fit him!" He turned out his hands. "O, very well," he said, resignedly. "Take them. Only I wish I had known. Helene——"

But the baroness at this juncture appeared, to speak for herself.

"Prosper, Prosper!" she cried. "It's worse than I thought. The thief has taken your watch. The old one with the monogram."

"Helene," said Roselius, "I took a sudden fancy to that timepiece and I made Prosper give it to me. But I'm going to send him one next Christmas to take its place that'll lay it over any watch in Brussels."

"O, Roselius," she said, "you are so kind-hearted; That's just your nice way of making up for the stolen things. But, really, I am desolated that your experiment has to turn out badly! I was so intrigued by it!"

"Helene!" Florian spoke quickly. "We jumped too quickly to conclusions. Here is your robber." He pointed to Roselius. "Charles 'needed' all those things for his precious project!"

"Then it was you, Charles! Prosper, you'll be cross, I know, but I'm glad it wasn't that young housebreaker, all the same. Yes, I am!"

She looked at Roselius thoughtfully. "I see. He must have clothes—worn ones, that he will think he wore before. To be sure! And you will have to give him a past, Roselius—ah, there is a task for even your ingenuity! I wager you've been lying awake nights inventing history for him. Haven't you? Certainly you have."

She sat down on the davenport. "You shall tell us, Roselius. I'm perishing to hear it."

"Good!" said Roselius. "I will." He turned to the doctor.

"Somebody once said he'd have liked to see George Washington when he was about to become the father of his country. Prosper, you also are in what is familiarly known as an interesting condition. You are about to become an uncle."

Ribbon Serial By Hallie Erminie Rives

"Don't be ridiculous, Charles!" said the surgeon, glowering. "What on earth are you driving at?"

"Your nephew, Prosper, who was killed in the war."

Florian started. "My nephew! My God!"

"What could be more natural? Our patient speaks French—it was that that made me think of it. He's about the age your nephew should have been if he had lived. And wasn't I going to bring Pierre here to America to be my assistant when the war broke out? Ah, you see now why I wanted the watch and the cuff links and the pocketbook. They have your initials. His name, Pierre Florian, has the same letters as yours."

"Nom de nom de bon Dieu de sort!" Florian exploded. "Give this rogue my dead nephew's name? The suggestion is an affront to his memory!"

"Don't niggle over an empty name!" said Roselius. "How can it embarrass you? You're off for Europe today. Sit down. Be calm and listen."

"I won't sit down! You can't mean it!"

"Why shouldn't I?" Roselius roared. "I'll make him a nephew any one should be proud of if I have half a chance."

"A thief—a common criminal! It's desecration!"

"Ho!" Roselius was snarling now. "You won't help me because you're afraid I'll succeed and show you up for the thundering blockhead you are! You hate to be proved wrong! I'd as lief be a thief as a fatuous pedant with a cotton batten soul!"

"He'll never be anything but a thief."

"How do you know?"

"My common sense and experience tell me so."

"Common nonsense! You believe a thief is born so. Rot! He's made one by circumstances—blind, stupid circumstances—and kept one by environment. Those two things no longer control this man. How can they? He has forgotten all the circumstances and associations that went to his making. He has at this moment no environment whatever except what we have created for him in these past few days. He'll no longer have an incentive to thievery. He'll have blood and family name, self-respect; friends and position and a reasonable amount of money. It'll pull at him as surely as the pull of matter, the stress and strain of gravitation. He'll live up to it because he'll have a desire to. In six months you won't know him."

"I won't want to," said Florian with asperity. "My nephew's name, indeed!"

"Only till he gets his feet out of the quicksand, Prosper! I want to give him a real history to grow up to. When his memory comes back—you said it would?"

"Probably it will," frowned Florian. "Maybe naturally, maybe as the result of a mental or even a physical shock, after the brain lesion has healed."

"Good!" Roselius clutched his arm. "When it does, he'll know himself. If it doesn't and the necessity arises, I'll tell him—when the time comes. But till then he'll have his chance."

"You can't make an honest man out of lies!" expostulated the surgeon.

"There are blessed lies as well as damned lies," cried Roselius. "There's nothing in life that's all truth or all untruth—they are the ultimate white and black, but life is made up of grays. Have you, as a surgeon, never learned the compassion and kindness of a lie? A lie may save where the truth destroys like a searing acid!"

"That may be," retorted Florian, "but I'll not have your jailbird masquerading as my own blood!"

Roselius opened his mouth to reply, but with a sudden gesture closed it like a trap, and with one hand nursing an elbow and the fingers of the other knotted in his beard, strode up and down a moment in silence. Then he halted and put his big hand on Florian's shoulder.

"Old friend," he said, "I want to do this thing. The Great Planner has delivered this soiled and empty life into my hands, and He is saying to me, 'Fill it!' And so I will—with truth and trust and self-respect. You tell me it's impossible? I say it's only when we try to do the impossible that we're like God!"

In the pause the baroness spoke; her voice was oddly altered:

"Prosper, the good God knows—though you don't believe in Him, Prosper, I do!—whether Roselius is right or wrong. It wouldn't hurt that poor dead boy in Flanders any, after all, would it?"

The surgeon shrugged away the hand from his shoulder.

"So you've gone crazy, too, have you, Helene!" he fumed. "Rubbish, Roselius! By character and instinct the man upstairs is a crook, and a crook he'll remain. Whenever you want convincing, leave him alone with the door open and something worth stealing in sight and you'll see!"

Roselius turned on him. "Will you abide by such a test?"

"What do you mean?"

"We'll try that out. If I'm right, will you agree that he shall be Pierre Florian for a year?"

"No time to test things, when we're leaving within the hour," Florian said, irritably.

Roselius went to his desk, unlocked a drawer, and took from its satin-lined box the rope of pearls which he had shown them there once before, gleaming and lustrous. He snapped its string and tossed it on the rug before the fireplace, where it lay lambent and iridescent, a beaded coil of loveliness. He drew wide a panel of the great window, through which could be seen the drive and the open gate with the lodge beside it, and the highway beyond. He opened the door of the servants' staircase. Lastly he brought from somewhere a cloth cap and laid it on the table.

Then he said, "When he's dressed Petersen is to show him the way down here. We'll come back after a while."

The three stood looking at one another a long moment. Roselius' brows were gathered in an anxious frown.

"I may be wrong," he said, musingly. "Perhaps I haven't given enough weight to the damnable force of mental habit, the result of impressions and influences repeated over and over till they acquire a quality of the compulsory. Perhaps I'm just an old fool, Prosper, and I'm letting you dish my experiment."

He took a step toward the pearls on the floor, as if minded to snatch them up, but in the moment there came a raucous squawk from the peacock on the lawn outside—like the cackle of a malicious goblin—and he left them lying there.

They went slowly down the stairs to the lower hall.

"Well, Helene," said Florian, satirically, "which are you backing? Roselius or me?"

She shook her head.

But Roselius answered: "Me, of course. For I'm on the side of the angels."

* * * *

Wrenn spread the armful of clothing he had brought with meticulous precision on the bed.

"When you are dressed, sir, Mr. Roselius will be glad if you will come to his room."

"Bully!" said Canuck. "Where is it? This hospital seems to be the devil of a big place."

"The last door, at the end of this corridor, sir. It opens onto a gallery. You go down the staircase and there you are, sir."

Wrenn departed and Canuck turned to the garments on the counterpane—underclothing, soft shirt and collar, and a brown sack suit, with tie and socks that matched the border of the handkerchief peeping from the breast pocket of the coat. Funny that one could know all the little everyday things—how to put on clothes, for instance, and the way the buttons went—how to eat and talk—and yet have forgotten every blessed thing he'd ever been or done in his life!

A sudden thought darted to him. The pockets! With a gulp he threw himself on the clothes and went through them, once, twice. But they yielded not a single scrap of paper. Nothing that told him what he wanted to know. Only a watch, a half-dozen silver coins, and a paper of cigarettes—Les Fleurs d' Autome—half emptied. The coins were French and Belgian. French coins, French cigarettes, and he knew French!

He frowned and picked up the watch. It was a hunting case and bore an engraved monogram, the letters P. F. intertwined. He caught the gleam of a cuff link in the silk shirt and examined it. It carried the same initials. There were letters, too, in the corner of the handkerchief. He drew it from its pocket and shook it out—P. F. embroidered in white, in a neat lozenge.

Were they the initials of his name? He ran over in his mind all the Christian names he could think of beginning with P., but not one carried the slightest tang of familiarity.

He dressed slowly and, fully arrayed, contemplated himself in the mirror. The suit, like the shoes, was a fair if a somewhat generous fit—evidently he had fallen off a bit while he was sick—but these imperfections were too slight to mar the effect.

"Hello, P. F., you poor fish!" he muttered, to the reflected image with the bandaged head. "You're looking fine, whoever the hell you are!" He grinned at himself. "Some rags! I like my taste. Classy? Believe me!"

He lighted one of the cigarettes and exhaled the smoke with satisfaction.

"Well," he said. "Let's strut our stuff and see what's coming to us."

He went out to the hall and along the corridor to the last door at the end. An instant later he stood on the gallery of the Lib-Lab, breathing quickly, looking down on the great room, with the sun pouring through the mullioned window on its wealth of color and beauty.

Canuck's first impression was that he had somehow strayed into a theater and was looking down on a stage setting. Stage palaces were the only things he had ever seen that looked a bit like it. A hospital! Not the kind that he knew anything about. Perhaps there were hospitals like this, though, where only millionaires went. Maybe some rich gink had laid him out with his automobile and had sent him here. All at once he chuckled. Wouldn't it be a good one if he turned out to be a rich gink himself, with strings of beans and everything!

"Ha-ha!" he muttered, hollowly. "That's a pip!" and went slowly down the stairway.

As the room opened and broadened and towered about him, its beauty pierced him with the spear points of unremembered desires. He stopped at the turn and looked up at the lapis-lazuli ceiling, with its black cross bars of oak, the dull gold Gothic luster hanging by its heavy chain from its center, at the tinted window, wide open now, to the outside air that was gently waving its long blue curtains. He did not know even the names of many things he saw, but they roused strange emotions. The starved craving for color that in his babyhood had reached clutching hands for a bright banded tomato can and bits of colored glass hoarded on a grimy window sill, was plucking at him.

He went on down till he stood on the floor, soft with its many hued weaves of Bokhara and Bagdad and Kurdistan. He looked at the murky red door of the electric furnace, the black alembic on its tripod, the desk with its litter of writing, the marble mantel, the paintings.

Canuck stiffened like a pointer. He was looking at a tapestry hanging on the wall beside a long carved table. A curious feeling was stealing over him. He approached it, and presently, as if by some uncanny compulsion, put out his hand and lifted its corner. It disclosed the door of a safe let into the wall.

He started, half fearfully. Something in his brain, like an incomplete insulation, was snapping and crackling and flickering, an odd, jumbled ferment of shadowy images and suggestions was floating somewhere just beyond his grasp. But it frayed away and was gone.

"No," he said. "I thought I had it then, but it dodged me."

The Awakening.

Canuck looked again at the safe. What had made him lift that tapestry? It was almost as if he had known what was there! Something milky-white and radiant caught his eye, lying on the rug almost at his feet—a rope of pearls, with a broken string.

Canuck glanced over his shoulder with a sudden sharp inquiry. A furtive look had slipped to his face. Pearls!

He leaned with a quick motion and picked them up. No phony beads, but pearls—real pearls, as big as poker chips! Probably dropped by a swell dame come to see some other sick man! Worth enough to keep him on Easy street for the rest of his natural life! His eyes leaped to the open window—caught the gleam of the white road beyond the gate. He slipped the necklace into his pocket.

She wouldn't need to nurse sick people any more—the girl whose face was the first thing he looked for in the morning and the last he thought of at night—if she'd come to him. He could get in touch with her, trust him for that! He could give her anything she wanted. He'd be rich!

He threw the cigarette he was smoking into the fireplace; his gaze went through the open door of the servants' stair—up along the gallery. There was no sound or voice or step. He saw the cloth cap on the table and put it on, pulling it well down around the bandage. Then he buttoned his coat snugly and went swiftly to the open window, his eyes measuring the distance to the turf below.

Something clicked in Canuck's head, like a clutch slipping over its cog. He drew a breath that was like a gasp. He'd show them what? Who was it he'd show? Who had laughed at him? His hand went to his head and drew off the cap. He took the pearls from his pocket and looked at them. Not his, now. Steal them? Had he been about to do that? Why?

For a long minute he stood, his brows frowning, strange conflicting impressions racing past his mind into a confused and painful obscurity. The Canuck that had quarreled daily with Denny at Meg's Place, shot craps with the crowd and idled at the pool parlor and the dance hall—the Canuck that had hurled the vengeful half brick that had given Detective Timothy Hoye a longish stretch on sick leave—the Canuck that had hated everything and nearly everybody and despised himself—was staring abashed at the new Canuck of the clean swept mind, cut clear of the clogging weights of memory.

At length he laid cap and pearls on the table, sat down on the davenport and put his bandaged brow in his hands. It was throbbing painfully.

He was sitting thus when Rose came in. She was dressed in a deep blue cape suit edged in silver, with a blue and silver scarf and a dark winged straw hat with a Napoleonic leer. It was the first time he had seen her wearing other than white and his eye kindled at the picture she made.

On her part she was thinking how well the modish suit he wore became him. In the smartly tailored clothes he might have been anything, anybody.

"How well you look!" she said. Then seeing his paleness—

"Has it been too much for you, coming down?"

He shook his head. "I'm all right. My head ached a bit, but it's gone now. Is Mr. Roselius coming here?"

"Yes, I think so. He's probably with Dr. Florian now. The doctor and his sister are sailing for Europe this afternoon."

"I expect he's going to give me the hook," he said.

"Why do you think that?"

"I'm almost well, and hospitals aren't for well people." He looked at her eagerly. "Say! I don't know your whole name, or where you live, or anything. Won't you tell me? For I want to see you again."

"You will," she said.

"But if——." He broke off as the door opened, and Roselius and Florian came in.

"Ha!" Roselius' exclamation was explosive. "You're here, eh?" His darting eye caught the gleam of the pearls on the table, and he picked them up and shook them, with malicious triumph, under the surgeon's aquiline nose. "What did I tell you, Prosper? I knew I'd mislaid them somewhere."

"I found them on the floor," said Canuck.

"Actually!" smiled Roselius. "I'm getting abominably careless in my old age. And I won't tell you what you're getting, Prosper!" He put the rope in his pocket. "Well, how does your patient look? Is he able now to hear all about himself?"

Florian twitched his eyebrows and his gold pince-nez dropped to the end of their ribbon tether. He went to a chair and sat down.

"Go ahead," he said.

Court Cards

down and, when it was almost abreast of me, came to rest. Very civilly its driver inquired if I needed his help. I thanked him and told him no. As we were speaking another car passed between us, going my way. It's driver slowed down in order to make the passage, but did not stop, and I remember mentally contrasting his manner with the courtesy of the first. Then I reentered my car and went my way.

Four hours later, after a weary vigil in long wet grass at the end of the second drive, my patience was at length rewarded. A girl approached from the stables and opened the old iron gates. As she did so an engine started, back in the stable yard.

The girl passed into the lane and I heard the car enter the drive. Mercifully the moon was hidden, and at once I moved to the gate. The car approached, but its driver appeared to be awaiting some sign.

Then a torch flashed from the lane. Instantly the car slid forward, and as it turned out of the gateway I swept my paint brush across the big flat cap of its off hind wheel.

And there our run of luck came to an end, for the next morning my lieutenant reported that the car had been unladen in the open behind a barn, and that, while one smuggler kept strict watch, the moon had lighted the business from first to last, so that to come any nearer than twenty-five yards had been out of the question.

This was a bad failure, but though I had not much hope I determined to wait at Rouen and see if the depot was closed. It was just possible that the meaning of the paint on the wheel cap, though this was bound to be noticed, might not be understood, and that if we bided our time we might have another chance.

So I issued my orders accordingly and went to bed.

* * * *

On the following day I had just emerged from the cathedral, where for want of something better to do I had been observing the tombs, when I noticed some confusion where a street ran into the square.

The horse of a cart was jibbing and, since the French are vile horse masters and there was traffic to spare, he was likely to do some damage before he had recovered his wits. Indeed, as I came up the cart was within a hand's breadth of a big black car which was standing unattended in front of a shop.

To save a collision was impossible, but I managed to quiet the poor animal before the cart had done more than damage a wing. Then the police came up and told me that I was to blame for leaving my car.

"It's not my car," I said, "but whoever owns it has a claim against that man." I pointed to the driver of the horse. "And if you do your duty you'll take his name and address."

At that they shrugged their shoulders and turned away, and I was examining the wing when the wheel cap caught my eye.

Clean across this lay a smear of bright red paint.

I looked up to see Miss Landfall on the pavement beyond.

"Diana!" I cried. "Diana!" And took off my hat.

She regarded me steadily from the farther side of the car. "I see you're a man of your word," she said.

I stared at her.

"What do you mean?"

"You know what I mean."

"I do not know," said I.

She made a gesture of contempt.

"You made me a promise," she said.

"Which I have most faithfully kept."

Her gray eyes narrowed. "On Monday, under pretense of house hunting, you questioned the servants of a place near which I live; two nights ago I passed you in the road a mile or so from my home; this morning I come upon you examining my car."

I put a hand to my head. "Your car?" I said dazedly.

The scorn went out of her eyes and a puzzled look came in. "Didn't you know it was mine?"

With my eyes on the smear of red paint, "No," I said slowly. "I did not know it was yours." Then I returned to her and for a long moment we looked each other in the eyes.

Then, "Why are you here?" she said.

I took off my wrist watch and passed it, face uppermost, across the car. For a moment she stared at it. Then she put out her hand. She looked at the face of the watch and then at me.

"Turn it over," said I.

On the back, well done in enamel, was the king of spades.

I thought she would never look up. When she did she was very pale.

"I understand," she said quietly. "And then, "And I beg your pardon."

I bowed, and the wrist watch passed.

"Will you give me a lift?" I said.

"As you please."

I entered the car and she took her seat at the wheel.

"To the police station?" she said, with half a laugh.

"No," said I. "To the hotel where I sat you down. If you will allow me, I should like to give you lunch."

* * * *

"You will understand, Diana, three very important things. The first is that I am responsible to no man, and that whether I call in the police or do not call them in is entirely my affair. I am in receipt of no pay and under no obligation. Secondly, whatever the result of this interview, your depot is going to close. Thirdly, you are free to get up from this table and go your way."

"Thank you," she said. "Go on."

"I take it," I said, "that the cat is out of the bag."

"What do you mean?"

"I assume that you sent me away because you didn't wish me to know how you were engaged."

She nodded.

"I suppose so," she said wearily. "When we met I was going to Lyons to pick up some stuff."

"Why are you doing this?"

She shrugged her shoulders.

"My two brothers and I have got to live. We were bred to be rich, but our father married again, and when he died we were left. They tried to get work in England for eighteen months, and then I sold my jewels and we got started running silk. I'm not defending myself; I'm stating facts."

"Did you think I'd think less of you, Diana, if I knew the truth?"

"I didn't think of you at all," said Diana. "But I didn't want any odd stranger to know my job."

"Naturally enough," said I, and fell to eating.

For the rest of the meal we spoke hardly at all.

Coffee was brought us in the lounge.

"How old are your brothers?" I said.

"Thirty and thirty-two."

I frowned. "England's no place for men of their age," said I. "And France is worse." I picked up a sheet of paper and wrote down George Lustre's name and his city address. "If they go to him," I continued, "one week from today and tell him they've closed your depot, he'll talk to them about Rhodesia and offer them two thousand apiece for the next five years. By that time they should have made good; and, if they feel they must, in another five years they can begin to pay him back."

For a while she looked at the paper.

Then, "Why are you doing this?"

"Because I love you," I said. Then I called a waiter and paid my bill. When this was over I rose. "And now will you excuse me?"

She stood up, nervously twisting the paper in her hands and looking upon the ground.

"On Wednesday night," I said, "when you were closing the gate you kicked me in the face. Today you have done it again. Therefore I place a condition on the offer I have made. I shall remain in Rouen until I hear from Lustre that the depot is closed, but if during that time, or at any time hereafter, you make any attempt to find me, the payments to be made to your brothers will instantly cease."

In silence we left the hotel and I put her into the car.

Then I lifted my hat and walked away.

* * * *

Ten days had gone by before George Lustre wrote:

. . . "Two excellent fellows, the Landfalls. As you surmised, they've not the faintest idea who their benefactor may be. Indeed, they said quite frankly that they didn't know where they stood and were simply doing blindly as they had been told.

"But it seems there's a hitch. They said a condition was imposed—not the closing of the depot—and that, unless this condition was lifted, they couldn't go on. I asked what it was, but they knew no more than I. Well! I don't know what they mean, but perhaps you do. If you do, I wish you'd instruct me fully and not hold something back. It makes a man look such a fool." . . .

I drove to the chateau.

At the lodge the caretakers met me to say that Miss Landfall hoped I would go to the second gate.

As I got out Diana stepped down the drive.

It was a magnificent morning, full of hoarfrost. She was all rosy and glowing and her eyes were like gray stars. For a moment we looked at each other, with the old iron gate in between.

Then, "Why did you send for me?" I said.

"I did not send for you."

"In effect you did."

She did not answer me, but opened the gate.

"Why did you send for me, Diana?"

"Must I answer that question?"

"Yes."

She raised her beautiful head and looked at the sky.

"Because I love you," she whispered.

They Thought I Was Bluffing

—When I Told Them I Learned Music Without a Teacher

YOU could have heard a pin drop in the room! I had just finished playing Rubinstein's "Melody in F." My friends were actually dumbfounded—they couldn't believe their ears. At last I was the center of attraction instead of a mere onlooker! It was just a dream come true!

"Why, you didn't know a single thing about music not so long ago, Bob."—"How in the world did you ever do it?" A note of half envy, half admiration unconsciously crept into their voices after they had recovered from the unexpected surprise which I had just furnished. "Yes," said Jim, "what sort of a trick have you played on us—I thought you weren't musically inclined." "Oh, he's been taking lessons for years and has kept it a secret" — followed Betty and Sue in rapid-fire succession. "You can't fool us though, you never learned to play that well without a teacher."

"Well, you're all wrong—every one of you," I replied, chuckling with glee. "I'll admit that a short time ago I didn't know one note of music from another. And as far as special talent goes — well, I never had any. And although I had always longed to be able to play the piano it was more or less of an empty dream. For I just couldn't stand the thought of learning music from a teacher and going through a lot of monotonous scales and exercises. It just went against my grain.

"So I've just contented myself with sitting around envying others who could play—watching them have all the fun. Until one night I was reading a popular magazine and suddenly an announcement caught my eye. It told of a new, easy method of quickly learning music—right in your own home—and without a teacher. At first I laughed, like you folks. I thought that such a thing was a joke. Somehow or other I didn't believe it was possible to learn music by mail. But that announcement set me wondering. So I decided that the only sensible thing to do was to investigate. And —well you know the rest."

* * * *

From the very beginning I was enthusiastic about my wonderful course in music. Each new lesson was better and easier than the last. Everything about them was so simple that a child of eight could understand it. It was great fun—actually as fascinating as learning a new game. And I always played real notes and catchy tunes. No tricks, puzzles or makeshifts of any kind.

* * * *

Now I can play any piece of music, whether it's a ballad, jazz or classical number. And I never have to refuse when I'm called upon to entertain. No more lonely nights for me. Now my life is just a joyous round of gay parties and admiring friends.

Play Any Instrument

FOR THE HONOR OF LAKEVIEW

Another Bob Manley Story

BY JACK GIHON

INSTALLMENT I.

[illegible]rom the little square window of [illegible] basement, each afternoon, Bob [illegible]anley could see a steady stream of [illegible]eet marching in the direction of Hurley gymnasium. He could see no more than the feet, but as the days wore on, he began to recognize them. Those lithe, dancing feet belonged to Steve Waters, last year's grid captain and now star forward of Lakeview academy's basketball team. Those big feet, surmounted by long, lanky legs, represented "Bub" Lincoln, center on the basketball team. Tho[illegible] two pairs, always together, belonged to James and Henry Watson, better known as "Nip" and "Tuck" Watson, who were as fine a pair of guards as a prep team ever had. Then there were a dozen others, who did not count so much—good, dependable basketball timber, perhaps, but lacking those stellar qualities which go to make a winning team.

It seemed like a prison to Bob—this basement from whose window he could watch the feet tramping by.

It seemed like a prison to Bob—this basement from whose window he could watch the feet tramping by. It was a prison, and before him was his jailer—the big furnace that supplied heat for the whole of Lakeview academy. Bob, since returning to school from the Christmas holidays, had been acting as fireman.

When Bob had gone home for Christmas, his father had met him with a serious expression. "I'm sorry to give you this kind of Christmas present," he had said, "but I'm afraid we can't afford to send you back to Lakeview, son."

"But suppose I could work my way through—could I go back then, dad?"

"Nothing would tickle me more. But——"

"But, nothing, dad. I know good and well I can find work. You just leave it to me."

So Bob had gotten this job. "We'd like to have you here, Bob, and you needn't worry about the expense—nor work, either," the dean said. But Bob shook his head. "It's not charity I'm looking for, sir," he said. "I want to work my way through."

Bob was made fireman, and from the day he took charge of the boilers, nobody had to complain about lack of heat. But it did seem like a prison, particularly since there was a vacancy on the basketball team, and Bob knew he could fill it. "Nip" and "Tuck" Watson were great guards. "Bub" Lincoln was a fine center. There was no better forward anywhere than Steve Waters. But who was to work with Waters—who was to be the other forward? Not only Coach Rickey Dale was worried, but the entire school, as well. Lakeview had a championship team—if only that one position could be filled satisfactorily. that can play that other forward."

"There's only one boy in the school Dale told "Uncle Joe" Thomas, the trainer, "and that's Bob Manley. And he can't play because he's working. The school would be glad to finance him, but the kid's too proud for that."

"And right he is," said "Uncle Joe," and he shook his head. "But I'm a-wishin' with ye that we c'd put him on th' team. They say Blenton's a terror this year."

That was putting it mildly. The athletic rivalry between Lakeview and Blenton was traditional. Lakeview, due to Bob Manley's last minute plunge, had defeated Blenton at football. Now, according to report, the rival school was determined to find revenge at basketball. Blenton was said to have the greatest team in its history.

"With Bob Manley at forward," Coach Dale repeated, "nobody could touch us." It was an idle wish. Bob was in a veritable prison. Yet he was hardening his muscles in the art of shoveling coal.

The basement containing the school furnaces was under the building known as Oakes hall. A sidewalk skirted around it, and cut across the lawn to the side entrance of Hurley gymnasium. It was this sidewalk that the basketball quad traversed every afternoon, to be seen by Bob through his basement window.

One afternoon Bob hurried from his last class to his furnaces, and was just starting to fire them when he heard the sound of footsteps on the walk outside. There went the basketball squad, and he stopped his work a moment, his eyes following their feet longingly. A born athlete, glorying in the thrill of victory, it was real sacrifice for him to be denied his place on the team.

A few minutes later there were more footsteps—these also going to the direction of the gymnasium. This time it was just one person, and Bob recognized, from the carefully brushed shoes, the gray spats that topped them, and the fine texture of the trousers, that "Dude" Rimley was passing. The sight was so unusual that Bob left his furnace and went to the window, where by craning his neck, he could get a full view of Rimley. "Wonder what he's doing—is he going to try for the team?" Bob asked himself. But that seemed improbable. "Dude" Rimley looked down on athletics—perhaps because Bob Manley had been so prominent in them at Lakeview. He did not like Bob.

"Dude" made his way to the gymnasium, and went in the side door. That made it evident that he was going to try for the team, for during workouts, none was allowed in the gymnasium except members of the squad. But just as Bob, who had been watching curiously, started to go back to his furnace, still another pair of feet came by. This time, Bob was indeed puzzled. For the newest arrival to pass before Bob's range of vision was a young man he had never seen before.

Now there is nothing ordinarily remarkable in a stranger's walk across the campus of a boys' school. But there was such an air of stealth about this young man, he looked behind him so often, and seemed so uncertain of his movements, that Bob continued to watch him. The stranger reached the side door of the gym, looked around again as though to see whether he were observed, and finally ducked inside.

Something told Bob that it was time for action. So he closed the draft doors of the furnace, and made his way after "Dude" Rimley and after the stranger, across the campus and into the side door of the gymnasium.

This side door opened into the dressing rooms, while immediately beyond was the big gymnasium. As Bob came into the room, he saw "Dude" Rimley and the stranger, standing close to the door leading into the gym, and apparently in deep conversation.

"Hello," said Bob, and the two looked up suddenly.

Then a most surprising thing happened. Instead of answering his greeting, they turned and bolted through another door—one that led through an aisle to the tank and to the main entrance of the gym building.

It all happened so suddenly that Bob stood still, his mouth open. He was just about to pursue them, and find out the meaning for their strange conduct, when he heard a voice behind him.

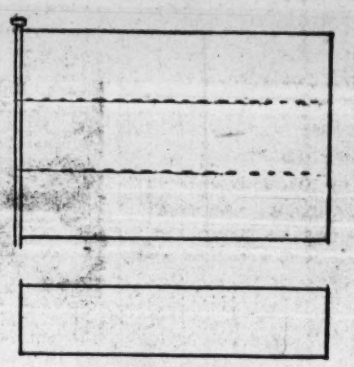

"Hello, lad," said the voice, "an' what are ye doing here?" It was "Uncle Joe" Thomas, the trainer, and Bob started to tell him of the queer behavior of "Dude" and the stranger. But he thought better of it, and instead, decided to do a little investigating on his own account.

"Hello, 'Uncle Joe,'" he said instead. "I just wanted to see how the team was getting along. You'll forgive me, won't you?"

The trainer winked an eye and grinned. "I'm wishin' ye could be a member o' that team," he answered.

Famous Monuments Roman Aqueduct By Hendrik Van Loon

Color Instructions

The crumbling bricks of this ancient monument to the Roman genius for civic administration have been exposed to the hot sun of the Campagna (The plain just outside of the eternal city) for so many hundreds of years that they have assumed a yellow color. A dismal yellow. Not the yellow of buttercups but that of our grass after a long and burning summer.

The road is brown and a dusty brown, and the tree is not much better. There is no one on the road for it is midday and the few people that are abroad at that hour have looked for the shadowy shelter of the old aqueduct.

In the foreground is a bit of gray stone and the fields are to be indicated by lines of light green. As for the sky it ought to be as blue as you can make it. For the Roman sky is blue.

Nowadays that form of decoration has gone rather out of fashion. In painting and sculpture as well as in music we are growing more and more willing to let the dead bury the dead.

And by the way, when you color this picture, remember that you are in excellent company. For the ruins of the Roman aqueducts seem to have made a great impression upon all the foreign artists who flocked to the ancient metropolis during the last four hundred years. No matter whether they specialized in churches or saints, they invariably tried their hand at a new aqueduct and enormous engravings of these vast structures are to be found on the walls of clubs and hotels where it was necessary to cover the too flagrant white of a large wall space with something that should create an impression of serious dignity.

A CLEVER man once wrote a book and tried to predict what would happen if the white races of Europe were ever forced to give up their possessions in Asia and Africa. He came to the conclusion that nothing would remain behind but certain gigantic buildings, formerly devoted to administrative work but now left to the mercies of the hyena and the bat, and a few useless parallel lines of iron rail which indicated where once upon a time there had been a railroad.

At once, a large number of critics arose. "This man," so they said, "is entirely too pessimistic. What of our superior ideas about justice and hygiene? What of our schools and our public enlightenment and our newspapers and everything? Surely they would have made some impression upon the popular mind of the former subjects!"

I don't know. What the past teaches us upon this subject is none too hopeful. Take the case of the Romans. Those savages who had slowly been absorbed by the Roman conquerors; who had made themselves part and parcel of the real Rome until nothing set them apart from their Roman neighbors except the color of their hair and eyes and a name that sounded foreign, these Goths and Vandals continued certain Roman traits long after the downfall of the empire. But in those distant countries where the Roman had been merely the lord and master, he disappeared almost completely and left nary a trace of his spiritual influence.

What he had built however he had built for all time and wherever you travel in Europe and western Asia and northern Africa you come across the well-known red bricks of the Roman masons, transformed neatly and artistically into bridges and town walls and aqueducts.

The aqueducts especially were of great importance. For it takes quite a high degree of civilization to insist upon decent drinking water, and it is only a very short time since our own ancestors gave up their unhealthy wells and their infected town pumps and bestowed some thought upon the problem of the common health. Before that they had drunk anything that looked fairly clean and that tasted more or less like water and if they died of it they blamed Providence.

The Roman population, however, insisted upon good, fresh water and their government went to almost incredible trouble and expense to get that valuable item of their daily bill of fare. In the town of Rome itself the problem was a difficult and serious one. For the far famed river Tiber was only a mean and muddy brook and besides it was the town sewer. Fresh water therefore had to be brought from the distant mountains and had to be carried by aqueducts as lead pipes and bronze ones, although known, were too expensive to be generally used.

The first of those aqueducts were constructed in the fourth century before our era. From then on as the town grew larger and larger more and more aqueducts were added at the rate of one for every fifty years.

Editorial

A GRATEFUL SQUIRREL.

One cold day last fall I was sitting in the living room of my home when I saw a sudden scurry on the ledge outside the window. I looked out, and there sat a little brown squirrel, his bright eyes peering at me through the glass.

I knew that there were squirrels in the trees around the house, but I did not think they would be friendly enough to pay me a visit at my window. So, to show the little fellow that I appreciated his call, I got him a few nut kernels and fed them to him.

Every day since that morning this squirrel has paid a visit to my window. I will hear him clatter along the ledge, and then his claws will scratch at the glass. And almost every day he gets the little nut kernels that he has come to expect.

Human beings are a lot like that squirrel. If you are kind to them, they appreciate it. The squirrel and I are friends, just because I was kind to him that day. And you may win a friend just as faithful by some little deed of kindness today.

States and Provinces Guessing Game

Above is the outline map of a state or a Canadian province. Can you guess which one it is? The answer will be found elsewhere on this page.

Five Man Defense Important Method In Basketball Play

To win basketball games a team must, of course, prevent their opponents from scoring. No haphazard defense is ever successful. A definite system must be adopted so that every man will know when the opponents have the ball.

The five-man defense has proved so superior over all others that it is being used by most leading college teams, and each year brings new converts to the style. It makes every man directly responsible for the man he is playing against. There can be no excuse if a goal is scored. His man made the goal, and he alone is responsible.

Drop Back to Center.

The working of the five-man defense is simple. The moment the opposing team secures possession of the ball every man should drop back to the center of the floor immediately. Do not hesitate an instant, but drop back at once. Then, from this position, look for your man. Of course if he is close to your basket, you go to him and not to the center of the floor.

The team lined up across the center of the floor, each man watches his own man. As the opponent crosses the center of the floor, his man goes with him, always keeping between him and the goal. In this manner every opponent is guarded as he gets within scoring distance.

Wait for Team.

Always wait for him to cross the center of the floor. Never meet him beyond the center. No matter how much they pass the ball, or how long they hold the ball, just stand there and wait until they come to you. This may be varied only if the opposing team is ahead and there are but a few minutes to go. Then you may advance into their territory and try to get the ball so that your team may score. Never wait for them near your own foul line. They are too near your goal by the time you reach them, and a long shot would give them a good chance to score.

However, be sure above all, to keep between them and the basket, because once a man gets ahead of you he cannot be stopped without fouling. So pick your man the minute your team loses the ball and keep so close to him that should he get the ball you could close in on him and prevent him from shooting or passing. In this way the whole opposing team will be guarded and they will not be able to score.

TO THOSE WHO TALK.

To those who talk and talk and talk
This proverb should apeal;
"The steam that blows the whistle
Will never turn the wheel."

ANSWER TO THE ARTIST'S ERROR."

The spokes of the wheels are visible. They should not be, for the cars are going at high speed.

A peach of a girl ought to become a well-preserved woman.

As a rule the orator who uses the biggest words has the least to say.

What the average school boy wants is a history that will repeat itself.

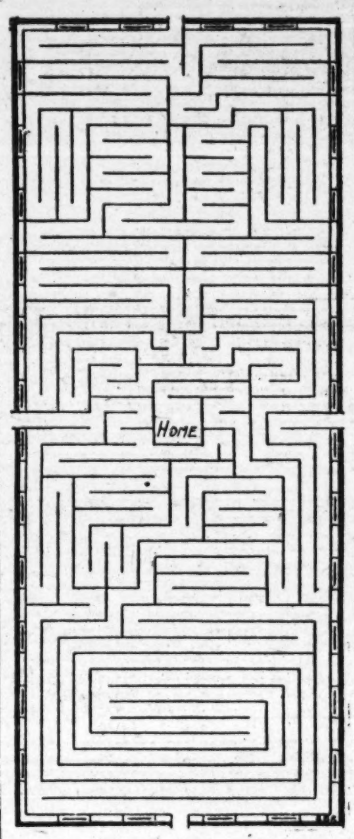

MAZE PUZZLE

Here is a new kind of puzzle for you boys and girls. It is called a "Maze Puzzle," and is built along the lines of some of the famous labyrinths that have existed in various parts of the world.

The idea of the puzzle is to start at the entrance and get to "home" with your pencil. There are all sorts of difficulties in your way, but you must not give up easily. These puzzles are loads of fun.

Several more of them will be published later in this page. Watch for them!

Number 1.

RULES:

Tracing a line with a pencil, start at any one of the four entrances and try to reach "home," returning then to the entrance. Always keep between the lines, and do not cross any of them with your pencil.

Hardtack Is Tough Food for Soldiers

Ever heard the word "hardtack" used in connection with army life? Your stories of fighting men on land and sea no doubt have brought this word to your notice a number of times.

And do you know what "hardtack" is? It is a cracker or biscuit; large, hard and coarse; and has been used in enormous quantities to feed soldiers and sailors in the past.

It is said that during the Spanish-American war, when the United States soldiers were about to be shipped from Tampa to Cuba, two factories in Atlanta supplied the government with 80,000 pounds (1,200,000 pieces) of "hardtack."

Eating this coarse bread might be an experience for some of us; but we wouldn't favor it as a part of our regular fare!

Something to Do

DALE R. VAN HORN

A ROTARY CORN POPPER.

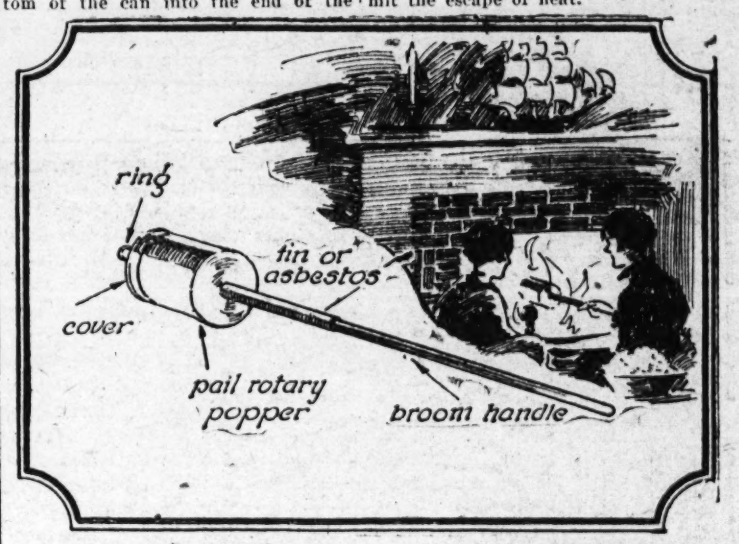

This corn popper will be just the thing for popping corn over the open fireplace during these long winter evenings. A single handle, long enough to keep your hands away from the intense heat, is attached to one end and the portion next to the can is covered with tin or a strip of asbestos to keep it from charring.

The can used should be about 4 inches in diameter and 7 to 8 inches long. A large baking powder can will do, or you can use a half-gallon pail. Make the handle from the handle of an old broom, with one end cut off if it is too long. Cut a sheet of heavy metal just small enough to fit inside the can, then run a screw through both this sheet and the bottom of the can into the end of the broom handle, turning the screw in tightly.

The cover should fit rather loosely so that it can be jerked off in a hurry when the contents are to be emptied. To make emptying easier, you can attach a small wire ring by running the end through two holes in the cover and bending these ends over.

Place a small quantity of popcorn in this can, together with a bit of butter, then hold over the open fire, turning it in your hands as you do so. In a surprisingly short time the corn will be popped to fluffy crispness.

If grease is to be used, punch several small holes in the can to permit the escape of heat.

EASY.

Teacher: "Sammy, give me a sentence containing the word 'anthracite.'"

Sammy (who speaks with a lisp): "We had a big family party latht week and you ought to have heard my aunth rethite."

IN A STEW.

A cook's life is certainly full of interest. Every day he has stirring times.

MAKING IT UP.

"You haven't got the answer to this problem right," said the teacher, at the close of school. "You'll have to stay and do it over."

"How far off is it this time?" asked the boy in despair.

"Well, I've got something awful important to do after school. I'll just pay the difference."

$2 Fine Costs $54.

Cleveland, Ohio.—Hans Dietz, local salesman, spent $52 in railroad fare just to go to New York and be fined $2 in traffic court. Dietz original hearing on a charge of driving without lights was postponed because of illness of the arresting officer. Before he was summoned again, he moved to Cleveland. A former neighbor forwarded the summons and he went back to answer it.

Courage is the thing that enables us to forget our fears.

PROOF ENOUGH.

"Give me three proofs," said the geography teacher to the boy who had been reading detective stories behind his geography book, "that the world is round."

"Well, the book says so, you say so, and ma says so."

Rather than make an effort to reach the top some men prefer to remain at the bottom for the purpose of helping pull others down.

The man who conducts that the world is growing worse always goes around armed with a muck rake.
